The Miles boom has been launched. Democrats who have seen nothing but the Parker boom and the "yellow" boom will please notice the Miles boom, with its medals for bravery, its bath tubs, its cock-sure courage and its imperious bearing.

And the interesting thing about his candidacy is that this gallant old war veteran, who was trained as a fighter, who was a soldier by profession, stands upon a Platform of Peace. He no longer believes in war.

But before we can take the Miles boom seriously we must hear from the sage of Princeton and the oracle of Lincoln. If each knows nothing about the other's indorsement General Miles may get a certificate of approval from both.

Young Man Dies.

John Kilberg, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kilburg, of this city, died at the home of his parents Sunday morning after an illness of over a year with a complication of diseases. Several weeks ago an operation was performed upon his person and one of his limbs was amputated, with the hope that it would result in his ultimate recovery, but his constitution was not rugged enough to withstand the shock and he died after a patient struggle. Deceased was a bright lad and his death so early in life was indeed sad. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Tuesday and the remains were laid at rest in the Catholic cemetery. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the community.

The stockholders of the Red Lake Falls creamery are to be congratulated on securing the services of George L. Austin as manager of the creamery here, as his work for their interests and the interests of the community is already being felt. Mr. Austin has had a great deal of practical experience in the diary business, and instead of merely acting as manager of the creamery, he is giving farmers advice and help in the matter of getting the best results from their cows. As soon as the roads are in shape Mr. Austin expects to personally call upon every farmer within trading distance of Red Lake Falls and lay before them the benefits to be accrued by patronizing the creamery, and it is safe to assert that his work will be productive of much good to the creamery people as well as the farmers. CONSTIPATION

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

The Big Store reports that their Clean Up Sale of last week on Clothing was a big success. They still have a good assortment that you can buy at about half price. All dependable merchandise, too.

A Missouri editor refuses to publish obituary notices of people who, while living, failed to subscribe for his paper, and gives this pointed reason: "people who do not take their home paper are dead anyway, and their mere passing away is of no news value."

Iver Hedland and family arrived from Faribault county the first of the week with his household goods and machinery, and moved on to the Joe Lachance farm in Poplar River township. Mr. Hedland bought the farm adjoining the Lachance place through the Lewis & Higinbotham agency last fall and will farm both places this year.

Thief River Press: Ed. Coenen will next week start a cigar factory, being established for the present in the Olson residence in the northwest part of town. Later he expects to get a better location in the business portion of the town. Ed's cigars are well known here, he having formerly been engaged in business with Oliver Pederson.

The general merchandise stock of B. E. Bearing, at Mentor, was transferred to LaDue & Co., of Fertile, the latter part of last week, consideration $8,000. The new firm has engaged Albert Moreau as manager and with that gentleman in charge the enterprise will undoubtedly enjoy a continuance of the large volume of business formerly conducted.

Crookston Press: Mrs. E. F. Marshall, of Red Lake Falls, has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Stephens this week. She arrived in the city last Wednesday to be present at the party given in the club rooms on Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs Tom Morris, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Newbery and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Brown.

A certain young lady went into Gareeau & Zaiser's store one day last week and asked to see some silk garters. Sam Nauman the popular and obliging head clerk proceeded to show her several pairs, explaining that he had noticed that all the ladies were wearing garters of the brown hue this season. Sam is still wondering why she did not purchase a pair.

Blackduck American: Cash Brunelle went to Bemidji yesterday to meet his bride to be. The wedding was to have taken place yesterday but owing to the temporary absence of Father Murphy the ceremony had to be postponed and will probably take place here within a week. His fiancee is Miss Ida Lizotte, daughter of Anthony Lizotte a well-to-do farmer of Red Lake county.

Crookston Journal: Prof. W. W. Hall, of Grand Forks, has been here the past week making arrangments to improve Breezy Point Villa at Maple Lake. He has purchased a gasolene engine which will be used to pump water to every room in the building and also to feed two or three fountains which he has purchased to adorn his property. When completed he will have an ideal place and one of the most up-to-date summer resorts in the state.

H. Cuno, and old gentleman living near St. Hilaire, was brought before Judge Tarrant the first of the week and committed to the insane hospital at Fergus Falls, Sheriff Linnihan and Ed. Enright taking him there the same day. In the early part of the winter the old fellow started to walk from his place to his son's home north of Thief River Falls, and wandered around in a storm for several days and was so badly frozen that he barely survived. The worry and suffering over his misfortune unbalanced his mind, and it was thought best to send him where he would get good care and be safe.

Mrs. F. A. Whiteley and children left yesterday for Brainerd where they will visit until the close of school, when they will move with the Professor to some point in the northern part of Itasca county, near the claims owned by them. Prof. Whiteley has decided that he will put in a year or two attending to his private business matters before he again engages in school work, and it is possible that he will give it up for all time. He has been very successful in his career as an educator, and the school ranks of the state are losing a valued member. The family will have the best wishes of a legion of friends [illegible] they decide to locate.

The hearing on the Rapp will contest case was held at the probate office last Thursday and on motion of the contestants the case was continued until May 29. The contestants will bring affidavits from numerous California residents to show that during the residence of Mr. Rapp there he introduced the contestant as his wife, among them being former Senator Myren, of Ada, who now resides at Long Beach, Cal. To offset these statements will be evidence that after the arrival home of the couple that they did not live together as man and wife, and the contestant went by her maiden name, and made no pretense of being the wife of Mr. Rapp. The case will no doubt be hard fought, and it is likely that it will ultimately be carried to the higher courts.

Mrs. Fred Krenger is visiting her daughter at Bemidji this week.

Miss May Sorsoliel, of St. Hilaire, was an over-Sunday guest of friends here.

O. F. Post, St. Hilaire's popular merchant, was a caller here Monday on some business matter.

Mrs. Theo LaBissoniere was reported as quite sick the latter part of last week, but is better at the present writing.

George J. Silk, the fellow who don't look as smooth as his name would indicate, was a caller here Tuesday, representing the Crookston Times. George is still happy.

His honor, T. J. Thorkelson, mayor of our sister city St. Hilaire and one of the best all around fellows in the Valley, was a business caller here Tuesday. The Gazette was favored with a pleasant call.

An injunction was issued by Judge Watts last Thursday, at the instigation of Attorney F. A. Grady for Mrs. Fred Kreuger, restraining John A. Duffy from rebuilding the frame building in block seven, within the fire limits, and as a result the work has been held up during the week. Mr. Duffy has engaged Attorney Boughton to represent his side of the case, and the matter will be argued before Judge Watts at Crookston next Monday evening. Both sides are confident of winning, and the public will anxiously await the result.

The council met in regular session at the city hall last Thursday evening and transacted a bunch of business. The only important matter to come up was the question as to whether the permission formerly granted to John A. Duffy to rebuild his frame building within the fire limits of the city should be revoked, and after listening to the arguments presented the council passed a resolution authorizing him to go ahead with the work, as in their opinion the damage to the building did not exceed fifty per cent. Several bills were allowed before the council adjourned.

C. W. Cress, of Lake Pleasant township, will leave the first of the week for Illinois and Iowa points, where he will spend several weeks elucidating upon the merits of Red Lake county, and expects to bring a large number of investors here during the summer. Mr. Cress has made a great success of farming in this county, but owing to poor health is unable to do much of the work this year, and will put in his time in missionary work among his old friends and neighbors in Illinois and Iowa. The Gazette has turned him out some excellent folders during the week, and if first-class literature and convincing arguments will bring the people here, Mr Cress will do a big business.

D. 1904, in proceedings for enforcing payment of taxes and penalties upon real estate in the county of Red Lake. State of Minnesota, remaining delinquent on the first Monday of January, 1904, and of the statutes in such case made and provided, I shall, on the second Monday, being the 9th day, of May, A. Dated at Red Lake Falls this 12th day of April, A. D. 1904.

Dr. Gendron to Leave.

Dr. J. Gendron, who has been one of the leading physicians of this section for several years, announces that he will leave the latter part of this week for Grand Rapids, where he has been given flattering inducements to locate, and will at once enter into the labors of the new field. Dr. Gendron has enjoyed an excellent practice since coming here and the news of his decision to leave naturally came as a surprise to the people of the city. He feels that the new country over east offers better inducements than any place he has visited, and is confident that the move will be one that will greatly benefit him financially. The people of this city are loath to see Mr. and Mrs. Gendron leave us but will all join with the Gazette in wishing them a full measure of success in their new home. We have not learned whether anyone else will take up the practice left by Dr. Gendron.

OLD INDIAN GONE.

Chief Bemidji Seeks the Happy Hunting Grounds.

Chief Bemidji, the friend of the white man and the brave loved and honored alike by both, who has for forty years made his home upon the lonely shores of Lake Bemidji, died yesterday afternoon.

The old chief has been low in health for some weeks but his many friends did not anticipate his death so suddenly. He was 85 years of age and has for forty years been Chief of the Chippewa tribes in the vicinity of Cass Lake. He had five children who are grown to man and womanhood, his daughter being married to M. E Carson of Bemidji who manages the Prentiss grocery store at that place. Many stories and anecdotes of the old chief's life have been related and his experiences in the Indian tribal wars would make a thrilling volume. In a battle between the Chippewas and the Sioux years ago upon the ground now occupied by Cass Lake. The Chippewas under the management of their old chief routed and almost annihilated the entire opposing force of Sioux. Bemidji claimed as a result of the battle the lives of ten Sioux chiefs and had their scalps dangling at his belt when the skirmish ceased. During late years Bemidji has led a quite peaceful life in his lonely cabin upon the shores of Lake Bemidji and was contented and satisfied to lead the life of a retired chieftan. He was a friend of both the white man and the Indian and was consulted by both among those who knew him in regard to important matters. Visitors at Bemidji in summer have considered his camp a place of general interest and were always received by the old chieftan with hearty welcome.

To Help the Dairy Industry.

Manager Austin of the local creamery is endeavoring to get the patrons interested as much as possible in the dairy industry, and to this end is laying the merits of Hoard's Dairyman, the best dairyman's paper printed in the country before them. The following letter to that paper from a reader will be self-explanatory:

I have been greatly interested in watching the effect of Hoard's Dairyman upon the patrons of this creamery. When I first commenced trying to get them to subscribe for it, eight years ago they would not listen to me. I even found that some of them would throw away the sample copies I gave them. They had been accustomed all their life to doing farm work without any idea that they could learn anything useful to them in a paper. It looked ridiculous to them that any body should know any more about cows than they did. They would say: 'I have lived with cows all my life. No editor is going to teach me anything about cows."

But I could see from reading the paper that there was a tremendous right that they did not know concerning the keeping of cows to the highest profit. I could see that their idea about what constitutes a good cow was of a low standard. They were all on the beef order. Out of 100 patrons and herds, I don't think there was a single cow in the lot that would give 5,000 pounds or milk in a year.

Well, I kept at them. I picked out nine of the most intelligent and made them a present of the Dairyman for a year. Seven of the nine subscribed for themselves the next year. Now, I think there are 25 or 30 of them who are taking the paper. There has been a great change in almost everything with those who have read the paper. Where they were receiving $25 to $35 per cow for the entire year, they are now getting $45 to $60. Some men cannot learn from what they read; they have got to see somebody else work it out. But the list of readers is increasing. The young men and boys are asking for the paper. I know of several hired men who take it regularly. Keep up the good work."

We had visitors two days last week.

Miss Lulu Fletcher visited our school last Thursday afternoon.

Graham and Austrid Kindseth were absent last week on account of sickness.

The storm windows and storm shed were taken off of the building, last Saturday.

The first room has received some new seats because they have so many new pupils.

The program was held last Friday but very few people came, it was a good program.

The fifth and sixth grades have begun the study of buds in connection with their drawing.

There have been more absent this week probably because of warm weather and spring work.

Plank sidewalks were built around the school house so there is no excuse for getting muddy feet now.

The Minerva Literary society will give a good program on the 29th of April and a good number should attend,

The fifth and sixth grades are to use the left side of the stair-way now and the third and fourth grades the right hand side.

There has been some pupils changed from Miss Ramsdel's room to Miss Norby's room, to give place for some of the new pupils.

Peter Engh, a Wyandotte Farmer, Wearies of the Hum-Drum of Existence.

Peter Engh, a farmer of Wyandotte township, was found hanging to a limb of a tree back of the barn on his farm last Friday morning by some neighbors, and from all appearance had taken this means of ending the troubles of life without the help of the outside world.

Recent events at his home are said to have been the cause for the terrible deed. Engh was a heavy drinker and Tuesday of last week he returned to his home beastly drunk and being in an ugly mood attacked his wife, beating her until she was nearly insensible, pulling the hair out of her head and finally kicking her out into the yard where she remained for several hours before being able to drag herself back to the house. The neighbors discovered the state of affairs existing at the Engh home and the next day had Engh arrested and brought before Justice Lewis here. After hearing the evidence Mr. Lewis sentenced him to thirty days in jail, but remanded the sentence on the good behavior of the prisoner, and gave him a heart to heart talk on what would be expected of him in the future.

Engh returned to his home and it is supposed that in brooding over his plight he figured that the easiest way to prevent repeating such performance was to end his existence then and there.

Mrs. Engh was in a precarious condition for several days, but it is stated that she will recover from the injuries received at the hands of her brutal husband.

Blackduck American: Lewis Albers deputy state boiler inspector for the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater, Norman and Red Lake was in this city last Saturday and Sunday inspecting boilers. His home is at Red Lake Falls. The saw mill boiler belonging to Fritz Danielson has been reported as unsafe and this was the immediate cause of his visit here at this time.

MORE RAILROAD TALK.

Speculation Indulged in as to What the Great Northern Will Do.

Several of the papers in the adjoining cities (and Thief River Falls) have been building new lines of the Great Northern railway during the past week, and seem to have the thing all figured out.

When the new extension goes north from Thief River, it is expected that some arrangement will have to be made to accommodate the increased business and the train service will of necessity have to be improved. One plan is mentioned that builds a direct line from here to Crookston and all the traffic for the branch run over this stub, while the present line will accommodate the boundary business. This would make a convenient arrangement for the people here, and the stub would open up some new territory for the company, as well as make better train service on the branch.

Another plan proposed by the Thief Riverites is to cut out Red Lake Falls altogether and when we want to go any place or ship any freight we could haul it or ourselves to St. Hilaire by team, the inference being drawn that we don't get any strangers any way and don't need a train.

The plans are yet on paper merely, but we are all hoping that when the Thief River newspapers get the thing fixed they will at least give us a hand car as it would indeed be a calamity to shut us off entirely from that young London on our north.

Will Enforce Strict Rule.

Instructions have been received from H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, to prosecute all physicians who fail to promptly report births and deaths in the future.

It is pointed out by Dr. Bracken that the law requires physicians to make these reports and renders them lialbe to fine in case they neglect to do so. So far as can be learned the reports have come in in such a dilatory manner that they are almost useless as vital statistics.

Reasons given by the state board for enforcing the law to the letter are that a special effort is being made to collect the complete returns on births and deaths from all parts of the state for the next annual report.

THE VIEWERS FILE REPORT

Their Work On Judicial Ditch No. 4 Completed Tuesday Afternoon.

The viewers of Judicial ditch No. 4, Ed. L. Stowe of Hill River, Polk Co., J. Pigeon of Poplar River, Red Lake Co., and Olaf Tande, of Garnes, Red Lake Co., who have been at work since the 6th of April completed their report to Judge Watts Tuesday afternoon, and will presented before 6 o'clock.

According to their rough figures $38,400 in Polk and Red Lake counties are directly affected and assessed for benefits while as much more in those two counties and Norman county are indirectly affected by the proposed ditch which is in Polk and Red Lake counties and empties in the Lost River.

The estimate of Engineer Ralph on the cost of the ditch was $3,064.83 but this did not include an emergency fund. There was a date of hearing set in connection for the recording of objections to the assessments made by any of the property holders affected for May 21, following which the contract for the construction of the ditch will be let. The clerk's notice of hearing on the petition is published in today's Gazette.

Name Watts and Grindeland, Then.

Roseau Region: While it is yet early we would like to suggest that the two judges of the district court be selected because of their fitness for the position and for that reason only. Do not let us mix politics in with the selection of our judges. Let the 14th judicial district set an example to other districts and select men of sterling worth and ability for the honorable position of district judge aside from political affiliations.

Thief River Press: Rev. and Mrs. Herbert W. Knox and little son came up from Red Lake Falls Tuesday to attend the session of the Adams Presbytery held here Wednesday and Thursday. They were the guests of Judge and Mrs. J. M. Bishop during their stay.

TWO YEARS' EXTENTION.

Measure Passed For Final Proofs to Entries by Aliens.

Homesteaders will be interested in a bill that has passed both houses extending the final proof to entries by aliens two years. This bill is H. R. No. 13,009 and reads as follows:

To validate certain original homestead entries and extend the time to make final proofs thereon.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled that in all cases where aliens have heretofore made original homestead entries based upon void declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States made before United States commissioners, such original entries are validated, and the time of such entrymen in which to make final proofs on their entries is hereby extended for a period of two years to enable such entrymen to legally secure final naturalization papers; Provided, that nothing in this act shall be held to affect existing adverse claims to land embraced in such entries.

Sec. 2. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

GREAT PROFIT IN TUBERS.

J. M. Palmer Believes More Attention Should be Paid to Them.

Crookston Times: J. M. Palmer for years a prominent farmer of Angus, now located at Moorhead, who has been in the city for the past few days believes that potatoes would make the most profitable crop that the valley farmer can raise. He says agents have been at Fargo all winter buying up potatoes to ship to Georgia and other southern states for seed, and the supply could not meet the demand. During the coming month the crop raised from the seed shipped from this section will be shipped back here for early potatoes.

The potatoes were sold here for seed at $1 per bushel and the new potatoes are shipped back here for even a better price than that. The reason for sending here for seed is that the tubers will not keep over there for seed on account of the warm climate, the wilted potatoes not producing nearly as fine a crop as the firm and well preserved ones of the North.

Thus he says the traffic will be a raiser here and there a good price for their products every year. He cited several instances where farmers about Glyndon have made independant fortunes from their potatoe crops, one fasmer having sold 127 car loads during the winter and spring.

ASSESSORS MEET TO PREPARE PLANS

County Inscribers of Personal and Real Property Get Together At the Auditor's Office.

Red Lake county assessors are meeting in this city today at the court house for the purpose of planning the year's work and arranging the details of their rating. Auditor Ford has been busy during the past few days arranging and preparing the blank books which will be used and the stationary required for the various forms the assessors have to fill out. In all throughout the county there are at the present time twenty-three assessors who are attending the meeting.

The rating of both personal and real property will be raised considerably this year to comply with the rulings of last year and will have still further boosts attached this spring.

Real property which is assessed only every second year will be appraised and inscribed on the rolls this year. City property goes according to the judgement of the assessor and the selling price of adjoining property, while farming property is divided into seven classes, each one having a distinct valuation and all of the townships in the county being classed. The first class is valued at $5.25 per acre the second, $4.75. the third, $4.25 and each lower grade decreases in value 50 cents per acre.

The assessors will soon begin their work and at the meeting today all subjects of importance to the entire body of men as assessors is being discussed and gone over.

Thief River News: There is a general impression that there will be a great deal of poor seed corn this year. It is a mistake to plant seed corn when any considerable portion of it will fail to grow. Its growing qualities can be easily tested. Take a few kernels from each of several ears and place between two damp woolen cloths. Keep damp and in a warm place near the stove. If the corn will grow you can tell in a few days by this method. Every failure will be easily noticed. Farmers should take extra precaution in testing their seed corn this year.

SEVERAL NEW TOWNSITES.

Red Lake Conty Will Get More Cities.

Several prominent citizens of Thief River Falls, in connection with others interested in the proposed townsite to be located in that portion of the diminished reservation east of Thief River Falls to be opened on July 15th next, met here yesterday and have been in consultation with U. S. land officials and Attorneys N. Campbell and W. E. Rowe with a view of making applications for townsites and obtaining legal advice as to the proper manner of procedure says the Crookston Journal.

It has been impossible to obtain full and complete information as to just the course to be pursued but a Journal man learned that it was proposed first to locate a government townsite of at least 640 acres just across the river and adjoining the present townsite of Thief River Falls, to be named Steenerson and located on sections 26, 27, 34 and 35, town 154 north, range 43 west, and also to secure for Thief River Falls 160 acres for park and cemetery purposes on section 34 south of the Red Lake river in the same town and range.

A second town to be named Wilcox, is to be located on sections 21 and 28 town 153 north, range 40 west on what is known as "highlanding." It is also proposed to locate a third town to be named Smiley on the land now known as "criers" on sections 7 and 18, town 153 north, range 41 west. All the proposed townsites are located on the Red Lake rsver at the present steamboat landings and will afford excellent distributing points for necessary supplies to the population tributary to these locations and have many other points of advantage not possessed by many inland towns.

As settlers on these townsites can, under the law, obtain title to their lots at the minimum price of $10 per lot the promoters contend that thousands of people will be attracted to these locations and in the near future a big boom will be on in earnest.

It was proposed to give the big town to be located adjoining Third River Falls the name of Steenerson in honor of Congressman Steenerson who has done so much to hasten the early opening of these lands to settlement.

The town of Wilcox is to be named after E. S. Wilcox, one of the pioneers of Thief River Falls, who has located more settlers on homestead lands than any other person in the northest.

The third town, Smiley, is named after W. C Smiley the present county surveyor of Red Lake county and who has been one of Thief River Falls' hardest workers and who has labored second to no man in the interest of that city and Red Lake county. Mr. Smiley was cal ed to the city yesterday and met with the townsite people and will have charge of the work of surveying the townsites.

This news will come as a surprise to many who have not known that title could be obtained to these lands for the use and purpose suggested by the parties in interest.

Thief River Falls will also benefit materially by being able to obtain possession of 160 acres of the reservation land for cemetery purposes

CHIPPEWA INDIAN LANDS.

A Large Number of Acres to be Given Away June 15th.

The secretary of the interior has approved the instructions of the committees of geneaal land office providing for the opening of 248,743 acres of land of former Chippewa Indian reservations in Minnesota at 9 a. m June 15, nett. The opening is to actual settlers only, under the provision of the homestead law, except the commutation of provision thereof, with the additional requirement of the payment of $1.25 acre in five equal annual installments. Slightly more than 71,000 acres are located in Cass Lake land district, 128,000 acres in Crookston land district and more than 49,000 acres in Duluth land district. The instructions provide that prior right to enter the lands will not be secured by those settling on the lands before the date of opening.

FIX UPON LATER DATE.

County Fair Will Be Held During Second Week of August.

Thief River Press: The membera of the Red Lake Agricultural Association held a meeting Saturday evening, at which it was decided to postpone the county fair one week, making the new dates August 10th, 11th and 12th. This was done to avoid a conflict of dates with the Winnipeg exposition, which closes Aug. 6th.

The barn on the grounds was sold to A. C. Hanson for $400, payable $200 in cash and $200 in work, which is to be used in making the track a full half mile in length and in putting the whole in good condition.

The association will also ask to be admitted in the Northwestern racing circuit. If this request is granted a great racing program will be the result.

The management will, this summer, build some twenty new box stalls and sheds and will erect a new exhibit hall on the ground made vacant by the removal of the barn.

An exchange says this notice was found posted on the wall of a deserted homestead in the arid regions of Kansas. "Four miles from a neighborhood, sixteen miles from a postoffice. twenty-five miles from a railroad, fourteen miles from a school house, forty-one miles from a church, 190 miles from a timber, 200 miles from a democrat, half a mile from water, quarter of a mile from hell, and the same distance from a republican. Gone to Minnesota, which is the God's country to get a fresh start.

He Must Have Turned the Switch.

Crookston Journal: Oscar Fredrickson, the genial bookkeeper of the Scandia bank, spent Sunday at Red Lake Falls and thereby hangs a tale. It seems that Mr. Fredrickson made the trip to Red Lake Falls on the usual business which takes a yonng man from home on Sunday clad in his flashiest clothes. While relating the enjoyment of the trip in the bank yesterday he said "And at nine-thirty the lights went out." It seems quite evident that what transpired after the lights went out is most vividly impressed on Mr. Frederickson's mind.

Perfect Confidence.

Where there used to be a feeling of uneasiness and worry in the household when a child showed symptoms of croup there is now perfect confidence. This is owing to the uniform success of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the treatment of that disease. Mrs. M. I. Basford, of Poolssville, Md., in speaking of her experience in the use of that remedy says: "I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for I have used it with perfect success. My child Garland is subject to severe attacks of croup and it always gives him prompt relief." For sals by Schreiter' Drug Store.

MILL WON'T RUN.

St. Hilaire People Are Sore As a Result.

Crookston Times: Friday evening a delegation of prominent residents of St. Hilaire arrived in the city to hold a conference with Thomas H. Shelvin, relative to the closing down of the saw mill at that place this summer. In the delegation were President of the council, T. J. Thorkelson, Alderman Nels G. Otterness and Daniel Patterson, Postmaster A. F. Poet, Banker J. K. Hannay and Editor H. E Ives, who represented to Mr. Shelvin the importance of the industry to the prosperity of the city, and made a strong plea that the mill should be put in operation this season.

Mr. Shelvin stated that the lack of logs this year to supply both the mill there and the Crookston mill would make it impossible to run them both, and that lumber was worth 25 cents per thousand more here than it was there on account of freight rates. He also called attention to the fact that the by-products of the saw mill were worthless there practically while here there was a ready demand for them, making another important item. He stated however, that another year the mill at St. Hilaire might be operated and probably would be.

Before the logging railroad became insolvent, the St. Hilaire mill could be supplied from that source. but it is not in operation. It is realized by the business men of St. Hilaire that the pay-roll at the mill was an important factor for the prosperity of the city and if it is to be closed several families will be compelled to move away to some point where the head of the family can secure work. The delegation returned home with no hope of the mill being operated this season.

Bound Over To Grand Jury.

Thief River Press: Peter Rocheford, a young fellow of 16 years, was arrested Saturday at the instance of T. Britt, a Great Northern detective hailing from St. Paul. The boy was brought before Judge Bishop on the charge of breaking the seal on a Great Northern car during the evening of March 17th and extracting from the car a quantity of matches, raisins and candy.

After taking the evidence tending to prove the lad's guilt, Judge Bishop bound him over to the grand jury under $300 bonds which were promptly furnished. The boy's attorney put in no defense at this time, under the circumstances this being deemed the wisest course.

Young Rcohefort drove a dray for Morin Bros. during a portion of the winter, and the testimony showed that he had admitted the offense charged to both the detective and to Mr. Baker, the agent. He will be at large at least until the grand jury takes action in the matter at the fall term of court.

Ditch Does Good Work.

Crookston Journal: A. O. Bakken, O. J. Rude and R. Nelson, came down from Winsor, Clearwater county, yesterday, to attend the contest cases in the U. S. land office. The gentlemen state that although there is plenty of snow in that section the water is not up to the usual spring height. They attribute this condition to the Lost River ditch which was lately put into that section. Although there was a heavy fall of snow the past winter the water was kept moving by means of this ditch and the farmers have bright out looks for the coming season. The amount of water that has been carried out by this ditch is something tremendous, and there would undoubtedly have been a flood in that section this spring had not this ditch been put through.

DAIRY NOTES.

(From the Ada Index.)

Cream with milk in it sours much more rapidly than cream with no milk in it.

One ounce of salt is sufficient for a pound of butter, but it should be worked enough to get the salt evenly evaporated.

Sour milk being pasteurized may be make into excellent butter, according to reports received by the state dairy and food commission of experiments in eastern states.

All cream and milk should be kept in water to prevent it from souring for it hurts the flavor and does not do the butter any good, and further more it will vary the test more or less.

All dirt should be brushed from the cow before beginning to milk, and it is best to drappen the udder and flank of the cow, so as to prevent the dust and dirt from falling into the milk.

Setting the cans in cold air will not prove nearly as effective in raising the cream as setting them in cold water, even though the temperature of the surrounding air is near the freezing point.

Many make butter in a cellar, because it is cool but it is apt to impart a musty, moldy smell to the butter. A celler may be good and cool and so ventialated as to have pure air; then it is alright for butter making.

Do not keep your cream to long before delivering it to the creamery, for it gets old and that fine flavor is gone, and there is not a buttermaker on earth that can replaced it after it is once gone, or be able to make any good price article out of such cream.

Now is the time of the year when you will have to pay a little more attention to your separator, for the milk will sour in a very short time They should be cleaned immediately after using, and should not let stand from one skimming to another. Cleaning is the main point twice a day.

As soon as the spring grass gets high enough for the cows to get a bite, let them have it. At first the time daily on pasture should be very short, for the good of both pasture and cow. The latter should be gradually changed from stable feeding to pasturage, especially if the feeding has been of dry material or mostly so.

In many pastures are small pools of water in which the cows stand during the heat of the day to rid themselves of flies. The water in these becomes stirred up by the movements of the cattle, and where, as is often the case, it is the only water obtainable, the cows are compelled to drink it, This can usually be avoided by fencing the pond and keeping the cattle out. If this water is needed for the cattle it can be drawn out by a pipe laid on the lower side into a trough from which the cows can drink.

Suffering

Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain than soothe it—are wrong.

Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill.

This will soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pains. Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-Sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

JAPS IN MANCHURIA

DETACHMENTS FROM GENERAL TACHIMI'S DIVISION CROSS THE YALU RIVER.

OCCUPY SEVERAL SMALL TOWNS WITH LITTLE OPPOSITION FROM RUSSIANS.

JAPANESE MERCHANT STEAMER SUNK BY CZAR'S VLADIVOSTOK SQUADRON.

Tokio, April 26.—The war department, without making public the point from which the message was received, announces that detachments from General Tachimi's division entered Manchuria Saturday, crossing the Yalu river near the intersection with the Chiang river, and occupied the Manchurian towns of Seubwaogko and Seupoboka. These towns are just southwest of the important Korean town of Chosan, and the soldiers who crossed the Yalu at this point undoubtedly belong to the army which was landed in Eastern Korea—at Woosao and Chungtynng. From both points there are military roads, and undoubtedly several brigades of the First division of the Japanese army are in the territory between Chosao and Wiwou, on the upper Yalu.

The government announces that infantry and cavalry occupied the Manchurian towns named, but does not say in what force. There was no opposition from the enemy, which is known to be intrenched on the west bank of the Chiang river.

While military officers will not formally discuss this important advance by the Japanese army, there is no doubt that it is the most significant land operation so far since the declaration of war. It is proof that the Japanese in force have been able to penetrate Northern Korea without opposition, and are now 120 miles above the mouth of the Yalu, while another division of the army under the direction of General Inouye has more than 40,000 men in and about Wiju.

MOBILIZING A THIRD ARMY.

Japan Preparing to Put Another Large Force in the Field.

Berlin, April 26.—The Tokio correspondent of the Tageblatt announces the mobilization of a third army. He says it is now disclosed that a reserve brigade corresponding to each division of the active army has been mobilized therewith, and that consequently, each army embraces nearly 100,000 men, instead of being of the strength previously assumed.

SINKS A JAP VESSEL

RUSSIAN VLADIVOSTOK SQUADRON APPEARS IN HARBOR OF GENSAN, KOREA.

Tokio, April 26.—The cruisers Rossia and Gromobi of the Vladivostok squadron participated in an attack on Gensan, Korea, Monday. They were accompanied by a third cruiser not yet identified and by two torpedo boats. Later they entered the harbor, ordered the crew of the Goyo Maru ashore and then sunk her. A detachment of marines was landed, but was recalled and the warships steamed outside of the harbor. The Japanese and many Koreans fled when the Russians approached.

ADMIRAL ALEXIEFF REPORTS ANOTHER RUSSIAN DISASTER AT PORT ARTHUR.

St. Petersburg, April 23.—The emperor has received the following telegram from Viceroy Alexieff, bearing Friday's date:

DENIED FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Rumor That Japanese Had Landed at Dalny.

St. Petersburg, April 26.—A dispatch from Port Arthur denies the report that 20,000 Japanese have landed at Dalny.

The dispatch states that there is no change in the situation on the Liaotung peninsula.

Alexieff's Resignation Declined.

St. Petersburg, April 25.—It is said that the emperor, replying to Viceroy Alexieff's application for leave, has telegraphed his refusal, adding that he hoped the viceroy would be able to send good news soon.

PRESIDENT LOUBET IN ROME.

French Ruler Lays Wreaths on Tombs of Dead Kings.

Rome, April 25.—President Loubet of France, who arrived in Rome Sunday, went with a royal cortege to the Pantheon during the day to lay wreaths on the tombs of King Victor Emmanuel II. and King Humbert. He was received by veterans of the Italian army. The function was of the most impressive nature, President Loubet speaking to each veteran, some of whom wore medals gained while fighting in 1859 with the French against Austria. With the same cortege President Loubet then drove to the Palazzo Margherita, formerly the seat of the American ambassador, to pay a visit to the queen mother, Margherita. He remained half an hour.

Those surrounding the pope assert that he has expressed his intention to protest against the visit of President Loubet on the ground that it is the first occasion on which the head of a Catholic country has visited the Quirinal since the fall of the temporal powers of the popes. It is not known when or under what form the protest will be issued.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE

TEN MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF PROPERTY DESTROYED AT TORONTO, ONT.

Toronto, Ont., April 20.—The fire that raged throughout the night and up to an early hour in the morning in Toronto's wholesale and retail business district was the most disastrous in the history of the city. The total loss is conservatively estimated at $10,000,000. The principal warehouses of the city were reduced to ashes and nearly 250 firms were put out of business. The area covered by the fire is three blocks in length and varies from half a block to two blocks in width. Every building on Bay street from Melinda street southward to the Esplanade at the water front was wiped out and the fire spread on Wellington and Front streets and the Esplanade, along the water front, from their intersection with Bay street, from distances of a hundred feet to a whole block. One hundred and fourteen buildings were destroyed and it is estimated that 6,000 people are thrown out of employment.

CANAL SALE RATIFIED

SHAREHOLDERS OF PANAMA COMPANY APPROVE ACTION OF ITS OFFICERS.

Paris, April 23.—The resolution of the Panama Canal company shareholders ratifying the sale of the canal to the United States was adopted almost unanimously. There were only five votes against it. The second Panama resolution was also adopted. There were only two dissenting votes. The meeting then adjourned. This completes the transfer of the canal to the United States.

Previous to the stockholders' meeting the contract by which the ownership of the canal strip passes to the United States was signed, sealed and delivered to representatives of the United States government. The document bears the signatures of President Bo and Director Richman of the Panama Canal company, who signed for the company as its responsible officials.

Four delegates at large pledged to the support of Olney were elected and the supporters of William R. Hearst of New York, as the presidential nominee, were defeated 3 to 1. A resolution offered by Representative John A. Coulthurst, indorsing the candidacy of Mr. Hearst, was voted down by a very large majority. The delegates at large are: William A. Gaston, Boston; Patrick A. Collins, Boston; William L. Douglass, Brockton, and John R. Thayer, Worcester.

BAD FLOOD IN KANSAS

HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE HOMELESS AND HEAVY PROPERTY LOSS AT FORT SCOTT.

Fort Scott, Kan., April 25.—Fort Scott is experiencing the most serious flood in its history. Marmaton river and Mill creek, which runs into the former stream here, have risen ten feet in the past twenty-four hours, the result of heavy rains. Several hundreds of persons have been rescued in boats. As far as known no lives have been lost. The estimated loss to livestock drowned and property damaged is $100,000.

It is estimated that 300 persons are homeless.

The storm is unprecedented in this part of the state. It is estimated that eight inches of water has fallen.

BOY BANDITS HANGED

DEATH ON THE GALLOWS ENDS CAREER OF NOTORIOUS CHICAGO CRIMINALS.

Peter Neidermeier, the Boastful Leader of the Youthful Gang, Is Too Weak to Walk as a Result of His Recent Attempt at Suicide and Is Carried to the Trap—Marx and Vandine Meet Their Fate Without Flinching.

Chicago, April 22.—Compelled to be carried to the scaffold Peter Neidermeier, leader of the car barn bandits, was hanged here at 10:35 a. m. Weak and pale, but with a slight suggestion of a smile, the bandit failed to carry out his oft repeated boast that he would die before reaching the gallows. Hanging of his associates, Marx and Vandine, quickly followed.

Although it was expected at first that Neidermeier would be able to walk to the gallows with but little or no assistance it was found at the last moment that he was too weak. Straps were placed over his ankles and just above his knees. He was then placed on a truck and wheeled to one of the lower floors of the jail, after which he was carried to the scaffold and placed in a chair on the trap. He was not asked the customary question if he had anything to say and the rope was quickly placed about his neck. He instinctively settled his neck into the noose and the trap was sprung. His neck was broken by the fall.

Previous to the execution and during the reading of the death warrant Neidermeier snatched the paper from the chief deputy's hands and placed it in a pocket and made remarks in anger at this time and once or twice when he was being taken to the scaffold.

Gustave Marx Dies Next.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Marx was led to the scaffold, neatly dressed and with a white rose as a bouttoinere, which had been given him by his small sister the night before. He was pale, but his courage never left him while he stood on the scaffold He made no statement.

Two priests of the Roman Catholic church, of which Marx had become a member, accompanied him to the gallows. He repeated the Litany with them and kissed a crucifix, after which the jailer adjusted the noose and sprang the trap at 11:17. He was pronounced dead at 11:34, his neck having been broken.

Harvey Vandine was hanged after a short interval between that of his companion, Marx. Incidents in Vandine's execution were similar to those that characterized the execution of Marx. Like Marx he was composed preceding execution. With the Catholic priests who had accompanied Marx Vandine walked unfalteringly to the scaffold, attired neatly in black like Marx and wearing a white waistcoat and with a white rose pinned to his coat.

Vandine made no statement of any kind while on the scaffold, but the prayer which he repeated with his spiritual advisers was quite audible.

With Vandine's lips still moving in prayer the trap was sprung at 11:55. His neck was broken.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Polish Catholic Priest at Snow Shoe, Pa., Arrested.

Williamsport, Pa., April 25.—Rev. Victor Garak, rector of the Polish Catholic church at Snow Shoe, has been arrested and taken to jail at Bellefonte charged with having caused the death of Andrew Sosko, a sixteen-year-old boy, by beating him with a club on Wednesday last. It is alleged the boy refused to attend church. A few hours before his death the boy made an antemortem statement to Dr. H. J. Young, declaring that Father Garak had beaten and kicked him.

GAS COMPANY SUSPENDS.

More Than a Million Dollars Invested in Its Property.

Red Key, Ind., April 26.—The Natural Gas company, holding company for the Ohio and Indiana Consolidated Gas company, the North Marcer Gas company and the Red Key Transportation Gas company, suspended operations Monday because of the shortage of gas. The increased demand for fuel and the increase of oil prospecting operations have resulted in a steady decreasing pressure. More than $1,000,000 is invested in the company's power stations, lines and leases.

A REVOLTING SPORT

THE HORROR AND THE SAVAGERY OF THE BULLFIGHT.

A Sunday Afternoon of Bloodshed and Brutality in the Arena in Mexico City as Graphically Described by an American Spectator.

"The better the day the better the deed" is not a Mexican maxim, for Sundays and feast days are given over to bullfights, cocking mains and gambling.

A beautiful Sunday afternoon found me in my seat, facing an audience of over 8,000 people, to witness the great bullfight that had been extensively advertised for that occasion.

The Plazo de Toras is the bullring, a great circular building with an interior that is an immense amphitheater, seating thousands of people. The seats are circular and in tiers, rising from the ground to the top, where the private boxes are. There is no roof except over the private boxes, and as the sun beats down there is of course a shady side and one side in the blazing sun.

Prices in the sun are as low as 25 and 50 cents and graded upward to $5 per seat. Boxes are from $5 and $10 per seat, eight persons occupying a box. Our entire party of over sixty occupied boxes, and they were all in their seats ready for the greatest novelty of their life, as not one in our party had ever witnessed such a scene.

The ring itself is an arena over a hundred feet in diameter, encircled by a strong board fence about five feet high, with a foot rail on the inside two feet from the ground. This is to assist the capeadore too closely pursued by the bull to escape by a leap over the fence to a passageway that extends around the ring between the fence and the seats. A gorgeously decorated box near the center of the shady side down low near the ring is for the president of the republic or for some state or municipal officer, who must be a man of executive ability and well posted in managing and deciding all questions of the bullfight. He is the umpire, and the more bulls and horses killed and the bloodier and fiercer the fighting the more he is cheered and the more popular he becomes with the people.

He has full sway and power, and all look to him for a bloody fight. If it is going tamely, the great throng hiss and show their displeasure in no unmistakable manner. He must then demand more vigorous action from the numerous performers—fiercer bulls and more horses gored and slain.

The box we occupied was at the top, immediately over this box of honor, and as the entrance of the bull was through a dark passageway just to the left of the president's box, we could see the back of the bulls as they entered and looked right down on the governor of the state, who on this Sunday afternoon was the only occupant of this great seat of honor at a Mexican bullfight. The entrance of the performers was through a gate exactly opposite the president's box.

All is now ready. The immense band is playing, but the music is drowned by the noise and howling of all the thousands present. Impatience seems to make them mad for the battle to begin. A blast from a bugle pierces the air of this beautiful Sunday afternoon. At this signal the gate opposite the president's box opens, and all the performers enter just within the inclosure. Then a single gayly costumed horseman, called the alguazil, mounted on a splendid horse, rides directly to the front of the governor and asks permission to kill the bulls. Permission granted, the governor tosses to him the key of the door at which the bulls enter, which he catches, and backs his fine horse clear across the ring to receive his company in waiting. Now there is a grand flourish of trumpets, brilliant spectacle, finely formed athletes in costumes of silk and satin, gold and velvet. They march quickly across the arena, bow to the governor and then to the audience. First in the gay procession as they march around the ring are the matadores, the stars, who handle the swords to the death of the bulls; next the banderilleros, second in honor, who place the banderillos in the bulls' shoulders to enrage them; next, and third in rank, the capeodores, who manipulate the capes or colored flags to distract the bulls' attention when any of the company are being pressed too hard and in unusual danger; next the picadors on horseback, their lance in hand; next four mules gayly harnessed; behind these, two men with wheelbarrows, shovels, and then some attendants called wise monkeys from their good suggestions and advice to the performers.

All now retire from the ring except the capeadores to enter in their turn. Again we hear the bugle blast, the door is thrown open, and the bull is entering, coming from a dark stall where he has been kept three days in darkness. As he enters under the rail a barbed steel point covered with flowing ribbons is placed in his shoulder. Maddened by the pain, he bounds forward to the center of the ring, where, with head up and tail lashing the air, he stops and looks around, seemingly bewildered.

Now before the carnage begins it is a magnificent sight. I shall never forget it. The great, splendid beast pawing the earth, shaking his huge bulk to dislodge the barbed steel in his shoulder, which only increased the pain, and he bellows in rage and fury, the bands playing, the thousands shouting, impatient for the carnage. A look to the right and left by the bull, and the unequal fight is on. A cape is waved in front of him. He lowers his head and makes the charge, only to find it drawn away, and he nearly breaks his neck in trying to recover from the impetus, but he never learns, for this is repeated scores of times before the death of

Good Yeast

To make good bread, you must have good yeast. It's the first requisite. You never saw a sweet, well-raised loaf without it. Every loaf made with Yeast Foam is sweet and well-raised, good to look at and better to taste.

The root of indigestion is sour, heavy bread which forms acid in the stomach. The cure is light, digestible bread raised with

YEAST TRADE PURITY AND EXCELLENCE MARK FOAM

Bread made with this wholesome, vegetable yeast retains its moisture, freshness and wheaty flavor until the last of the batch is gone.

The reason is simple: Yeast Foam leavens perfectly, expanding and bursting the starch cells and permeating every particle of dough.

W. W. Prichard, the Thief River Falls banker and money-holder, is a candidate for election as county commissioner from his district. Just where the farmers of that end of the county could expect to get any representation with Prichard in the office, is hard to discern, and The Gazette can't be led to believe that they will come within forty gun-shots of putting him there, either.

Robert Jaminson, chairman of the Republican state central committee, has called a meeting of the committee for the purpose of selecting the time and place for the holding of the state convention to place a state ticket in nomination. The committee will meet at the Windsor hotel in St. Paul, on Wednesday, May 4th at 2 o'clock. St Paul will get the state convention, which will probably be held between July 1st and July 10th.

That Gully Sunbeam fellow seems to think that he is cutting some figure in his attitude toward Representative Simons, but the outside world fails to see where it comes in. Argument to be effective must look feasible on its face, and anyone to look at the (Gun)beam could see that it could beleive even what it told itself. Jump onto your own representatives, friend Sunbeamer, and maybe you'll get that $10,000 ditch appropriation to carry home in your grip next time.

There has been a great deal of talk the effect that Judge of Probate N. W. Tarrant will be a candidate will be a candidate for re-eleet on this fall, and as Nick has not attempted to down the rumor the people have already planned to give him a rousing majority. The Judge has made a careful and painstaking official, and regardless of political affiliation the people of Red Lake county seem united on the idea that he deserves another term. It is not likely that he will have any opposition in his own party for the nomination.

The census bureau estimates that there are now 80 million people in the United States says the Gary Graphic. This is quite an increase since 1900, and the pity is that probably two-thirds of this increase never should have been allowed to land in America. Dagos and Syrians, Jews and Russians, who come to this country only because they are driven out from their countries. Half of them only add to the poverties of our cities. Law has shut out the Chinese. But for a few cheap politicians, law would also shut out this horde of European vandals.

Julius Schmahl, the chief clerk in the house of repeesentatives, and editor of the the Red Wood Falls Gazette, pays his tribute, which can be termed "expert testimony" to Red Lake county's able representative:

"Two members of the last legislature, who are seeking renomination and re election at the hands of their constituents, are Rasmus L. Mork of Faribault county and L. C. Simons of Red Lake county. Both should be returned. The former was a true representative of the farming interest in the house, and his vote were always recorded on the right side, as was also that of Mr. Simons, who, by reason of representing a new county, was obliged to ask for a vast amount of legislation and so well did he stand with his colleagues that he was successful in every measure presented."

St. Hilaire Spectator: In the announcements of candidates for county offices, none has yet appeared for the position of county superintendent of schools. The office is an important one and it should be the duty of the voters of the county to see that a competent man, thoroughly acquainted with the requirements of the rural schools, is chosen for the position. In making recommendations for candidates J. B. O'Brien, who has devoted his entire time to schools while in Red Lake county would be a competent person. Prof. O'Brien has been principal of our school for a number of years, is well known as an educator, and with assurance on the part of the people that he would receive proper support, the Spectator feels safe in announcing his candidacy to the voters of the county. Could he be induced to accept the nomination his name on the republican ticket would not lessen the the party vote.

Elbert Bede, son of Congressman Bede, is editor of the Warren Sheaf. Elbert says papa can be very serious on occasions and he relates one of the occasions in which the congressman fanned his offsring with a lath. Mr. Bede, jr., in mentioning this sorrowful event says: "J. Adam Bede is accused of being a funny man and a wit, but we assure you he can be serious—very serious—upon occasion. Way back in our memory there floats a vision of a woodshed at the rear of the house—just a common, every-day wood-colored woodshed. Nothing very funny about that, you say. No there was nothing funny about it to us. We were in that woodshed, and so was Adam Bede—getting inspiration to become a congressman. Every time the paddle came down, that meant a majority of ten. Oh, the congressman from the eighth can be very serious upon occasion—and we assure you there were no bunches in the seat of our trousers after our consultation with the future representative."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Emma Cyr, Lillian Nauman, Paul Brunelle, Athenian Reporters.

The debate has been postponed until May 13.

The effect of spring fever has become noticable.

The Spartans' last program will be given May 6.

Final review in almost all the studies has begun.

The Sophs held a meeting in recitation room Tuesday.

Quite a display of bottle green and white ribbon this week.

The High School boys have begun practicing for field day.

The members of the Botany class are anxious for field work.

One of the Senior girls has not yet learned how to use her pencil properly.

The Seniors are very busy now-a-days preparing for graduation exercises.

We had a free exhibition of slight of hand performance Thursday during the Botany.

Rev. Friscoll gave a short talk for the benefit of the High School pupils Friday morning.

The Freshmen are now talking up a review in Physiology to prepare for the State exam.

All sorts of remarks have been made in regard to the Sophmore colors-red and back.

At almost anytime of the day the roosters' soft solos are heard, which makes the pupils feel glad.

The fourth year English class are now reviewing their Rhetoric and therefore have better lessons.

"Be gentle in closing the recitation room door and you will save yourself trouble" would he good advice for some.

Judging from the number of new waistes seen on our High School girls, there must have been many "fires" lately.

The class of '04 are wondering if the class of '05 will be lonesome without them next fall when school opens again.

We think the school board will have to furnish us with a new dictionary. The Sophmores have worn out almost all the pages.

The Virgil class is doing so well that most of us think they will be able to talk politics in Latin at the end of the term.

The members of the junior class were absent all day Wednesday preparing for the supper they gave in the K. P. hall that evening.

Any one near the High School building at recess time will surely get the impression thet the High School pupils ere very fleet of foot.

The Seniors were told the other day that before they began to prepare for graduation they had hetter review their grammar, was not that a complement?

Since the bulletin board was taken down lost articles have heen have hanging all over the building. A side comb was hanging on a window curtain the other day.

A couple of the High School pupils had to go home after their cards Monday afternoon. Oh! dear, if they could they would probably forget their heads and have to go after them.

There is no question as to there being a field meet now, as we can get Crookston, Fosston and several other towns in it. It is expected to be held at Crookston the latter part of May. Our boys are working hard and have a good start.

Mrs. B. Zaiser expects to leave Saturpay for Minneapolis to spend several with relatives and friends,

Miss Minnie Zaiser, of Crookston has been the guest of her mother and other relatives here this week.

Mrs. E. F. Marsball returned yesterday from a several weeks' visit at Crookston, Willmar and the cities.

Joseph Helm, the enterprising machinery dealer, has a couple of new ads. in today's Gazette, showing pictures of some of his famous articles. Hunt up the ads.

Fred Cyr and family left last Friday for Duluth, where Mr. Cyr has secured a position, and will make his future home. The Red Lake Falls friends of the family will wish them success in the new home.

Sheriff Dan Linnihan went up to Thief River Falls yesterday on a business call. Dan has begun to look after his fences throughtout the county, and it is the opinion of his friends that when election day rolls around he will have them so well put up that a battering ram will have no effect on them.

Messrs. Olof Tande, Joseph Pigeon and Ed. Stone, viewers on judicial ditch No 4, returned to their homes yesterday, after making their report to Judge Watts at Crookston. A report of their findings will be found on the first page. The Judge has ordered that a special session of the district court will be held at Lambert postoffice in the town of Lambert on the 21st day of May, to hear and consider the petition and surveyors' and viewers' reports, and all persons interested in the construction of said ditch are invited to appear before the court. THE SHAMROCK.

At One Time It Was Used as a Food in the Emerald Isle.

There are few plants, if any, that are as closely associated in the people's mind with any one nation in particular as is the little Irish shamrock with the joys and sorrows of the Emerald Isle. In the ancient literature of Erin the word occurs variously as seamsog, seamrog, seamroge, shamrote, shamrocke, shamroke, shamrogh or shamroote, shamrug, shamroge, seamaroge and chambroch. The word "shamrock" is Erse, being derived from seamrog, a compound of scamar, meaning trefoil, and og, little—little clover. Scamar is supposed to be the same as sumar, obtained from the Celtic name of the clover—visumarus. As to the plant itself, it is generally considered that the true shamrock is either the black nonesuch or the Dutch clover, with a decided preference for the first named, on no less an authority than the curator of the Dublin Botanic gardens and other competent persons. There are, however, some who hold that Trifolium repens or Trifolium minus is the true shamrock, and this opinion emanates from experts in the agricultural department at Washington. Other writers have adopted the fancy of Bicheno, who advocated the right of the wood sorrel to this honor. This last belief may have arisen from the appearance of the word seamsoge, meaning wood sorrel, in old Irish writings, referring to the shamrock, but by those competent to judge this is thought to be a misprint, the word seamroge, signifying meadow trefoil, having been meant.

The earliest references to the shamrock in Irish literature deal with it as a food plant. Campion in his "Historie of Ireland," dated 1571, says in speaking of the food of the common people, "Shamrotes, water cresses and other herbes they feed upon; oatmelc and butter they cram together." Matthias Lobel, the Flemish botanist, who published his "Stirpium Adversaria Nova" in 1570, appears to be the first botanical writer to mention the plant. He enumerates the purple and the white trefoil and says of the latter, "It is stated to be good for fatteaing cattle," adding that the Irish grind the flowers and leaves into a meal, which they knead with butter and "thrust into their groaning bellies when it sometimes happens they are vexed and nigh maddened with a three dayes hunger."

Edmund Spenser in 1595 also tells of the Irish people feeding on "shamrokes" or water cresses when reduced to starvation during the Munster wars. In the "Itinerary" of Fynes Moryson, written in 1599, this passage occurs in a description of the Irish: "They willingly eat the herbe shamrocke, being of a sharp taste, which as they run and are chased to and fro they snatch like beasts out of the ditches." This statement has given rise to the belief that the water cress was the shamrock, although some have identified Moryson's "shamrocke" with the wood sorrel, Oxalis acetosella, a trifoliate plant with acid juice which grows abundantly in Irish woodlands.

The shamrock food of the Irish was supplied to make them strong and swift of foot. T. Mundy refers to this fact in a work written by him in 1680. The nourishing qualities of the food are also gleaned from the statement of the Earl of Antrim during the siege of Munster by the Earl of Argyll, to the effect that as long as shamrocks were available no apprehension regarding the food supply need exist. About 1772 the shamrock as an article of food in Ireland was supplanted by the potato.—New York Tribune.

A Cholera Mixture.

Here is a little anecdote from "A Ramble Round the Globe:" "I was going through a 'prohibition' state and tried to get some whisky from the conductor of the train, but without success. 'Can't do it, boss. We're in a prohibition state, and I can't do it.' However, he eventually advised me to try at a store at the next stopping place, and this I did. 'Do you sell whisky?' 'Are you sick, mister, or got a medical certificate?' 'No.' 'Then I can't do it. See, this is a prohibition state, so I can't sell it, but I reckon our cholera mixture 'll about fix you. Try a bottle of that.' I did, but, to my great astonishment received a very familiar bottle, which, although it was labeled on one side 'Cholera Mixture, a wineglassful to be taken every two hours or oftener as required,' had upon the other side the well known label of a firm of Scotch whisky distillers, whose name modesty requires me to suppress."—London M. Try for Health

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Georgia Dunbar

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

CURES WITHOUT STOMACH DOSING.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Simple Breathing. A. L. Reichert Refunds Money If It Fails To Cure.

A long stride toward solving the mystery of curing catarrh was taken with the discovery of Hyomei. In fact, the percentage of cures by this treatment proves it equal to the final tests.

The folly of taking medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh of the nose, throat and lungs, has been realized by physicians, but not until Hyomei was known, had they a practical method that would obviate stomach drugging.

A complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1, and consists of a neat pocket inhaler that can be used anywhere without attracting attention, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. Breathing Hyomei through the inhaler, every particle of air that enters the nose, throat and lungs, is charged with a healing balsam that soothes and allays all irritation, kills the catarrhal germs and enriches the blood with additional ozone.

A. L. Reichert has so much faith in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh, that he is selling it under his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not give positive relief.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Wednesday, April 20.

House—Naval appropriation bill sent back to conference after an extended debate, the only disputed senate amendment accepted being that providing for the construction in navy yards of two colliers. Bill providing for allotment of lands of the New York Indians passed.

Senate—Members listen to a set speech of almost two hours' duration on the trusts by Mr. Dolliver and afterwards complete consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, again devoting much time to the provisions for an extension of the east front of the Capitol and for an additional office building for the senate.

Thursday, April 21.

House—Evidence of the approaching adjournment apparent in the passing of a large number of bills, among them being one to provide a temporary government for Panama canal zone.

Senate—Pension appropriation bill, carrying an appropriation of over $137,000,000, and the emergency river and harbor appropriation bill, which carries $3,000,000, were passed, leaving only the general deficiency and the military academy bills of the entire list of supply measures still to be considered.

Friday, April 22.

Senate—General deficiency bill occupied the greater portion of the day. Before it was taken up Mr. Gallinger spoke at some length on the tariff policy of the Republican party.

House—Bitter attack on President Roosevelt made by Kitchin of North Carolina. Preceding this episode the house debated the bill to create a commission to investigate the merchant marine, but took no action on it.

Saturday, April 23.

House—Spirited partisan debate between Messrs. Cockran and Dalzell occupied a large part of the session. The latter accused the New Yorker of supporting McKinley in 1896 for pay, to which Mr Cockran entered an emphatic denial. The floor and the galleries were crowded with interested listeners.

Senate—General deficiency appropriation bill passed, leaving but one of the appropriation bills unacted upon. A large number of amendments were adopted, among them being one limiting the Chinese exclusion legislation to a reaffirmation of the exclusion law of 1902 and other existing exclusion laws.

Monday, April 25.

House—Large number of bills passed, including the Alaska delegate bill. The bill to authorize the construction of a lighthouse and fog signal station at Diamond Shoal, N. C., occasioned a long debate, but finally passed without division.

Senate—Mr. Hale (Me.) made a speech in opposition to the further construction of battleships, declaring they were of little use as engines of war. Military appropriation bill considered, but not disposed of.

RIOTERS SHOT DOWN

TWENTY FOUR ARE KILLED AND FORTY WOUNDED BY THE HUNGARIAN TROOPS.

Budapest, April 25.—A serious riot is reported to have taken place at the market town of Elesd, near Gross-Wardein, resulting from a collision between members of the Socialist and Independent parties. While order was being restored by the gendarmerie, a Socialist fired a revolver, killing the commander. The gendarmes thereupon fired a volley, killing twenty-three of the rioters and severely wounding forty.

The diet was closed during the day by royal decree. The sudden end of the session is attributed to a desire to avoid discussions of the railroad strike and rioting.

The following communication is not so bad, either: "Wanted Boy Properly Spanked:—A teacher boxed the ears of a pupil a few days ago. The boy told his mother and the next day the teacher received the following note: "Nature has provided a proper place for the punishment of a boy, and it is not his ear. I will thank you to use it hereafter."

Mrs. Margaret Marchand, an oldtime resident of Red Lake Falls, died at her home in North Yakima the latter part of last week, after a brief illness, at the age of seventy-five years. An Irishman, in order to celebrate the advent of a new era, went out on a lark. He didn't get home until three o'clock in the morning, and was barely in the house before a nurse rushed up and uncovering a bunch of soft goods, showed him triplets. The Irishman looked up at the clock which said three, then at the three of a kind in the nurse's arm and said: "Oim not superstitious, but thank hivens that Oi didn't come home at twelve."

The various assessors of the county are meeting at the auditor's office today, getting their blanks and making preparations to start the work of getting the general public in shape to "dig" early next year. State Auditor Iverson has laid down the law very plainly to the assessors throughout the state this year, and when the abstracts are completed this fall it is to be hoped that a more general equalization of the burdens of taxation will result.

The Polk county commissioners, at their recent session, took final action in the matter of the petition of the residents of the joint school district No. 48, and as a result the district is divided, the Red Lake county half to be known as district No. 22. Thief River Falls Press; The Red Lake Agricultural Association is now a member of the American Trotting Association, and the secretary has a certificate bearing ample testimony to this fact. The association has ordered 1000 advertising flags from the Sciota Sign Co., of Kenton, Ohio, at an expense of $35. These flags are very durable and are considered one of the best advertising mediums for fairs and exhibitions now in use. The management don't intend to let you forget that the fair this year is going to be a hummer.

The Gonigam real estate agency this week sold the Wm. Schuman farm, the southwest quarter of section 13, Lake Pleasant, to J. L. McCormick, of New Canton, Ill. Mr. McCormick is the agent of Mr. Gonigam at New Canton, and was here on a trip to look over the country preparatory to bringing a number of settlers here, and he was so well impressed that he invested in this choice quarter before going back. Mr. Schuman will farm the place this year, but will return to Nobles county in the fall.

Crookston Times; The plans for the new Merchants State Bank building to be built this summer at St. Hilaire have been let to Achitect Keck and he is hard at work perfecting drawings that will call for one of the finest banks in this part of the state. The building when completed will cost $4,500 and will be handsomely finished and furnished. Representative L. C. Simons, who is president of the bank has been in the city several times making arrangements for the commencement of the work and says nothing but the best will do.

Crookston Times: Attorney Francis Bergstrom who has practiced law in this city during the past year, has decided to move to Boston where he will open offices for practice. Mr. Bergstrom was last winter admitted to the Massachusetts bar and the presence of near relatives in that state has been considerable of an inducement for the change. Mr. Bergstrom during his residence in the city has made many friends who will regret his departure. He will undoubtedly gets thing packed up in time to take the Saturday night train.

The mail carrier failed to make connections again last Sunday, making four Sundays in succession that we have had no Sunday mail. While the condition of the roads has no doubt been very bad, it seems strange that the new carrier should miss us so often. During the several years that the old carrier came here the mail was never missed that many weeks in succession, and it seems that if a little extra effort was made the carrier could have easily reached here. If the government has to pay a big sum to get over Sunday mail to us, it seems as though we might insist that the carrier fulfill his contract.

"Hitting the trail" from Minnesota to the Pacific coast via the Northern Pacific is most ably set off in this season's issue of the Wonderland. It is a complete story of the great west depicting its flora and fauna on hill and plain. Each year the Northern Pacific edits one of these handsome souvenirs over which their trains carry enthusiastic thousands. The Yellow Stone National Park, Northern Minnesota and the Yakima Valley in Washington come in for the lions share of space. This wonder book is wonderfully illustrated and worthy of space in any library in the land. The Gazette is indebted to Agent Mizen for a copy of this handsome volume.

Miss Alex Muller who some years ago was employed on the Fertile Journal, died last week in a western city. Her home was in St. Paul and she distinguished herself by falling in love with Jim Younger and was engaged to marry him. When Younger found he could not marry her, he committed suicide. True to her love for Jim Younger, Miss Muller asked as her last request to have her remains cremated and the ashes sprinkled upon the grave of the man she had loved and worked for during her life-time, but who could not marry her on account of the law decree. The funeral was held in St. Paul last Tuesday, the following day the body was cremated and the ashes taken to Lees Summit, Mo., where the noted outlaw's remains lie buried.

CONSTRUCTION IS UNDER WAY

Building Has Actually Begun on the Soo Line From Detroit to Emerson.

Crookston Journal: Yesterday J. J. Harkinson, division engineer for the Soo railroad was in the city and spent the day with City Engineer Carroll, and old time friends. Mr. Harkinson has charge of the survey and construction of the Soo road from Erskine to Emerson. He reports that work has begun on the construction of the roadbed in a number of places. The work is being pushed with all possible speed. Grading is being done by the subcontractors wherever the ground is in condition. There is a large amount of work under way in the neighborhood of Thief River Falls and Erskine. Thief River Falls is the base of operations for both the Great Northern and the Soo.

Mr. Harkinson has more than 100 miles of the road to look after. He furnishes all grades and makes all estimates of cuts and fills for the contractors, he or the men under him. These sections, which are about thirteen miles long, are in charge of engineers with crews of five or six men under them. Things will be busy with the construction department of the Soo this year, but they will have their trains running into Winnipeg before the snow flies.

ASSESSORS AT THEIR WORK

Meeting Here Last Thursday Well Attended, and Basis of Assessment Fixed.

The assesors of Red Lake county for the year 1904, met at the office of the County Auditor last Thursday, and proceeded to organize and arrive at a basis of valuation for the county, which they will abide by in their work of ascertaining the number of poor people in the county this spring. All the townships with the exception of Sanders were represented, the following gentlemen representing their respective towns:

Numedahl, P. L. Sande; Norden, N. O. Nora; North, H. E. Gusta; Bray, Emil Larson; Rocksbury, O. A. Aubol; Polk Centre, Eli Bontain; Black River, Albert Power; River Falls, James Gilbertson; Wyandotte, Louis Halvorson; Louisville, J. F. Mathews; Red Lake Falls, A. D. Dufault; Gervais, Joseph Laureut; Emardville, A. J. Hemstad; Garnes, Simon C. Sater; Equality, Edward E. Havik; Lake Pleasant, Moses Ducharme; Terrebonne, Louis Perrault; Poplar River, Moses Guerard; Lambert, Max Perras; St. Hilaire, O. H. Peters; Thief River Falls, A. A. Sweass; Red Lake Falls, E. A. Moran.

Auditor Ford was elected chairman of the meeting and O. H. Peters, secretary. The first matter to be taken up was the real estate valuations, and the following grades were made:

1st grade value $3 per acre, Rocksbury, Black River, Polk Center, River Falls, Red Lake Falls and Terrebonne.

2nd grade, $2.50 per acre, North, Louisville, Gervais, Lake Pleasant, Poplar River and Lambert.

3rd grade, $2 per acre, Numedahl, Norden, Bray, Sanders, Wyandotte, Emardville, Garnes, Equality and Assessment districts No.'s 1 and 2.

Improvements on farm lands, not including buildings, 50c per acre.

All buildings, etc., on lands and lots, 40 per cent of their cash value.

The personal property valuations as set by the assessors, range from 35 to 55 per cent of the value of the property.

The assesors must complete their work in time for the town boards of review to equalize it, which they will do at the meetings on June 27. The commissioners meet as a board of equalization on July 18, at which time the abstract of the assessors' work is gone over and the whole thing equalized.

The assessors are admonished by Auditor Iverson to do careful work this year, and it is likely that a fair distrtbution of the tax burdens will result.

Practicing for Field Day.

The young men of the high school are putting in a great deal or time these days practicing for the field meet, which will be held sometime the latter part of this month at Crookston or this city. Several of the neighboring schools will participate, and some good work along atheletic lines will no doubt result. Red Lake Falls has some first class atheletes, and their friends look for them to carry off a good bunch of the prizes. The date of the meet will be announced later.

LET'S HAVE A BASE BALL TEAM

Red Lake Falls Should Get in Shape For the Summer's Sport.—A Pitcher Needed.

There has been considerable talk around town this week to the effect that Red Lake Falls should have a ball team this summer, and the possibilities of what we might have with the present material carefully gone over. At the present time at least six of the players of last year's crack team are ready to "get into the game" again this year, and as there are one or two others here now that did not play last season the prospects for a record making team during the coming summer would be very bright but for one obstacle.

We have not at the present time got a good pitcher, and while one or two of the boys can do fair work along this line, nevertheless to win the championship of this section again this year we will have to have someone who can do an excellent job in the pitcher's box. There is an easy way to get a good man, though, and if the citizens here will do like other towns in the state they can have a team that will bring credit to the town and her people. Other towns hire three and four players every year, and it seems to the Gazette that enough lovers of this great game could be found here who would be willing to contribute towards paying the salary of a good man for the next three months in order to have a ball team that could win over anything they went up against. A great amount of money would not be necessary to get a man who could do the job up right, and it occurs to us that an effort might be made among the business people to see what could be done, without doing a great amount of harm. Someone take hold of the idea and push it, and help Red Lake Falls sustain her reputation on the diamond again this year.

STATE CONVENTION CALLED.

Thursday, June 30, Set as the Day the Governor Will Be Named.

The republican central committee met at St. Paul yesterday to prepare the call for a state nominating convention and decided to hold the convention at the Metropolitan opera house in St. Paul at ten a. m. Thursday, June 30th. The Duluth contingent, headed by Mille Bunnel, made a valiant effort to secure the convention for Duluth, but were outvoted, seventeen to nine. The Collins supporters favored St. Paul. Another feature of the convention was the decision of the committee to have justices of the supreme court nominated before the governor and the rest of the ticket. United States senator Moses E. Clapp was unanimously chosen temporary chairman and the McKinley vote of 1900 which results in a convention of 1,176 delegates, as a basis of representation, was adopted. No attempt was made to do away with five delegates at large accorded each county in addition to the delegates for each two hundred fifty votes cast for McKinley. The county conventions will be held Tuesday, June 28th.

HUMBUG CATALOGUE HOUSES.

Their Sham Offers of Cheaper Goods Exposed. Home Merchant's Goods Better.

The following from the St. Peter Herald gives facts that cannot be disproved and they are so important that every farmer and other buyer of goods and supplies should give the conclusions set forth. their careful consideration. The catalogue houses are simply fooling their customers. They do not give bargains. The home dealers in Red Lake county, in Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire, Wylie, Thief River Falls and all other points, will, as in Nicollet county supply the same or better goods of all kinds which the catalogue houses offer, at lower prices—and besides, you can see the articles before taking them and the home dealer is responsible and is ever ready to make good his guarantee and remedy any complaint.

The people should understand all this and refuse longer to be humbugged. Read what the St. Peter Herald says, then, if you care to do so, before sending an order to a catalogue house, take the catalogue to a home dealer, show him the goods you want and see if what we say is not true—that you can get better bargains at home every time. Here is the way the Herald states it:

The past week there were received here 300 advertising catalogues and circulars from Montgomery, Ward & Co. These were sent to a bill posting house for distribution. On one of the pages Montgomery: Ward & Co. says: "We read with amusement—various country editors are killing idle moments by writing articles on the decadence of the mail order system, giving as reasons time-worn falsehoods about poor goods, higher prices, breakage, etc. We plead not guilty."

The Herald is not now and has not been in the habit of advising people how or where to spend their money, but M., W. & Co. having issued the challenge as it were, the Harold would offer a few words to the people.

We take this catalogue and find a cut and description of a buggy, which they sell for $44.50 in Chicago. Evenson Bros. of this city sell and have advertised that same buggy for $40—saving a person $4.50 and freight.

A cultivator is priced by them at $20.25; Mason Bros. of this city offer the identical cultivator at $19.25—a saving of $1 and freight.

Klien & Co. and Volk Bros. sell a common chair at $8.40 per doz., while these people ask $9.60.

The Chicago house sells a pair of rubber boots at $3.50 and Max Hoefer has the same boot in his store for $3.

The catalogue price of a set of double harness of a certain grade was $25.50; Chas. Rose makes a better set for $25.

Broad cast grass seeders are catalogued at 75c. and Nutter Bros. sell and advertise them for 65c.

Chicago prices for hay carrier track was 5c when any dealer will sell all you want for 8 cents. They ask $4.50 for a 'Planet Jr.' single wheel hoe. In front of any hardware store you find them at $4.25

Now what does it mean?

It means that you can buy the goods for less money right here in St. Peter, Nicollet, Cleveland, Norseland, New Ulm, Mankato, LeSueur, etc., than you can buy them from Montgomery Ward & Co. and save freight, and you can see the goods before you send away the money—once sent, it never comes back to help build churches, to build telephone lines in the country, and other multitude of public enterprises for which the home merchant is called upon for contributions. When your neighbor's house burns, when your team of horses die, when misfortune comes as it does in so many ways, the subscription list is passed and the writer who has signed many of them has never yet seen the name of Sears-Roebuck, or Montgomery-Ward on one of them. Now this might not be appropos but for the statement of Montgomery-Ward themselves. But when you can take their catalogue to the stores and get the same goods at home for less than they ask for them you certainly are foolish to send your money to Chicago. People used to think, years ago, that they got goods from the catalogue houses at wholesale. They don't, but on the contrary pay more for them than from the home merchant. Now good reader, before throwing money at the catalogue houses again, think it over and see if it isn't possible that you are making a mistake.

NEW BASEBALL RULES.

Pitchers and Catchers Must Keep Their Eyes Open This Year.

President Pullman, of the National league, has issued his official interpretation of the playing rules for the coming season.

Under rule 30, as amended the pitcher must take his position facing the batsman, and with both feet in front of the pitcher's plate. By keeping the twirlers from placing one foot to the side of the rubber they will be prevented from using the effective "cross-fire" delivery which, while it puts the ball over the plate, involved a delivery which began outside the pitcher's position. Umpires must enforce the balk rule to the letter. Hereafter if a pitcher makes a motion of any kind with his hands, body, legs or feet he must follow it with a delivery of the ball to the bat or have a balk called on him. A trick play that heretofore was not covered by any rule will this season result disastrously to the perpetrator. Should a coacher at third base start for the plate to draw a play from a fielder the runner entitled to that, will be declared out for such inference. Two coachers instead of one as formerly, will be allowed.

Good Roads.

Thief River News: No class of American citizens are more deeply interested in having good roads than the farming class. All they produce must be transported to market. Little or none is sold on the farm. They must reach railroad stations or steam boat landing, and bad highways make the task heavier and much more expensive than if the roads were good. A bill is before congress to provide a system of federal aid to the construction of good roads over the country. It is certainly the most gigantic undertaking ever proposed to the government, for the United States covers a vast extent of territory, and it would not do to slight one section while providing for another.

OPPOSED TO FREE WHEAT.

Congressman Steenerson Writes St. Hilaire Spectator on Subject of Reciprocity.

It is with pleasure that we print the following letter from Hon. Halvor Steenerson, says the St. Hilaire Spectator. The idea was certainly prevalent that Mr. Steenerson was in favor of Canadian reciprocity, including free Canadian wheat, and we are pleased to learn that it was a mistake. The reciprocity crowd were claiming Mr. Steenerson and his letter will put such stories at rest. We congratulate not only our congressman but the district on the decision.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington.
April 13, 1904.

Harry E. Ives, Esq.,
St. Hilaire, Minn.

Sir: Referring to the editorial in your issue of March 30th relative to reciprocity with Canada, permit me to say that I do not now and never have favored the free admission of wheat or other farm products either by reciprocity treaties or otherwise, and I am in perfect accord with the views expressed on this subject in the resolutions adopted at the recent congressional district convention in my district, and state convention. No such question has been before congress for action at this session, and it was discussed in general debate on appropriation bills (when such liberality prevails as to permit the discussion of any subject the speaker may choose to consider) rather as an academical than as a practical question. The fact that I did not enter the lists in this debate should not be taken as proof of the attitude you seek to attribute to me on the subject, nor as ground for charging that I do not represent the district.

I hope you will print this letter in order that I may be set right before your readers.

Yours respectfully,
H. STEENERSON.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

NEW SOO TOWNS.

Crookston Times Indulges In Speculation.

The Crookston Times has heard talk of the locations for the new Soo towns, in Red Lake county, and locates them as follows, with a couple of well-known county citizens as managers and boomers. Here is the way the Times sees it:

"It is expected that the locations for the new Soo towns in the eastern part of Red Lake county will be determined soon. It is a good guess that the first town will be located on section 14, Poplar River, and L. C. Simons, of Red Lake Falls, will be the town lot agent and promoter. The next town will probably be on section 4, Emardville, near the Clearwater crossing. Julius Pieth, of St. Hilaire, will be the promoter of this burg. It is quite likely that another town will be established in Wyandotte township, about due east of St. Hilaire."

Suffering

Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain than soothe it—are wrong.

Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill.

This will soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pains. Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-Sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

Pleasant to take, quick in results.

JAPS WIN ON THE YALU

GENERAL KUROKI'S ARMY ADMINISTERS CRUSHING BLOW TO RUSSIAN FORCES.

BOTH SIDES LOSE HEAVILY IN FIGHT, BUT CZAR'S TROOPS ARE PUT TO ROUT.

JAPS CAPTURE GUNS AND AMMUNITION AND LARGE NUMBER OF PRISONERS.

Washington, May 2.—The Japanese legation here has received the following official cablegram from Tokio:

"General Kuroki, commanding the first army, reports from Chiutiencheng that, on May 1, the Second and Twelfth divisions and the imperial guard, forming the First army corps, advanced, notwithstanding stout resistance on the part of the enemy, by three roads, driving the enemy before them, and at 8 p. m. occupied a line extending from Antung to Liushukon. The imperial guards surrounded the enemy on three sides and, after a severe fight, captured twenty guns, with horses and carriages, and more than twenty officers and many men. The general reserve corps advanced by the Liaoyang road. The enemy was composed of the whole Third division and the Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth regiments of the Sixth infantry division of sharpshooters and General Mishtchenko's cavalry brigade, with about forty guns and eight machine guns. The enemy fled toward Fenghuangcheng. Our casualties will not exceed at most 700. Twenty-eight quickfiring guns and large quantities of small arms and ammunition were captured. Our heavy field guns were very effective. A Russian officer who was taken prisoner says that both the commanders of the army corps and the division were wounded and that the Russian casualties exceeded 800."

JAPANESE REPULSED

RETREAT TO GENSAN AFTER BATTLE IN WHICH BOTH SIDES LOSE HEAVILY.

London, May 3.—An unconfirmed report of severe fighting between 3,000 Russians and a similar number of Japanese at Gensan is sent by the Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent, who says the Japanese were compelled to retire into Gensan, both sides losing heavily. Two Russian officers are said to have been among the wounded.

RUSSIAN LOSSES ENORMOUS.

Put Up a Stubborn Resistance to the Japanese.

Tokio, May 3.—A further report received here from Chintiencheng stated that a bombardment had begun at dawn Sunday and that the Japanese artillery had silenced the strong Russian forts by 7 o'clock. Then their infantry occupied the elevated land around Chosan. The Japanese line was extended for four miles, and by 8:20 a. m. they had destroyed seven forts and seized eight guns despite the Russians' stubborn resistance.

As soon as Chintiencheng was entered the Japanese who were pursuing the enemy, charged their artillery and captured twenty guns, while a large number of Russians, including ten officers, were taken prisoners.

The Russian casualties are described as enormous. Their commander-in-chief and other generals are reported to have been wounded. The Japanese lost about 500 killed and wounded.

FORCED TO RETREAT

RUSSIANS FALL BACK ON FENGHUANGCHENG AFTER BURNING ANTUNG.

Tokio, May 2.—The Russians were forced to abandon Antung Sunday. They burned the town and retreated to Fenghuangcheng.

The Japanese now control the estuary of the Yalu.

FOG PREVENTS NAVAL FIGHT.

Jap Fleet Twice Passed Vladivostok Squadron at Sea.

Tokio, May 2.—Vice Admiral Kamimura, who is in command of the Japanese squadron which has been operating recently against Vladivostok, has sent in a report from Gensan, Korea, in which he says that the impenetrable fog twice forced the abandonment of the attack on Vladivostok and twice spared the Russian squadron a sea fight. While Kamimura was steaming north the first time he passed the Russian squadron bound south on the raid to Gensan, which resulted in the sinking of the Japanese merchant steamer Goyo Maru and the transport Kinshiu Maru. The Japanese and Russian squadrons must have passed very close to each other for the Japanese were conscious of the presence of the enemy.

When Kamimura was compelled to suspend his attack upon Vladivostok he moved to the southward and again passed the Russians on their way north after the Gensan raid.

COLONEL KIEFER DEAD.

Former Congressman Expires Suddenly at St. Paul.

St. Paul, May 2.—On the very eve of the city election Colonel Andrew R. Kiefer, Republican candidate for the office of comptroller, died suddenly of heart disease.

Colonel Kiefer had been prominent in the public affairs of this city and state for nearly half a century and almost all of that time he has held some public office. He was born in Germany seventy-three years ago, coming to America in 1849 and to St. Paul in 1852. He was chosen inspector and collector of the wharf at this port and then began his career as an officeholder which continued almost without interruption until the time of his death. He served as clerk of the district court two terms, beginning in 1878; was in the state legislature and represented his district in congress from 1893 to 1897. He was mayor of St. Paul from 1898 to 1900 and has held numerous minor offices.

OVATION FOR CANNON

GREAT DEMONSTRATION MARKS CLOSING SESSION OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Washington, April 29.—The closing of the second session of the house of the Fifty-eighth congress was made notable by the demonstration which followed the offering of a resolution by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, testifying to the courtesy and impartial manner in which Speaker Cannon has presided over the house. The resolution was not of the perfunctory kind, but was expressive of the kindly feeling, which men in the house of all parties entertained toward him. In a graceful speech the speaker declared his appreciation of the resolution.

Many conference reports were agreed to on bills which had been in dispute between the two houses. The only points of differences between the two houses was the bill providing for the reinstatement to the naval academy of three cadets who had been dismissed for hazing, the house voting overwhelmingly against it.

Washington, April 29.—With brief announcement and a sharp rap of his well worked gavel, President Pro Tem Frye adjourned the senate sine die at 2 p. m. Thursday, the hour fixed by resolution of the two houses of congress. The occurrence was devoid of unusual incident and the final close of the session was but slightly different from the end of an ordinary day's sitting. Neither rush nor confusion marked the end.

The only important acts of legislation during the day were the presentation and acceptance of conference reports on the Panama canal government and emergency river and harbor bills. Neither report aroused debate.

EIGHT PERSONS DEAD

TRAIN ON THE IRON MOUNTAIN RAILROAD DERAILED NEAR KIMMSWICK, MO.

Kimmswick, Mo., April 30.—A misunderstanding of orders by the engineer of a train on the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railroad resulted in a serious wreck at Wickes Siding, about one and one-half miles north of here. Following is a list of the dead: James Bailey, engineer; Al Gumpert, fireman; A. E. Taber, master mechanic; Express Messenger Groat; Edward Bushhard, De Soto, Mo.; three unidentified passengers.

The wreck occurred while the train was going at an excessive rate of speed. There had been trouble with a freight car on one of the fast trains and it was necessary to abandon it on the main line near Wickes Siding. Orders were issued for all northbound and southbound trains to use the switch at that point instead of the main line. Five trains passed the siding during the interval between the breakdown of the freight car and the arrival of No. 18.

It is stated by Conductor Austin that he read the order to the engineer and handed a copy to him. The officials of the road cannot account for the fact that the train approached the siding at such a high rate of speed.

OVER THE ENTIRE STATE.

Heavy Storm Damages Property in Colorado.

Denver, May 3.—A heavy storm, consisting of rain on the plains and snow in the mountains, prevailed over nearly the entire state Monday. Much damage to railroad property and delay by washouts has occurred. No accidents are reported, however. Hail and high winds in certain sections played havoc with orchards and gardens. The moisture will prove of incalculable value to the ranges and agricultural section as well as for furnishing water for mining.

OHIO MINERS STRIKE.

Eight Thousand Men Affected by Failure of Conference.

Indianapolis, April 30.—Vice President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America has received word that a strike of 8,000 coal miners in the eastern part of the Fifth Ohio subdistrict will occur shortly as the result of a fruitless conference between operators and miners extending over the last ten days.

MAY DAY TROUBLES

NUMBER OF STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS REPORTED FROM VARIOUS LOCALITIES.

Santa Fe Officials, Anticipating Trouble With Machinists, Close Every Shop From Chicago to Albuquerque. Six Thousand Workmen Affected at Chicago—Fifteen Hundred Bakers Out in Boston and Vicinity.

Topeka, Kan., May 3.—When the 2,000 Santa Fe machinists and workmen gathered at the big railway shops in this city to go to work they found the gates locked. The entire plot of ground of twenty-five acres is surrounded with a high oak board fence with few gates. These gates were locked and the men were told by armed guards that there was "nothing doing."

The Santa Fe officals asserted that they were simply anticipating a strike. They said information had come to them that the men had held a secret meeting and decided upon a strike.

At the general offices of the railway here it was stated that the order to close down was given to every shop town on the Santa Fe system from Chicago to Albuquerque. It is estimated that nearly 10,000 men are affected.

DEMAND INCREASED WAGES.

Fifteen Hundred Bakers Out in Boston and Vicinity.

Boston, May 2.—The principal difficulty to occur on May day in New England was the strike of more than 1,500 bakers in this city and nearby places, including Cambridge, Lynn, Salem, Brockton, Abington, Rockland, Stoughton, Northeaston, Weymouth, South Weymouth and Bridgewater. The strike was caused by the refusal of the master bakers to sign a new schedule calling for a sixty-hour week and $16 weekly for second hands and $18 for foremen. The larger hotels and restaurants are not affected by the strike.

Among other troubles are those caused by the demand of 400 carpenters in Springfield and Chicopee for an increase of 50 cents a day. There were minor strikes in the building trades in other places, but in New England as a whole the number of men in voluntary idleness is smaller this year than usual.

OVER SIX THOUSAND OUT.

Three Strikes and One Lockout in Effect at Chicago.

Chicago, May 2.—Three strikes and one lockout became effective here during the day and in consequence 6,200 wage earners are idle. Picture frame makers employed in six factories, to the number of 1,700, struck and 4,000 boot and shoe makers, employes of ten manufacturers, were locked out. One hundred teamsters of the Union Lime company and the Artesian Lime company refused to work because denied an advance of 50 cents a week. Nine baking concerns were tied up by a strike of 400 men, the firms refusing to grant "closed shop." Still another strike is in prospect, members of the Machinists' union employed in 500 shops throughout the city having voted to demand an increase of 2 to 5 cents an hour.

FIVE THOUSAND IDLE.

Number of Strikes in Effect at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 2.—About 5,000 workmen employed in the building trades have been rendered idle as the result of strikes ordered by local unions. The branches affected are the elevator constructors, cement finishers, stone cutters, tile layers and helpers, metallic lathers and granite cutters. All of the strikes were caused by the refusal of employers to grant increases in wages. The differences in most cases will probably be adjusted in a few days.

FIREMEN SAVE MANY

FATAL BLAZE OCCURS IN THREE-STORY TENEMENT AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, May 2.—One person has been asphyxiated and many other occupants of a three-story building in Halstead street have been injured and narrowly escaped death in a fire which swept through the place and cut off escape by the stairways both in the front and the rear. Only the prompt work of the firemen saved the lives of the other tenants, who were asleep when the fire started. In the work of rescue two firemen and one policeman were injured.

The fire, which did a damage of only a few thousand dollars, spread so rapidly that the occupants of the place were hemmed in by the flames before they could be awakened and told of their danger.

BURNED IN A BOX CAR.

Three Men and a Boy Perish at Council Bluffs, Ia.

Council Bluffs, Ia., May 2.—Three men and a boy were burned to death in a box car in the Northwestern yards here about 1 o'clock a. m. They are believed to have been hoboes trying to steal a ride.

Cannot Be Extradited.

Washington, May 3.—The United States supreme court has affirmed the decision of the United States circuit court releasing Thomas Walsh, alias Lynchehaun, the Irishman arrested in Indiana and for whom extradition was sought by the British authorities. Lynchehaun was charged with murder.

HE MISSED THE BEARS.

A Question That Rid President McKinley of a Beggar.

No one asking assistance was ever turned away empty handed from the McKinley door, and many were those who applied. One day a rather old man, with every appearance of belonging to the species hobo, called and asked for aid. He was given a small sum of money and, evidently thinking he had struck a soft spot, returned the following day and from then on went back every few days until finally, on what proved to be his last visit, the president came out while he was talking to a member of the household and, learning the man's errand, entered into conversation with him.

The man stated, in reply to the president's question, that he was a naturalized American citizen, but was born in Switzerland. The president asked if he had ever been in Berne, and he said he had lived there. The president then asked if he had ever seen the bears. This question rather stumped the old man, and he stammered that he could not understand. The president merely smiled and passed on.

Now, as every one who has any knowledge of Switzerland knows, the coat of arms of the city and state of Berne is a bear, and in a pit in the center of the city a number of live bears have been kept for years out of memory and are likely to be so kept for years to come, frequent bequests having been made for their comfort and many thousand francs being deposited in the banks of Berne for their maintenance. The old man, not knowing these facts, certainly could not have been from Berne and was a self convicted disciple of Ananias, and as he disappeared from the neighborhood it is to be supposed that some one must have shown him the joke.—Leslie's Weekly.

Willing to Overlook It.

"Dear sir," the general manager of the fire insurance company wrote to the local agent, "a few weeks ago your negligence in failing to notify the owners of a large office building that their insurance was about to expire, and to solicit them to reinsure, lost us a customer, and we gave you a month's notice to find another situation. Inasmuch, however, as that building was burned day before yesterday, we have decided to recall the notice. We will overlook the offense this time, but don't let it happen again."—Chicago Tribune.

Laborers of the Andes.

The majority of the laborers in the mountains of Peru are Cholos, or Indians born in the Sierra. They are found incapable of doing efficient work on the coasts or in the warmer altitudes without a long course of acclimatization. If gangs of these Cholos have for special purposes been taken down suddenly from the Sierra to work at altitudes of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet sickness and fever have resulted from the change.

Repetition.

"There was a time when animal worship prevailed in civilization."

"Well," answered the man who reads everything that is published, "judging from the dog and elephant stories turned out by popular writers, I should say we are getting round to it again."—Exchange.

Very Touching.

"Don't you think, after all, that woman's femininity touches and appeals to man?"

"Gracious, yes! My wife is always asking me for something."

The poultry industry is a feature which will no doubt receive a great deal more attention in the near future, says the Ada Herald. The recent high price of "biddy's" product will account for this in a measure, but it is a fact that the income from this source can be greatly increased with a change from the present careless method of letting the hen run at large over the farm and being left to hustle for itself.

State Insurance Commissioner Elmer H. Dearth reports that the business of township fire insurance companies increased nearly $1,500,000 during 1603, as compared with the year previous. The total insurance during the year was $14,571,734. The average cost per $100 of insurance on account of losses was 10 cents. The year previous it was 11 cents. The total receipts from members was $277,112.65. The total losses paid were $166,146, an increase of about $500.

A number of the state papers have been producing statistics which go to show that this spring is not so late after all. The Litchfield Independent produces the following as the unvarnished truth: Talking about late springs, this isn't a circumstance to the spring of 1858 or some year about that time, when T. C. Jewett walked on the crust of a winters' accumulation of snow three feet deep from Forest City to Lake Ripely and back, on the 10th of May. The Willmar Gazette says that in 1872 or '73 people were driving across Norway Lake in that county with teams on the first of May, and that though seeding was late a very good crop was raised.

If advertising—intelligent newspaper advertising draws trade to a town, then it is surely good business policy to advertise. Let us see if it does. We shall assume for instance that a general merchant holds out special inducements which will bring a customer from a distance who does not ordinarily trade here, remarks the Hillsboro Banner. That customer may patronize a half dozen business men before he leaves town and if he is well treated he will come again and perhaps eventually make this his regular, or at least principal, trading point. The same applies with equal force to bankers real estate dealers, lumber, implement, furniture and hardware dealers, and in fact to all business men, An attractive advertisement in a good medium benefits not only the advertiser, but indirectly every business man in the town. The logical conclusion, then, is that those who profit by the efforts and at the expense of others are in duty bound to reciprocate. You owe it to yourselves, to your neighbor and your town. If your ad goes into the columns of our rival we shall indirectly profit by it nevertheless.

PARCELS POST.

Many a man is opposed to the installation of a parcels post system by the government because he fears that it would injure his business. If the parcels post would be a good thing for the country at large the thing for the individual to do is to adjust his business so that it will not be injured. Hand laborers objected to the introduction of steam power because it would injure their business. Teamsters fought against the railroad for the same reason. Harvesting machinery has been broken by farm hands who thought that innovation would take the bread out of their mouths. Yet little by little people have adjusted themselves to the new order of things, and the world wags on. And the country merchant who objects to the parcels post because it would make it impossible for him to compete with the city merchant is making a very flimsy argument. Unless the country merchant can show a better reason for his existence than that imptied in in his argument, he would not be greatly missed. If there are other and better reasons for his existence, and doubtless there are, he will live and prosper in spite of the parcels cost, says the Grand Forks Herald.

The propriety of inaugurating a parcels post system depends on the answer to three main questions. Is the country now paying too much for transportation of its parcels considering the character of the service rendered? If so, is there any practicable method of securing a reduction of rrtes without the government going into the express business? Is it practicable for the government to carry parcels without loss at lower rates than at present? Manifestly, before the third question is taken up, it must be shown that present rates are too high, and that short of government operation, there is no practicable means of lowering them. When that is shown beyond a reasonable doubt, the third question may with propriety be taken up.

PYTHIAN FESTIVAL.

Big Gathering to be Held in Minneapolis This Month.

Red Lake Falls Knights of Pythias are very much interested in the Northwestern Pythian festival planned to be held at the national auditorium at Minneapolis on Saturday, May 21, under the auspices of the combined Knights of Pythias of that city.

The chief characteristic of the festival will be the exemplication of the ritualistic work of the order, in the page and knight ranks, by the celebrated "Iola Team" from Dayton, Ohio. This team numbers sixty-six men, and is said to be the best working and most elaborately costumed team in the order. Because of this team's being selected to conduct the exemplifications about 100 men, prominent in the order in Ohio will be present.

Nearly every Pythian lodge in the northwest has sent word that delegations, large and small, will attend the festival, and from North Dakota, lodges on the line of the Northern Pacific railroad are making arrangements to come by a special K. P. train. Many of the highest officers of the supreme lodge will attend as will the grand lodge officers of a number of states. Word has been received thet at least three governors of neighboring states will be present. Iowa points are talking of sending delegations, and one Chicago lodge is making arrangements to attend in a body. The festival will call together from 3,000 to 4,000 members of the order.

Cure Catarrh By Nature' Own Method—Every Breath of Hyomei Brings Relief.

Nearly every one who has catarrh knows how foolish it is to try and cure it by drugging the stomach. Temporary relief may be given, but a cure seldom comes.

Until recently your physician would have said the only way to cure catarrh would be to have a change of climate; but now with Hyomei you can carry a health giving climate in your vest pocket and by breathing it a few minutes four times a day soon cure yourself.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00 and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if one bottle does not cure, an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents. It the most economical of all remedies advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only one that follows nature in her method of treating diseases of the respiratory organs.

A. L. Reiobert has sold a great many Hyomei outfits and the more he sells, the more convinced he is that he is perfectly safe in guaranteeing to refund the money if Hyomei does not cure.

The Gazette appears as a ten page paper this week, and during the life of the story, "The Gentleman from Indiana" will run ten pages, a week. To be interesting, a continued story should be run in large installments and this is what the Gazette proposes to do, even at the additional expense of printing extra pages. There is nothing too good for the Gazette readers.

The most perilous hour of a man's life is when he is tempted to despond, says the Fertile Journal. The man loses courage loses all; there is no more hope of him than a dead man; but it matters not how poor he may be, how much pushed by circumstances, how much deserted by friends, how much lost to the world, if he only keeps his courage, holds up his head, works with both hands, and with unconquerable will determines to be and to do what becomes a man, all will be well.

The general public has known for a long time that the genial Paul Berthon was strong on the band business, and have paid tribute to him as a concert program maker many times during the past year, but his latest creation along this line can be called the best ever, and the readers' attention attention is called to it in the large ad of the Surprise Store on the first page of to-day's Gazette. Paul has prepared a program that cannot help but please the buyers of the county, and every number called for is worthy of an enthusiastic encore. Teachers all over the county are preparing to attend, and much good work will no doubt result from the term.

The final concert by the Red Lake Falls band was given at the Metropolitan opera house last Friday evening, and a large representation of the people were present to be entertained. The program was the heaviest of the season, but the boys handled it in excellent shape, and the applause of the large crowd encouraged them to their best efforts. The clarinet duet, by Messrs. Onstad and Tracy, the singing by the male quintette and the work of the violin quartette, as specialties, were all liberally applauded, and the concert as a whole seemed to do all that was intended for it. On behalf of the band Attorney F. A. Grady thanked the people of Red Lake Falls for the excellent support they had given the organization during the past year, and then on behalf of the citizens he thanked the band for their work, and paid glowing tributes to the members for their untiring efforts, and to Prof. Onstad and Manager Berthon for the important part each has played in the advancement of the band as a home institution. After Mr. Grady had finished, Dr. Watson rose to the occasion and in a well chosen speech added his approval to all that had been said and assured the people and the band that the present friendly relations would by all means be continued. A pleasant dance followed the concert, and the evening's entertainment proved to be one that will long be remembered by those who attended.

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

WINE OF CARDUI

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism,

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at Schreiter's Drug Store.

Not A Sick Day Since.

"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since. Neighbors of mine have been cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney troubles and General Debility." This is what B. F. Bass, of Fremont, N. C. writes. Only 50c, at W. A. Schreiter Druggist.

Worth Reading,

In all the Baking Powder "Wars" that have intermittently waged in the last twenty years, there is one point that has been overlooked by the belligerent makers of these goods. Rival manufacturers have contented themselves with accusing their competitors of making an unwholesome product, The question of keeping quality, and, therefore, efficiently in raising bread, the only purpose for which the baking powder is used, appears to have been generally ignored, There are many powders which, when fresh, and the can is first uncovered, will do fairly good work, but after standing for some time on the pantry shelf, the powder becomes so weak as to be almost worthless as far as raising bread is concerned. This is especially true in the case of the so-called "Phosphate" powders, which were it not for this fatal defect, would be satisfactory baking powders. The unsuccessful attempts to overcome this fault of the "Phosphate" powders has enlisted the services of more chemists and costs more money than the solution of any other problem connected with the raising of bread. The makers of these "Phosphate" powders raise a great cry about the wonderful healthfulness of their product, but what matters of all this if the powder will not fulfil the only object for which it is purchased? The housewife to whom economy is an object will avoid these "Phosphate" powders.

One of the greatest blessings a modest man can wish for is a good, reliable set of bowels. If you are not the happy possessor of such an outfit you can greatly improve the efficiency of those you have by the judicious use of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are pleasant to take and agreeable in effect. For sale at Schreiter's Drug Store.

Architect Strassburger will come over from Crookston tomorrow to confer with the contractor in regard to the erection of the building.

If someone offered you a nice $1.50 book you would gladly take it and read it, especially if it was one of the best stories of the present day. This is practically what you get when you read the "Gentleman from Indiana," which begins in this issue. There is no better story published today, and if you once start it you will be anxious to get each succeeding installment.

At the regular meeting of the city council last Thursday night a petition was presented by the residents of "Klondyke," asking that a bridge be put in over the Clearwater on the site of the one recently carried away. The council carefully went over the matter, and while no definite action was taken, it is likely that a bridge large enough to allow one team to cross at a time will be built.

The local tennis club held a meeting at the K. of P. hall last Thursday evening and prepared to get to work on the new courts that they will build this year. The plans are to build two single courts just south of the present location of the double ones, which will give the club ample room for all to get a chance at this healthful exercise. Several new members were taken into the club.

A. C. Wanderlich, travelling auditor of the Robertson Lumber company, was over from Grand Forks yesterday calling on Agent Crompe and looking over the prospects for the season's business. Mr. Wanderlich expressed himself to the Gazette as being well satisfied with the showing made by Mr. Crompe since he had charge of the yard here and looks for a large volume of business the coming fall.

Is Red Lake Falls to celebrate the glorious fourth this year? Last year we laid down for our neighbors on the north, and it appears that the time is at hand for us to entertain the people of Red Lake county in a real old-time celebration. What about it, gentlemen? Now is the accepted time to get at it if we expect to do anything, and if not let's say so so that the people can make plans to go some where else.

Romsos Bros., the Wylie general merchants, call the attention of Gazette readers to the fact that they are prepared to take care of the wants of the public during the coming season. Romsos Bros., by up-to-date methods and fair treatment, have built up a business at Wylie that is seldom equalled in a place of that size, and are deserving of the patronage of everyone in their territory. Read their ad.

About forty families from town went out to the Healy mill last Sunday and had the first picnic party of the season. Tables were set and dinner cooked, and it goes without saying that the affair was an enjoyable one. The party spent the afternoon there, and several excellent pictures were secured of the group, to keep as mementos of the pleasing affair. It is likely that several of these pleasant gathering will be held during the coming summer by the same crowd.

John Clement, an old resident of Terrebonne township, died Monday at his home in that township after an illness of several weeks. Deceased was fifty-six years old and leaves a family of several children. He had been a resident of that town for a great many years, and was a highly respected citizen. The funeral was held from the Terrebonne church Tuesday, Rev. Father Fayolle, of this city, conducting the services.

Miss Carrie Pirath, who has been the "hello" girl at the local telephone office for the past two years resigned her position the first of the week, and will leave during the coming month for Crookston, where she has accepted a like position with the telephone company there. Miss Pirath has made an obliging central, and will give the patrons of the Crookston line excellent satisfaction. Miss Clara Zaiser takes her place at the office here.

The Board of Health publishes a clean-up notice this week that should be promptly heeded by the people of the city. "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," and as our reputation for Godliness is widespread, we may as well have the next virture. With concerted action on the part of the people, Red Lake Falls can be made one of the prettiest towns in Minnesota, and the way to get at it is to heed the admonitions of the Board of Health.

Dan Latendresse and Zetique Bray left Monday evening for an extensive trip through the western states, and will visit all the principal points of interest before returning home. They will first go to Los Angeles, Cal., and after spending some time in that part of the world will go north into Washington, Oregon and Montana and look over the country thoroughly. They expect to be absent several months, and it is a foregone conclusion that they will have an immense time.

Mentor Herald: The Grove Park Creamery has commenced operations the first batch of butter being churned to-day. The only thing that is needed to make the enterprise a success is a large supply of cream, but owing to the scarcity of feed and hay the supply of that article will be limited until the green grass comes. It is hoped that all the farmers in this vicinity will patronize it and thus derive benefit from it and make it a success.

Hon. Marcus Johnson arrived here Monday for a week's sojourn, to look after his business interests. Mr. Johnson has just returned from a two months' trip throughout the east, having visited all of the larger cities in that part of the country while away. He says that the Roosevelt sentiment in that part of the world is even more pronounced than it is in this section, and the opinion is that that popular idol of the American people will receive the greatest vote ever given to a candidate for president.

The Gazette learns that a couple of the popular young men of the city are to be hauled up on the carpet for attending school out of school hours—or at least they thought they would be for a few days. It is said that visions of an irate janitor with threats of exposure are still troubling them in their sleep, and while the Gazette isn't supposed to know anything about it, nevertheless it hazards a guess that in the future their fondness for music wont tempt them to break through a window to get at an instrument.

The weather during the past ten days has resembled July a great deal more than it has the first of May, and as a result seeding operations are well advanced, and by this time next week the farmers of Red Lake county will have finished this important work. The "oldest inhabitant" has a hunch that a bumper crop is in store for us this year, and from the favorable transformation from winter to summer, it is apparent at this time that the prediction would come true. A big crop es the prices farm products are bound to bring this fall, and Red Lake county will make a long leap toward the head of the procession. Let us trust that things have so shaped themselves that the farmers will have their inning this year, and may they score a harvest that has never been equalled.

THE LAND WILL BE SOLD IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Red Lake Reservation To Be Opened June 20.—Land Will Be Auctioned To The Highest Bidder.—Sale Will Occupy Several Days and Large Crowds Will Attend.

Dispatches from Washington state that Thief River Falls is the place and June 12 the date for the opening of the lands for sale within the Red Lake reservation in accordance with the terms of the Steenerson act, passed at the recent session of congress. The lands will be sold at public auction in accordance with the recomendation of Senator Clapp and Representative Steenerson.

One of the requirements of the regulations is that purchasers must deposit one-fifth of the price of the and within twenty-four hours after making the bid. If this rule is not complied with the sale will be canceled and the land reoffered. Under the law a single purchaser can purchase but one quarter. It was the latter provision that prompted Secretary Hitchcock to adopt the suggestion of Land Commissioner Richards, Messrs. Clapp and Steenerson that the land be sold at public auction.

The secretary, guided by his experience in selling timber under the Morris act, was constrained to make the sales at Red Lake under sealed bids. His purpose was to prevent the formation of combinations and pools.

The Minnesota members pointed out in a strong way that as purchasers were limited to bidding in only a quarter that it was not possible to form combinations to keep prices down.

The view of the Minnesotans was concurred in by Land Commissioner Richards and that afternoon the secretary approved the regulations submitted to him by Commissioner Richards.

Late Advices Say Date is Changed.

Washington, May 11.—Owing to the conflict of the date with the sale of Chippewa Indian lands at Crookston, on June 15th, Commissioner Richards of the General Land Office today directed that the sale of the Red Lake reservation lands at Thief River Falls, begin June 20, instead of the date originally fixed. The register and receiver of the Crookston land office will be at both openings to expedite the work.

SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Martha Hage, Wife of Wyandotte Farmer, the Plaintiff.

Although wedded for nearly thirty years and being the mother of ten children all grown to manhood Mrs. Martha Hage, of Emardville, filed an application for divorce with Judge William Watts of the district court. Mr. Hage, who is a prosperous farmer of this county, worth approximately $7,000, is accused in the application of inhuman treatment and a demand made by Mrs. Hage for alimony and the custody of the children.

Mr. and Mrs. Hage were married in Norway early in the '70s and after coming to America have lived a peaceful and contented life until the last year or more during which family dissensions and troubles have occasioned more or less hard feeling. Attorney Grady, of this city, represents Mrs. Hage and as yet no answer has been made to the statements set forth by Mrs. Hage. The hearing of the case on the question of allmony and the custody of the children will be heard by Judge Watts Friday in his chambers at Crookston and both parties will be represented.

FIREMEN ELECT OFFICERS.

H. Hennemuth Chosen as Chief for the Ensuing Year.

The regular annual election of officers of the Red Lake Falls Fire Department took place at the meeting last Saturday evening, and resulted in the selection of the following:

Chief—H. Hennemuth.
Assistant Chief—Milt Converse.
Secretary—Fred Borchers.
Treasurer—Wm. H. Kreuger.
Finance Committee—George Hennings, Frank Brouilette, Sam E. Hunt.

Milt Converse, Frank Brouilette and George Hennings were selected as delegates to the firemen's tournament at Hallock the latter part of June, at which time the department here joins the Valley circuit, and will likely be represented by a running team at next year's tournament. Ralph Wyer was appointed as a committee of one to look after the organization of a running team to represent the department next year, and one will likely be organized soon and commence active practice this summer.

Red Lake Falls has a fine fire department, and every citizen is pleased to know that it is in a flourishing condition.

South Shore's Success.

Mart Adson, the popular general agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad, writes the Gazette a letter in regard to his company, he says in part:

"Our steadily increasing business has made it necessary for us to seek larger quarters and on May 1, we moved our city ticket office two doors west of its former location, to 430 West Superior St., Spalding Hotel Block.

The new office will be much more commodious. It has been redecorated throughout and a new tile floor has been put in. These improvements together with our new furniture and fixtures, which have been made to order to fit the office, make it one of the attractive railroad offices in the northwest."

MILL COMPANY RE-ORGANIZED

Northern Minnesota Milling Company Will Again Do Business.

Articles were signed this week re-organizing the Northern Minnesota Milling company for business, and it is expected that within the next couple of weeks the work of grinding flour will be commenced.

The new officers of the company are Leo Steinert, president; Theo Majeres, vice-president; C. F. Johnson, secretary.

It is their intention to operate the mill from now until August, when they will close down and convert the mill to a complete plan sifter system, which will make it modern in every respect.

The Northern Pacific has fixed up its tracks and bridges, so that the shipping facilities will be first-class, and the promoters look forward to a successful run.

The mill will give emloyment to several hands, and will help Red Lake Falls.

The Gazette wisees them success.

THE BROTHERHOOD ACTIVE.

Red Lake Falls M. B. A.'s Add a Bunch of Members.

The regular session of the lodge of Modern Brotherhood of America last Thursday evening was one of the most sucessful ones in the history of the order. A class of twelve new members was initiated, which brings the membership to an even 60. The addition of the new members was the direct result of a five days' visit of Director J. H. Miller, of Grand Forks. Mr. Miller is pleased with the work done by the officers and members, and says that he has never met a crowd of more enthusiastic workers.

The Brotherhood will hold a special meeting tonight, to admit another class of new members, and after the work a social session will be held, and a good time is looked forward to. It is expected that ten couples from the Thief River lodge will attend.

GREAT NORTHERN BUILDING A NEW RAILROAD

Work On the Pelican Rapids Extension Has Been Commenced.—Line Will Pass Trough Dugdale and Connect With Road at This Point.—Direct Line to Canadian Border.

Tuesday's Crookston Journal is responsible for the statement that workmen are actually at work south of Dugdale on the Pelican Rapids extension of the Great Northern, which was surveyed and a portion of the grade completed some years ago, and the inhabitants along the route look for prosperous times through the importance of being upon the route of the new through Canadian line. It is understood that work will be done by Guthrie & Son, the Great Northern contractors at both ends of the line at the same time and that the Rosean-Pelican Rapids line will be in operation and hauling the fall crop of 1904.

Outfits have been sent northward, but whether or not actual work on the line north of Thief River has been started is not known but that arrangements have been made for camps and that townsite promoters who have means of being on the inside are busy is a patent fact. The fact that men and teams are already at work on the southern end indicates that the work will be rushed to completion.

The line will touch Maple Bay and if daily trains are run should aid materially in popularizing that portion of the lake.

Dugdale people are authority for the statement that the Great Northern intends to make the new extension one of the most important in the northern portion of the state and that Red Lake Falls will receive its quota of business through the construction of the line. At this place the new line will connect with the old Thief River line, running northward through St. Hilaire and fulfill the first idea of the designers when they laid out the present Thief River line and graded the portion of the Pelican Rapids line, now in condition for track laying.

Should the line go through Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls and the through business to Rosean and Canada be routed over the new line, Crookston as a freight collecting and railroad center would lose a portion of the trade which now centers there.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Thief River and Red Lake Falls Will Play Ball Sunday.

Arrangements have been completed for a game of ball between the nines representing Thief River Falls and this city, the game to take place on the Thief River Falls grounds, Sunday.

This will be the first game of the season for both the clubs, but as considerable work has been done by each along the practice lines, a good contest is looked for.

The battery for Red Lake Falls will be Healy and Richards, and the balance of the team will be made up as follows:

Buse, 1b; Brady, 2b; Ittner, 3b; Johnson, ss; Pepin, cf; Bray, rf; Erickson, lf.

The material is good for a first-class team, and if it were possible to hire a good pitcher to releive Healy the success of the boys would be assured.

A large number of the citizens will follow the team to Thief River Sunday to witness the contest.

WILL BE MANY CHICKENS.

Evidences of Good Fall Hunting Are Apparent.

Crookston Journal: Boom-boom-boom, the sound of the prairie hen in the evening on favorite ground after the long day of feeding in the woods and field, more pronounced in certain portions of Polk county this spring, than for some time and farmers and hunters predict one of the largest "hatches" or crops of prairie chickens in many years.

The birds are being left alone by the farmers and it is quite probable that this year unlike others will see fall shooting good and the birds greatly in evidence upon the prairies.

In certain portions of the country the feathers upon the mating grounds occupied by the birds make the ground literally white and the sight in the evening when the chickens are gathered together is a pretty one. They are tame and may easily be approached which is an evidence that hunters and farmers have not molested them and that the shooting in the fall will be good. Sportsmen from this city who spent yesterday on the prairies with their dogs saw large numbers both in coveys and in single pairs. Farmers out Gentilly way report a great abundance of the fowl and people coming in from Red Lake Falls say the birds are much in evidence in the extreme eastern end of the county.

Farmers this spring have a respect and appreciation for the game laws, which has not been manifested for some years, if ever before. They themselves do not shoot the game protected by the state laws and hunters if any parade the fields will be given to understand that out of season shooting will not be permitted. In avoiding and checking spring and summer shooting the quality of hunting to be had in the fall is greatly enhanced and hunters will be watched both by the farmers and deputy game wardens, that the birds may be protected.

WHEAT ABOVE GROUND.

Grain Seeded Early Already Growing Nicely.

Warm winds and rain combined during the latter part of last week caused wheat already sown to germinate so rapidly that yesterday saw many acres of wheat fields throughout the green with the tender sprouts of the wee crop.

Farmers who were fortunate in having their fall plowing done and their seed in early have wheat several inches high in their fields and feel quite happy over the prospects. The chilly weather the first of the week, according to old wheat growers is the best thing possible for the new crop. The cold has a tendency to confine the energies of the young plant to the ground and the result is a healthy root, which in the summer aids materially in adding to both the quality and quantity of the crop, as well as resisting dry spells and hot weather.

The farmers south and southeast of the city apparently have been more fortunate in getting their lands sown this spring than any other portion.

In the neighborhood of Gentilly where the fields are of a somewhat rolling character, the new green wheat is particularly visible, and the general appearance of the farms in that locality would indicate that the farmers have been up and doing while the sun shone. Large fields yet remain to be seeded to wheat, but all that has not been plowed will be sown to oats, barley and other cereals as well as grasses which do not require the time to mature that wheat does.

MAY GO BY ERSKINE.

Swamp Near That Place May Cause Change in Soo Line.

From reliable sources it is said to be stated at headquarters that the proposed route of the Soo line through Erskine will be changed because of the location of a large swamp to the north of that place which would necessitate a very expensive piece of track building. The surveyors for the company on their first trip over the route were unable to detect the presence of a bog, because of the heavy snows and frost which covered the ground, but it is said that as soon as the later engineers examined the grounds after the melting of the snow the strip of ground was pronounced impossible for successful railroad building and arrangements made for the changing of the route so as to avoid the wet spot. The new location of the line will bring the crossing between the towns of Erskine and Mentor and in all probability will result in the establishment of a town between Erskine and Terrebonne, on the Soo line. If this arrangement is carried out the track will cross the Great Northern about three miles east of Mentor and will traverse the high sand ridge.

IN ORDER TO RAISE PRICES.

Michigan and Wisconsin Shingle Men Will Curtail Production.

Escanaba, Mich., May 7.—Representatives of thirty-one shingle manufacturing companies of Northern Wisconsin and the peninsula of Michigan, under the name of the Northwestern Shingle Manufacturers' association, met here and agreed to curtail the production of shingles until the price of the product is raised to the normal level.

The manufacturers claim they are unable to make shingles without loss at the present price and some mills may not open for work at all this season.

The price of shingles in the Central West, it was claimed by members of the association, has been driven to a bed rock basis by shipping into the territory great quantities of shingles from the Pacific coast.

BRITISH DEFEAT TIBETANS.

Nearly Two Hundred Killed During a Stubborn Battle.

British Camp, Karo Pass, Tibet, May 9.—A stiff fight Friday to drive the Tibetans from their positions two miles below the pass lasted for six hours.

The Tibetans, numbering 1,500, held the positions with great tenacity and lost nearly 200 before they were expelled. The British losses were Captain Bethune and three men killed and twenty-one men wounded.

A snow storm prevailed throughout the fight.

WILL KEEP OLD NAME

CHANGE AT PRESENT OPPOSED BY COMMITTEE OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Boston, May 7.—The committee of fifteen which was appointed by the national triennial convention of the Episcopal church at San Francisco in 1901 to consider the advisability of changing the legal name of the denomination has prepared an extended report in which the opinion is expressed that any change at this time is inexpedient. The report is to be submitted to the general convention, which will assemble in this city next October.

The report is signed by all fifteen members of the committee, although three appendices, one signed by seven members, a second signed by five and a third by one, are attached.

The second appendix recommends that the words "Protestant Episcopal" on the title page of the book of common prayer be stricken out.

Although officially party lines were not drawn in the investigation of the sentiment in all of the seventy-eight dioceses and missionary districts a change was generally favored by the high church party and, with one or two exceptions, the committee, while agreeing on the report itself, divided on the supplementary statement.

NEW SHORT STORIES

Plaisted's Thousand Cash.

Fred Plaisted, once the professional rowing champion of the world, has had many odd experiences during his peregrinations around the world, and he has his stories, all interesting, about racing in South Africa, India, Australia and China as well as in America and England. "How I Won the Sculling Championship of China" is the favorite yarn.

He had gone to Shanghai after a series of victories in Australia and was resting. Some acquaintances told him that they wanted him to meet the best man in town for the championship of China and 1,000 cash.

"I gladly accepted," says Plaisted, "but imagine my surprise when on the appointed day my opponent made his appearance in a square nosed punt, propelled by an oar tied to the stern. Of course as soon as he saw my racing shell it was all off. He refused to compete. I knew something about punt sculling myself, but as $1,000 is not picked up every day I called for a boat like his and met him at his own game. I never had an easier race, and he was nearly 200 yards behind at the finish.

"On returning to the float I was received with great cheering. The referee, an American merchant of Shanghai, made a complimentary speech and presented to me, strung on a long piece of wire, a lot of brass checks with holes in them.

"'How about the money?' I inquired in a whisper as he shook hands with me. 'Are these people reliable?'

"'The money?' he said in surprise. 'Why, that's the thousand cash.' He pointed to the junk. 'A cash is the Chinese farthing and worth about the thousandth part of a dollar. You have a full dollar there.'

"And to think that I expected a thousand dollars! It took a wagon to cart my dollar home."

A Finger In the Pie.

Dr. Perkins Carter, who was the late Senator Hanna's physician, tells this story about Mr. Hanna and an English waiter:

In London one day Mr. Hanna visited a very old and quaint chophouse on the Strand. Here the meat is all wheeled row to you on a handcart, and you choose from the cart the steak or the chop or the joint that you desire to have cooked.

"THAT IS THE PRINT OF MY THUMB."

Well, Mr. Hanna took a chop, and then he ordered a piece of game pie. The waiter was a careless, slovenly fellow, and Mr. Hanna said to him after the pie was brought:

"What is this mark on my pie, waiter?"

The man bent down over the pie and examined the mark. Then he answered jauntily:

"That mark, sir? That is the print of my thumb, sir. Just had my thumb in the chocolate I served to the guest over there, sir. Cut it out for you, sir?"

JAPS IN POSSESSION OF RAILROAD RUNNING TO RUSSIAN STRONGHOLD.

CZAR'S ARMY EVACUATES FENGHUANCHENG, WHICH IS OCCUPIED BY ENEMY.

St. Petersburg. May 7.—Port Arthur is cut off from all communication by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupied the railroad and cut the telegraph.

The Japanese made two landings, one at Pitsewo, a point on the east coast of the peninsula about seventy-five miles above Port Arthur, and the other at Port Adams, which is situated on an arm of Society bay, on the west coast of the peninsula, directly opposite and about twenty miles distant from Pitsewo.

ENTRANCE IS BLOCKED

PORT ARTHUR HARBOR CLOSED TO ALL VESSELS EXCEPT THE SMALLER BOATS.

Tokio, May 7.—Vice Admiral Togo reports that the entrance to Port Arthur is blocked completely to all vessels except small boats.

He adds that the Japanese have not lost a single war vessel, although the attack resulted in considerable loss of life.

Tokio, May 9.—The casualties in the last attempt of the Japanese fleet to block Port Arthur, which took place on May 3, are one officer, Commander Takayangi, commanding the steamer Yedo Maru, and six men, killed; four men seriously and five officers and eleven men slightly wounded. Fourteen officers and seventy-four men are missing and eight officers and thirty-six men were rescued uninjured.

All the officers of the blocking ships, including Commander Takayangi, who was killed, have been decorated and granted annuities by the emperor.

RETIRE TO LIAOYANG

FIFTEEN THOUSAND RUSSIANS BEGIN THE MARCH FROM NEWCHWANG.

London, May 10.—The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says that 15,000 Russians are retiring from Newchwang to Liaoyang.

The correspondent says that Chinese bandits have destroyed the road to Tashichia and to Haicheng. Tashichia is the junction for the Newchwang branch of the Port Arthur-Mukden route and Haicheng is further north on the main line. The Russians are making a new road.

The Russian authorities have promised to leave sufficient guard to prevent pillaging by the Chinese bandits.

CONTINUE TO RETIRE

RUSSIANS EVACUATE FENGHUANCHENG WITHOUT GIVING BATTLE TO JAPS.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—According to a persistent rumor General Kuropatkin decided not to give battle at Fenghuancheng. The Russians have fallen back and the Japanese have occupied the place.

The Russian retreat from Fenghuancheng is confirmed. The Japanese pressed the retreating troops, though with few losses to either side.

The Japanese destroyed the railway at Port Adams, blowing up the bridges.

STUNS THE RUSSIANS.

Loss on the Yalu Far Greater Than Anticipated.

St. Petersburg, May 5.—The Russian losses at the battle of Kiulienchen were 2,000 men and 40 officers—far greater than previous reports indicated.

This is the official estimate of General Kashtalinsky, who directly commanded the division that suffered the brunt of the attack and whose report was received Wednesday by the emperor. Many are inclined to place the Russian losses even higher. General Kashtalinsky mentions also that more than 700 wounded had arrived at Fenghuancheng and these may not be included in his calculations. He made no attempt to estimate the Japanese losses, merely stating that they must have been colossal.

Chinese Becoming Excited.

New York, May 9.—According to advices from the North, cables the Herald's Peking correspondent, the native Chinese are becoming excited owing to reports which are reaching them of continued success of the Japanese arms.

GENERAL PFLUG REPORTS.

Tells of Investment of Port Arthur by the Japs.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—The ministry of war has received the following telegram from Major General Pflug, chief of the military staff:

"According to the information I have received, seven of the enemy's transports, and afterwards about forty, appeared opposite Pitsewo on the evening of May 4.

"On the morning of May 5, the Japanese began to land at Pitsewo, and on the coast near Cape Terminal, about fifteen miles southwest of Pitsewo, under cover of artillery fire.

"At this moment about sixty transports were observed bearing down upon the whole front and our posts retired from the shore.

"All papers in the postoffice at Pitsewo were removed and the Russian inhabitants abandoned the town.

"According to Chinese reports, by the evening of May 5, about 10,000 of the enemy's troops had landed and taken up quarters in the Chinese villages near the posts of debarkation.

"The enemy sent two columns of about one regiment each, one in a westerly direction and the other to the southward.

"On May 6, a passenger train from Port Arthur was fired upon a mile and a quarter outside Polandien, about forty miles north of Port Arthur, by 100 Japanese infantrymen occupying the heights east of the railway. The train carried many passengers, 200 sick occupying an ambulance carriage flying the Red Cross flag. Two of the sick were wounded. The train succeeded in reaching Polandien."

Wentz, who so mysteriously disappeared Oct. 14, 1903, was found Sunday afternoon near Kelly View, within a mile of the place where he was last seen alive. The body, which was lying on the ground in plain view, was in a state of preservation sufficient for identification.

Young Wentz was the son of a Philadelphia millionaire, and was in charge of his father's mines in Wise county. Since his disappearance more than $50,000 have been offered for any news of him.

TWO SHIPS MISSING

SEALING SCHOONERS TRIUMPH AND UMBRINA HAVE BEEN GIVEN UP FOR LOST.

Vessels Were Engaged in Operations Along the North Pacific Coast and Wreckage Found Indicates the Loss of Both—Forty-two Persons Believed to Have Perished on Board the Ill Fated Craft.

Victoria, B. C., May 9.—The sealing schooners Triumph and Umbrina, of this port, have been given up as lost at sea with all hands. Captain Hann of the sealing schooner Jessie, which has just arrived from a cruise along the coast from California to Queen Charlotte islands, picked up south of the Columbia river broken sealing boats and canoes, part of a schooner's rail, davit and other tackle belonging to the schooner Umbrina. When last spoken the sealer was headed for the west coast of Vancouver island to land her mate, who was very ill. Since then she has not been heard of and is long overdue. The Umbrina was owned by Captain Peppet, and carried a half white, half Indian crew, twenty-three all told, and was one of the largest of the fleet in Queen Charlotte sound.

Captain Hann found a schooner's boom with sail attached and from indications known to him he believes it belonged to the Triumph, also long overdue, and not amongst the fleet now bound for the Siberian coast. The Triumph carried a white crew of nineteen and was the oldest and largest of the Victoria sealers. The owners have abandoned hope.

VICTIM OF HIGHWAYMEN.

Aged Priest Succumbs to Injuries Inflicted by Thugs.

Omaha, May 5.—Rev. Father Edward Geary, seventy-five years old, pastor of Holy Catholic church, died Wednesday as the result of injuries inflicted on him by highwaymen Monday night. The assault occurred in front of the church, by two men, one of whom called Rev. Mr. Geary to his aid, saying he was in distress. Before the highwaymen could search the priest's pockets, Father Fitzpatrick frightened them away. A man giving the name of James Crandall is under arrest in connection with the assault.

In 1870 and again in 1874 Stanley was sent by the New York Herald to Africa, where he found Livingston, discovered the source of the Congo, and his work later under direction of the king of Belgium, resulted in the founding of the Congo Free State. Mr. Stanley was for many years a Liberal Unionist member of parliament, and was the author of numerous books on travel and exploration.

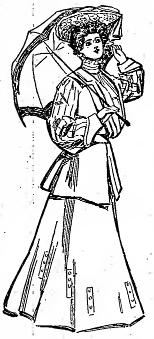
WOMAN AND FASHION

An Early Summer Costume.

White linen is used effectively in this tub frock, which is fashioned in quaint style with much fagoting and hand stitchery. The blouse has a V band of fagoting to which the body portion is applied in box plaits, this blousing prettily into the belt and the fastening effected in the back with pearl buttons. The sleeve is plaited at the shoulder and opens at the elbow to admit a lace trimmed puff. The skirt is cleverly shirred over the hips, the front being plain and strapped with fagoting, and three deep tucks above the hem make a very smart finish. The hat of natural tint panama is simply trimmed with black velvet ribbon and a monture of summer flowers.



THE ELABORATE TUB FROCK.

Brown a Stylish Color.

Brown in every shade will be popular in the summer and spring clothes, says the Ladies' Home Journal. This means that the pongee and shantung silks and the washable cotton materials, such as india linen, batiste and holland linen, will continue in favor. There are many new names given to these new colorings in brown, but in reality they are simply ecru, cream and the dark tones of brown. Brown is a good color in all its shades for summer, for general wear, as it does not fade, neither does it show the dust. For these same reasons the greens and the mixed Scotch tweeds are liked.

For the more dressy gowns, both for the street and the house, the pale steel grays will be used and also the dull pastel shades of green.

Colored slip linings are worn with the open meshed materials, and the color of the slip lining is brought out in a stronger note in the trimming of the gown. The changeable shot taffetas are used for lining the loose, open weaved brown and blue voiles and hopsackings, and for the trimmings of these gowns narrow plaid silks combining the coloring of the lining and the material are used. In the making up of an open weaved blue hop sacking or of one of the new striped transparent woolen materials in blue a dull green lining would be effective.

The Westbrook Sentinel man says a spring poem in the Butterfield Advocate is signed "Helen Hunt Summer." A man would have to go to Helen Hunt Summer if he found any so far this season.

Die when I may, I want it said of me by those who knew me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower, where I thought a flower would grow.—Abraham Lincoln.

The Minnesota Prohibition Convention will be held in Minneapolis June 14 and 15. The sixty-first district which contains, Red Lake, Beltrami and Norman counties is entitled to 11 delegates. The sixty-third in which lies Marshall, Roseau and Kitson is entitled to 9 delegates.

Halvor Steenerson has certainly made a good record for his first term in congress says the Ada Index. His latest success is to have 160 acres alloted to the Indians of the White Earth reserve instead of 80 acres as has been the custom for some time. This will make Halvor solid with Lo.

William E. Young, a prominent Mankato attorney, is a candidate for one of the places on the state railroad and warehouse commission, and his friends are working hard for his success. The second district should be given a place on the commission, as it is not asking for any other place on the ticket, and Mr. Young is the logical candidate. He is a good Republican, a first-class attorney, and would be a credit to the state as a railroad commissioner. The people of the Second district will no doubt unite on Young, which will insure his nomination.

The average educated man gets a salary of $1,000 per year. He works 40 years, making him a total of $40,000 in a lifetime. The average day laborer gets $1.50 per day, 300 days in the year or $450 per year. In ten years he earns $4,500 or $18,000 a lifetime. The difference between $40,000 and $18,000 or $22,000 equals the value of an education in dollars. To acquire this earning capacity requires 12 years at school of 180 days each, or a total of 2,160 days. Divide $22,000, value of an education, by 2,160, number of days required in getting it, and we find that each day at school is worth a little more than $10 to the pupil. Can't afford to keep them out, can we?—Ex.

Minnesota day at the St. Louis Exposition will be Tuesday, June 7. The announcement was made in a circular issued by the executive committee of the Minnesota Editorial Association. The annual excursion of the association will leave St. Paul June 4, and the editors will spend seven days at the exposition, stopping at the "Inside Inn." They will have charge of the exercises June 7, when the Minnesota building will be dedicated. The Minnesota commissioners will be there and arrangements are being made to have Governor Van Sant and his staff present. Senator Nelson and Congressman Tawney are expected to deliver addresses.

The "Minnesota Politics" man in the Minneapolis Journal sees a prospect of a "dark horse" in the governorship race, on account of the present nasty fight being waged by Dunn and Collins, and says that new candidate talk for governor is rife on the streets of Minneapolis. Many republicans have been heard during the last day or two to express the opinion that the situation is favorable for some new man, without previous entanglements, to get into the race for governor. The Collins men and the Dunn men are standing pat, and from present indications will fight it out, but they have not lined up all the workers, or anything like a majority of the republican voters, and it is claimed that if the strife between the leading candidates becomes more bitter there will be a strong movement in behalf of some new man. There is considerable sentiment in favor of renominating Governor Van Sant for another term, but the governor is just as antagonistic to the elements behind Dunn as Judge Collins is, and his name does not find any favor in that quarter. Some who will not stand for Van Sant speak favorably of Eustis, and men who never had any use for the ex-mayor before have expressed a willingness to get behind him this time.

STATE IMMIGRATION CONVENTION.

The Minnesota Immigration Con vention will be held in St. Paul June 14th and 15th next. The purpose of this convention is to promote the agricultural interests of Minnesota and if possible to create a permanent organization. Able speakers will be present who will address the convention on the varied resources of the state. These addresses will be published in pamphlet form and given a wide circulation. This convention originated with the Commercial Club of St. Paul which has the active co-operation of similar bodies in Minneapolis and Duluth. Delegates are to be appointed in every county by the governor, and a very large attendance is expected. This is one of the most important meetings that has been held in the state. No organized effort has been made for many years to attract settlers to Minnesota. We have no bureau of information whose business it is to gather accurate statistics and no facts of any value are to be obtained from any source other than government reports. This condition has been unfortunate, for while the states about us have regular official boards to gather and circulate information of interest to prospective settlers, Minnesota has done nothing to attract homeseekers, and immigration has been very largely diverted from our state for this reason.

THOSE "PLEASANT PASTURES."

The last week's down street "anything to get the coon" organ takes a slap at the Gazette, which has caused a great deal of amusement to those that know the "dad" of the article. Here is what he says:

"The esteemed Gazette is a fair weather champion of Republicanism. It is so sure that the Red Lake county Democracy is going to be swept off the earth that it is supporting practically every Democratic county official for re-election. We admire the Gazette's discernment. It knows where the pleasant pastures lie."

It is true that during the past season the Gazette has said a good word for both Auditor Ford and Judge of Probate Tarrant, but in doing so it has merely voiced the sentiment of nearly everybody in the county. Both have served but one term in office and are conceded to be the most competent officers that Red Lake county ever had, and in justice to them and to the county at large they should be given the endorsement of the people, regardless of politics.

The Gazette does not believe there is a man in the state so hidebound to party that he will not speak a deserving word for one of the opposing faction, more especially in county affairs, and why should a newspaper be any different than an individual? It is true that a newspaper should support its party nominees in the campaign, provided they are competent and worthy, but it would be smallness even more discernable than that of the Courier sorehead for a paper or individual to refuse to say a good word for a deserving officer of the other party long before the campaign had opened.

There is a plainly apparent excuse for the Courier's article. Immediately after the last election, Mr. King openly boasted that the rest of the papers of the county might just as well pull out for the coming two years, as Auditor Ford and Judge Tarrant were elected, and like the famous Mephistopheles in Faust, he exclaimed, "you're mine—body and soul." He made his brags that the people of Red Lake county had vindicated him, that he alone had elected all the democrats to county office, but more especially the two under discusion, and although he had received more than ample pay for all the work he had done, he wanted both of these gentlemen to throw him every bit of the county business they controlled, and he as the great "savior" of the public fund had plans figured out whereby a big rake-off would be secured, and the county be blowed.

But he reckond without his host, as Auditor Ford absolutely refused to be a party to the grafting scheme, and everything that he ordered for the county was submitted to bids, while Judge Tarrant let the people use their preference as to where the legal notices should be sent, with the result that the fellow who did the shouting is sore, and his article above is merely a slap at the officers named, over the shoulders of the Gazette.

Admitting that this paper is supporting several democratic county officers for re-election, does it come with good grace from the sheet in question to criticize our action? In last week's Courier, at the top of the editorial columns, appeared the call for the Democratic county convention with the name of John E. King, its editor, signed as chairman of the Democratic committee. Down in the columns we find that he is ardently supporting a Republican candidate for the nomination of governor, second and ninth district Republicans for the offices of railroad and warehouse commissioners, a Republican for the legislature from this district—while at heart he has two Republicans on the string that he would, if he thought there was a ghost of a show, place in the offices of auditor and judge of probate of Red Lake county—regardless of his boasted love of party, and but for no other reason than the same "pleasant pastures" he hints at above.

The Gazette asks the people in all fairness what it thinks of the transient at the other end of the street, who uses argument like the above through pure and simple soreness because its air castles of a two year graft were tumbled down by the fellow had figured would brace them up? If the general public can't easily see that this howler cares no more for the spirit of fairness, and is merely doing as he always did—looking for a great, big GRAFT—it is certainly blind and easily bamboozled. We beg the readers' pardon for using so much space on a subject of such unimportance, but as the gentleman(?) at the other end of the street seemed to want an explanation of the Gazette's action, the time was opportune to satisfy his cravings.

Worth Reading.

In all the Baking Powder "Wars" that have intermittantly waged in the last twenty years, there is one point that has been overlooked by the bellinquent makers of these goods. Rival manufacturers have contented themselves with accusing their competitors of making an unwholesome product. The question of keeping quality, and, therefore, efficiently in raising bread, the only purpose for which the baking powder is used, appears to have been generally ignored. There are many powders which, when fresh, and the can is first uncovered, will do fairly good work, but after standing for some time on the pentry shelf, the powder becomes so weak as to be almost worthless as far as raising bread is concerned. This is especially true in the case of the so-called "Phosphate" powders, which were it not for this fatal defect, would be satisfactory baking powders. The unceesful attempts to overcome this fault of the "Phosphate" powders has enlisted the services of more chemists and costs more money than the solution of any other problem connected with the raising of bread. The makers of these "Phosphate" powders raise a great cry about the wonderful healthfulness of their product, but what matters of all this if the powder will not fulfil the only object for which it is purchased? The housewife to whom economy is an object wil avoid these "Phosphate" powders.

Nearly every one who has catarrh knows how foolish it is to try and cure it by drugging the stomach. Temporary relief may be given, but a cure seldom comes.

Until recently your physician would have said the only way to cure catarrh would be to have a change of climate; but now with Hyomei you can carry a health giving climate in your vest pocket and by breathing it a few minutes four times a day soon cure yourself.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00 and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if one bottle does not cure, an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents. It the most economical of all remedies advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only one that follows nature in her method of treating diseases of the respiratory organe.

A. L. Reichert has sold a great many Hyomei outfits and the more he sells, the more convinced he is that he is perfeftly safe in guaranteeing to refund the money if Hyomei does not cure.

Sam E. Hunt, Ralph E. Wyer and Dr. F. F. Fletcher have made arrangements to go to St. Louis early in June to take in the big fair. It would be hard to find a jollier trio of boys, and The Gazette predicts that they will fully enjoy the delightful trip, and see everything seeable.

That most delightful series of "Around the World" pictures appearing from month to month in the Delineator shows in the June number a fine view of the situation of Hong Kong: as well as the curious jumble of wheelbarrow transportation at the boat landing, Tientsin: the shipping in Soo Chow Creek, Shanghai: and realistic scenes in various temples, shrines and pagodas in China and India. People generally never tire of such glimpses into the life and character of far-away peoples, but not very often is the presentation so generous and so vivid as that given in these photographs. The personal touch in the running commentary from the bride who thus chronicles her unique honeymoon, is all that is required to complete the charm of the series.

Higinbotham is not ordinarily very little, but when he came down town Monday morning he looked at least three feet taller than usual, and it was hard to determine the cause until it was learned that a brand new son and heir had arrived at his house the night before, and Hig was merely swelled up a little over the event. The babe is a healthy one, and gives promise of making a fine boy, and the many friends of its popular parents will join with the Gazette in extending congratulations.

Bemidji is to have a new hotel. It will be a three story brick structure with 64 rooms constructed on a thoroghly modern plan. Mr. Markham, who is to build it, states that it will be finished throughout in hardwood with tile floors for the office and bar and the furnishings throughtout will be the best that money can buy. It is his intention to build a house that will be up to anything outside the cities in point of general excellence. The draughting of the plans will require about ten days. Bids will be advertised for at once and the contract for tha construction of the house let as soon as possible.

Prophet Hicks' forecast of the weather for May has been published, and from now till the end of the month we may look for any kind of old weather. He saya decided disturbances may be expected about the 9th to 10th, with electrical storms and high winds on and touching the 10th. Another sudden and marked change to cooler will follow after these storms. If a cool wave and frost should not follow the first storm period, look for much cooler with heavy frost northward about the 10th to 12th. From the 14th to 17th there will be heavy rain and hail storms. Change to cooler, wit probable frost in the north. will certainly come when storms are over. The fourth storm period of the month will extend from about the 20th to 23rd. From the 24th to 28th he says to look for return of storm conditions—higher temperature, falling barometer and rain and thunder storms.

Thief River Press: W. C. Smiley broke into the congressional record during the last session of congress. A large part of his write up of the Red Lake reservation was published verbatim in the proceedings of the house as they appear in the congressional record. The case will be tried in the June term of court.

Fertile Journal: Geo. Kronsehnabel and H. L. Gaylord went down to St. Paul Monday night to consult the state railway and warehouse commissioners concerning the putting in of a "Y" at Tilden at the junction of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railways. These companies have been petitioned several times to put in a "Y" at that point but always ignored it and the railway commissioners have been appealed to to compel them to put it in. A "Y" at that point would be of great convenience to shippers both on the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific and would also make freight charges much smaller.

The trip will be a delightful one, and should certainly prove enjoyable.

The United States grand jury now in session at Fergus Falls, failed to find an indictment against Ex-Post master Eiken of Crookston. The federal authorities claimed that Mr. Eiken was short in his accounts but the grand jury did not think that there was enough of the case against him to warrant an indictment. The case is one that has caused a great deal of comment and the citizens of Crookston are pleased to know that he has been vindicated.

During a meeting of the Louisville presbytery last week, Delegate Hawthorne of Princeton told this story of pioneer days, and vouched for its accuracy. One of the circuit riders in my part of the state was extremely fond of pepper sauce, and as he could seldom find any strong enough at places where he stopped, he always carried a bottle with him. He happened to be at a hotel one night, though he usually stopped at the home of a friend. A man sat across the table from him, and, seeing the sauce, asked if the minister would share it with him. The request was granted, and the stranger poured out a liberal allowance of the sauce into his soup. At the first swallow, he made a wry face and blurted out; "Minister, do you preach hell?" "Yes, brother," was the reply. "Why do you ask?" "Because you are the first preacher I ever saw who carried samples," was the answer.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Tommy's Hair Cut.

After looking critically at his reflection in the glass Tommy decided that his hair needed cutting.

Being a boy accustomed to act promptly, he proceeded to cut it himself.

With a dull pair of scissors he haggled it in a weird and wonderful manner and was standing off and admiring the result when his mother came in.

"Oh, my child!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing?"

"Can't you see? I'm cuttin' my hair."

"You bad boy! You go right straight to the nearest barber shop and have it done over again. Here's a quarter. Pull your hat down so people can't see you."

With a heart full of resentment Tommy took the money and went away, and ten minutes later he was sitting in a barber's chair.

"Great snakes, huh!" said the barber, passing his hand over the boy's head. "Who's been cutting your hair?"

Here is where Tommy fell down.

"My mother, o' course," he said. "Who d'ye s'pose?"—Chicago Tribune.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.
S. P. BROOKINGTON.

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening material known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

CHAPTER III.

THE street upon which the Palace hotel fronted formed the south side of the square and ran west to the edge of the town, where it turned to the south for a quarter of a mile or more, then bent to the west again. Some distance from this second turn there stood, fronting close on the road, a large brick house, the most pretentious mansion in Carlow county. And yet it was a homelike place, with its red brick walls embowered in masses of cool Virginia creeper and a comfortable veranda crossing the broad front, while half a hundred stalwart sentinels of elm and beech and poplar stood guard around it. The front walk was bordered by geraniums and hollyhocks, and honeysuckle climbed the pillars of the porch. Behind the house there was a shady little orchard, and back of the orchard an old fashioned, very fragrant rose garden, divided by a long grape arbor, extended to the shallow waters of a wandering creek, and on the bank a rustic seat was placed beneath the sycamores.

From the first bend of the road, where it left the town and became (after some indecision) a country highway, called the pike, rather than a proud city boulevard, a pathway led through the fields to end at some pasture bars opposite the brick house.

A woman's voice singing Schubert's "Serenade" came to him.

John Harkless was leaning on the pasture bars. The stars were wan and the full moon shone over the fields. Meadows and woodlands lay quiet and motionless under the old, sweet marvel of a June night. In the wide monotony of the flat lands there sometimes comes a feeling that the whole earth is stretched out before one. Tonight it seemed to lie so, in the pathos of silent beauty, passive and still, yet breathing an antique message, sad, mysterious, reassuring. But there had come a divine melody adrift on the air. Through the open windows it floated. Indoors some one struck a peal of silver chords, like a harp touched by a lover, and a woman's voice was lifted. John Harkless leaned on the pasture bars and listened with upraised head and parted lips.

"To thy chamber window roving, love hath led my feet."

The Lord sent manna to the children of Israel in the wilderness. Harkless had been five years in Plattville, and a woman's voice singing Schubert's "Serenade" came to him at last as he stood by the pasture bars of Jones' field and listened and rested his dazzled eyes on the big white face of the moon.

How long had it been since he had heard a song or any discourse of music other than that furnished by the Plattville band? Not that he had no taste for a brass band. But music that he loved always gave him an ache or delight and the twinge of reminiscences of old gay days gone forever. Tonight his memory leaped to the last day of a June gone seven years to a morning when the little estuary waves twinkled in the bright sun about the boat in which he sat, the trim launch that brought a cheery party ashore from their schooner to the casino landing at Winter Harbor, far up on the Maine coast.

Tonight he saw the picture as plainly as if it were yesterday. No reminiscences had risen so keenly before his eyes for years. Pretty Mrs. Van Skuyt sitting beside him—pretty Mrs. Van Skuyt and her roses—what had become of her? He saw the crowd of friends waiting on the pier for their arrival, the dozen or so emblazoned classmates (it was in the time of brilliant flannels) who sent up a volley of college cheers in his honor. How plainly the dear old, young faces rose up before him tonight, the men from whose lives he had slipped! Dearest and jolliest of the faces was that of Tom Meredith, clubmate, classmate, his closest friend, the thin, redheaded third baseman. He could see Tom's mouth opened at least a yard, it seemed, such was his frantic vociferousness. Again and again the cheers rang out, "Harkless! Harkless!" on the end of them. In those days everybody, particularly his classmates, thought he would be minister to England in a few years, and the orchestra on the casino porch was playing "The Conquering Hero Comes" in his honor and at the behest of Tom Meredith, he knew.

There were other pretty ladies besides Mrs. Van Skuyt in the launch load from the yacht, but as they touched the pier, pretty girls or pretty women or jovial gentlemen, all were overlooked in the wild scramble the college men made for their hero. They haled him forth, set him on high, bore him on their shoulders, shouting "Skol to the Viking!" and carried him up the wooded bluff to the casino. He heard Mrs. Van Skuyt say: "Oh, we're used to it. We've put in at several other places where he had friends!" He remembered the wild progress they made for him up the slope that morning at Winter Harbor—how the people looked on and laughed and clapped their hands. But at the veranda edge he had noticed a little form disappearing around a corner of the building, a young girl running away as fast as she could. "See there," he said as the tribe set him down; "you have frightened the populace." And Tom Meredith had stopped shouting long enough to answer: "It's my little cousin, overcome with emotion. She's been counting the hours till you came—been hearing about you for a good while. She hasn't been able to talk or think of anything else. She's only fifteen, and the crucial moment is too much for her. The great Harkless has arrived, and she has fled."

But the present hour grew on him as he leaned on the pasture bars. It had been a reminiscent day with him, but suddenly his memories sped, and the voice that was singing Schubert's "Serenade" across the way touched him with the urgent personal appeal that a present beauty had always held for him. It was a soprano and without tremolo, yet came to his ear with a certain tremulous sweetness. It was soft and slender, but the listener knew it could be lifted with fullness and power if the singer would. It spoke only of the song, yet the listener thought of the singer. Under the moon thoughts run into dreams, and he dreamed that the owner of the voice, she who quoted "The Walrus and the Carpenter" on Fisbee's notes, was one to laugh with you and weep with you, yet her laughter would be tempered with sorrow and her tears with laughter.

When the song was ended he struck the rail he leaned upon a sharp blow with his open hand. There swept over him a feeling that he had stood precisely where he stood now on such a night a thousand years ago; had heard that voice and that song and been moved by the voice and the song and the night just as he was moved now. He had long known himself for a sentimentalist. He had almost given up trying to cure himself. And he knew himself for a born lover. He had always been in love with some one. In his earlier youth his affections had been so constantly inconstant that he finally came to settle with his self respect by recognizing in himself a fine constancy that worshiped one woman always. It was only the shifting image of her that changed. Somewhere (he dreamed, whimsically indulgent of the fancy, yet mocking himself for it) there was a girl whom he had never seen who waited till he should come. She was everything. Until he found her he could not help adoring others who possessed little pieces and suggestions of her—her brilliancy, her courage, her short upper lip, "like a curled rose leaf," or her dear voice or her pure profile. He had no recollection of any lady who had quite her eyes. He had never passed a lovely stranger on the street in the old days without a thrill of delight and warmth. If he never saw her again and the vision had only lasted for the time it takes a lady to cross the sidewalk from a shop door to a carriage he was always a little in love with her because she bore about her somewhere, as did every pretty girl he ever saw, a suggestion of the faraway divinity. One does not pass lovely strangers in the streets of Plattville. Miss Briscoe was pretty, but not at all in the way that Harkless dreamed. For five years the lover in him that had loved so often had been starved of all but dreams. Only at twilight and dusk in the summer, when strolling he caught sight of a woman's skirt far up the village street, half outlined in the darkness under the cathedral arch of meeting branches, this romancer of petticoats could sigh a true lover's sigh and, if he kept enough distance between, fly a yearning fancy that his lady wandered there.

Ever since his university days the image of her had been growing more and more distinct. He had completely settled his mind as to her appearance and her voice. She was tall, almost too tall, he was sure of that; and out of his consciousness there had grown a sweet and vivacious young face that he knew was hers. Her hair was light brown, with gold lusters (he reveled in the gold lusters on the proper theory that when your fancy is painting a picture you may as well go in for the whole thing and make it sumptuous), and her eyes were gray. They were very earnest, and yet they sparkled and laughed to him companionably, and sometimes he smiled back upon her. The Undine danced before him through the lonely years, on fair nights in his walks and came to sit by his fire on winter evenings when he stared alone at the embers.

And tonight, here in Plattville, he heard a voice he had waited for long, one that his fickle memory told him he had never heard before. But, listening, he knew better—he had heard it long ago, though when and how he did not know, as rich and true and ineffably tender as now. He threw a sop to his common sense. "Miss Sherwood is a little thing" (the image was so surely tall), "with a humpy forehead and spectacles," he said to himself, "or else a provincial young lady with big eyes to pose at you." Then he felt the ridiculousness of looking after his common sense on a moonlight night in June; also, he knew that he lied.

The song had ceased, but the musician lingered, and the keys were touched to plaintive harmonies new to him. He had come to Plattville before "Cavalleria Rusticana" won the prize at Rome, and now, entranced, he heard the "Intermezzo" for the first time. Listening to this, he feared to move lest he should wake from a summer night's dream.

A ragged little shadow flitted down the path behind him, and from a solitary apple tree standing like a lonely ghost in the middle of the field came the "Woo!" of a screech owl twice. It was answered—twice—from a clump of elder bushes that grew in a fence corner fifty yards west of the pasture bars. Then the barrel of a squirrel rifle issued, lifted out of the white elder blossoms, and lay along the fence. The music in the house across the way ceased, and Harkless saw two white dresses come out through the long parlor windows on to the veranda. "It will be cooler out here," came the voice of the singer clearly through the quiet. "What a night!"

John vaulted the bars and started to cross the road. They saw him from the veranda, and Miss Briscoe called to him in welcome. As his tall figure stood out plainly in the bright light against the white dust a streak of fire leaped from the elder blossoms, and there rang out the sharp report of a rifle. There were two screams from the veranda. One white figure ran into the house. The other, a little one with a gauzy wrap streaming behind, came flying out into the moonlight straight to Harkless. There was a second report. The rifle shot was answered by a revolver. William Todd had risen up, apparently from nowhere, and, kneeling by the pasture bars, fired at the flash of the rifle.

"Jump, fer the shadder, Mr. Harkless!" he shouted. "He's in them elders. Fer God's sake, come back!"

Empty handed as he was, the editor dashed for the treacherous elder bush as fast as his long legs could carry him, but before he had taken six strides a hand clutched his sleeve and a girl's voice quavered from close behind him: "Don't run like that, Mr. Harkless! I can't keep up."

He wheeled about and confronted a vision, a dainty little figure about five feet high, a flushed and lovely face, hair and draperies disarranged and flying. He stamped his foot with rage. "Get back in the house!" he cried.

"You mustn't go!" she panted. "It's the only way to stop you."

"Go back to the house!" he shouted savagely.

"Will you come?"

"Fer God's sake," cried William Todd, "come back! Keep out of the road!" He was emptying his revolver at the clump of bushes, the uproar of his firing blasting the night. Some one screamed from the house:

"Helen, Helen!"

John seized the girl's wrists. Her gray eyes flashed into his defiantly. "Will you go?" he roared.

"No!"

He dropped her wrists, caught her up in his arms as if she had been a kitten and leaped into the shadow of the trees that leaned over the road from the yard. The rifle rang out again, and the little ball whistled venomously overhead. Harkless ran along the fence and turned in at the gate. A loose strand of the girl's hair blew across his cheek, and in the moon her head shone with gold. She had light brown hair and gray eyes and a short upper lip like a curled rose leaf. He set her down on the veranda steps. Both of them laughed wildly.

The rifle rang out again.

"But you came with me," she gasped triumphantly.

"I always thought you were tall," he answered, and there was afterward a time when he had to agree that this was a somewhat vague reply.

CHAPTER IV.

JUDGE BRISCOE smiled grimly and leaned on his shotgun in the moonlight by the veranda. He and William Todd had been kicking down the elder bushes and, returning to the house, found Minnie alone on the porch. "Safe?" he said to his daughter, who turned an anxious face upon him. "They'll be safe enough now, and in our garden."

"Maybe I oughtn't to have let them go."

"Pooh! They're all right. That scalawag's half way to Six Crossroads by this time, isn't he, William?"

"He tuck up the fence like a scared rabbit," Mr. Todd responded, looking into his hat to avoid meeting the eyes of the lady, "and I didn't have no call to foller. He knowed how to run, I reckon. Time Mr. Harkless come out the yard again we see him take across the road to the wedge woods, near half a mile up. Somebody else with him then—looked like a kid. Must 'a' cut across the field to join him. They're fur enough toward home by this."

"Did Miss Helen shake hands with you four or five times?" asked Briscoe, chuckling.

"No. Why?" said Minnie.

"Because Harkless did. My hand aches, and I guess William's does too. He nearly shook our arms off when we told him he'd been a fool. Seemed to do him good. I told him he ought to hire somebody to take a shot at him every morning before breakfast—not that it's any joking matter," the old gentleman finished thoughtfully.

"I should say not," said William, with a deep frown and a jerk of his head toward the rear of the house. "He jokes about it enough. Wouldn't even promise to carry a gun after this. Said he wouldn't know how to use it—never shot one off since he was a boy, on the Fourth of July. This is the third time he's be'n shot at this year, but he says the others was at a—what 'd he call it?"

"'A merely complimentary range,'" Briscoe supplied. He handed William a cigar and bit the end off another himself. "Minnie, you better go in the house and read, I expect, unless you want to go down to the creek and join those folks."

"Me!" she exclaimed. "I know when to stay away, I guess. Do go and put that terrible gun up."

"No," said Briscoe lighting his cigar deliberately. "It's all safe; there's no question of that; but maybe William and I better go out and take a smoke in the orchard as long as they stay down at the creek."

In the garden shafts of white light pierced the bordering trees and fell where June roses breathed the mild night breeze, and here, through summer spells, the editor of the Herald and the lady who had run to him at the pasture bars strolled down a path trembling with shadows to where the creek tinkled over the pebbles. They walked slowly, with an air of being well accustomed friends and comrades, and for some reason it did not strike either of them as unnatural or extraordinary. They came to a bench on the bank, and he made a great fuss dusting the seat for her with his black slouch hat. Then he regretted the hat—it was a shabby old hat of a Carlaw county fashion.

It was a long bench, and he seated himself rather remotely toward the end opposite her, suddenly realizing that he had walked very close to her coming down the narrow garden path. Neither knew that neither had spoken since they left the veranda, and it had taken them a long time to come through the little orchard and the garden. She rested her chin on her hand, leaning forward and looking steadily at the creek. Her laughter had quite gone; her attitude seemed a little wistful and a little sad. He noted that her hair curled over her brow in a way he had not pictured in the lady of his dreams. This was so much prettier. He did not care for tall girls. He had not cared for them for almost half an hour. It was so much more beautiful to be dainty and small and piquant. He had no notion that he was sighing in a way that would have put a furnace to shame, but he turned his eyes from her because he feared that if he looked longer he might blurt out some speech about her loveliness. His glance rested on the bank, but its diameter included the edge of her white skirt and the tip of a little white, high heeled slipper that peeped out from beneath, and he had to look away from that, too, to keep from telling her that he meant to advocate a law compelling all women to wear crisp white gowns and white kid slippers on moonlight nights.

Neither knew that neither had spoken.

She picked a long spear of grass from the turf before her, twisted it absently in her fingers, then turned to him slowly. Her lips parted as if to speak. Then she turned away again. The action was so odd, somehow, as she did it, so adorable, and the preserved silence was such a bond between them, that for his life he could not have helped moving half way up the bench toward her.

"What is it?" he asked, and he spoke in a whisper such as he might have used at the bedside of a dying friend. He would not have laughed if he had known he did so. She twisted the spear of grass into a little ball and threw it at a stone in the water before she answered:

"Do you know, Mr. Harkless, you and I have not 'met,' have we? Didn't we forget to be presented to each other?"

"I beg your pardon, Miss Sherwood. In the perturbation of comedy I forgot."

"It was melodrama, wasn't it?" she said. He laughed, but she shook her head.

"Purest comedy," he said gayly, "except your part of it. You shouldn't have done it. This evening was not arranged in honor of 'visiting ladies.' But you mustn't think me a comedian. Truly, I didn't plan it. My friend from Six Crossroads must be given the credit of devising the scene, though you divined it."

"It was a little too picturesque, I think. I know about Six Crossroads. Please tell me what you mean to do."

"Nothing. What should I?"

"You mean that you will keep on letting them shoot at you until they—until you"— She struck the bench angrily with her hand.

"There's no summer theater in Six Crossroads. There's not even a church. Why shouldn't they?" he asked gravely. "During the long and tedious evenings it cheers the poor Crossroader's soul to drop over here and take a shot at me. It whiles away dull care for him, and he has the additional exercise of running all the way home."

"Ah!" she cried indignantly. "They told me you always answered like this."

"Well, you see, the Crossroads efforts have proved so thoroughly hygienic for me. As a patriot I have sometimes felt extreme mortification that such bad marksmanship should exist in the county, but I console myself with the thought that their best shots are, unhappily, in the penitentiary."

"There are many left. Can't you understand that they will organize again and come in a body, as they did before you broke them up? And then, if they come on a night when they know you are wondering out of town"—

"You have not had the advantage of an intimate study of the most exclusive people of the Crossroads, Miss Sherwood. There are about thirty gentlemen who remain in that neighborhood while their relatives sojourn under discipline. If you had the entree over there, you would understand that these thirty could not gather themselves into a company and march the seven miles without physical debate in the ranks. They are not precisely amiable people, even among themselves. They would quarrel and shoot one another to pieces long before they got here."

"But they worked in a company once."

"Never for seven miles. Four miles was their radius. Five would see them all dead."

She struck the bench again. "Oh, you laugh at me! You make a joke of your own life and death and laugh at everything. Have five years of Plattville taught you to do that?"

"I laugh only at taking the poor Crossroaders too seriously. I don't laugh at your running into fire to help a fellow mortal."

"I knew there wasn't any risk. I knew he had to stop to load before he shot again."

"He did shoot again. If I had known you before tonight, I"— His tone changed, and he spoke gravely. "I am at your feet in worship of your divine philanthropy. It's so much finer to risk your life for a stranger than for a friend."

"That is a man's point of view, isn't it?"

"You risked yours for a man you had never seen before."

"Oh, no. I saw you at the lecture. I heard you introduce the Hon. Mr. Halloway."

"Then I don't understand your wishing to save me."

She smiled unwillingly and turned her gray eyes upon him with troubled sunniness, and under the sweetness of her regard he set a watch upon his lips, though he knew it would not avail him long. He had driveled along respectably so far, he thought, but he had the sentimental longings of years, starved of expression, culminating in his heart. She continued to look at him wistfully, searchingly, gently. Then her eyes traveled over his big frame, from his shoes (a patch of moonlight fell on them; they were dusty; he drew them under the bench with a shudder) to his broad shoulders (he shook the stoop out of them). She stretched her small white hands toward him and looked at them in contrast and broke into the most delicious low laughter in the world. At this he knew the watch on his lips was worthless. It was a question of minutes till he should present himself to her eyes as a sentimental and susceptible imbecile. He knew it. He was in wild spirits.

"Could you realize that one of your dangers might be a shaking?" she cried. "Is your seriousness a lost art?" Her laughter ceased suddenly. "Ah, no! I understand Thiers said the French laugh always in order not to weep. I haven't lived here five years. I should laugh, too, if I were you."

"Look at the moon," he responded. "We Plattvillians own that with the best of metropolitans, and, for my part, I see more of it here. You do not appreciate us. We have large landscapes in the heart of the city, and what other capital has advantages like that? Next winter the railway station is to have a new stove for the waiting room. Heaven itself is one of our suburbs—it is so close that all one has to do is to die. You insist upon my being French, you see, and I know you are fond of nonsense. How did you happen to put 'The Walrus and the Carpenter' at the bottom of a page of Fisbee's notes?"

"Was it? How were you sure it was I?"

"In Carlow county!"

"He might have written it himself."

"Fisbee has never in his life read anything lighter than cuneiform inscriptions."

"Miss Briscoe"—

"She doesn't read Lewis Carroll, and it was not her hand. What made you write it on Fisbee's manuscript?"

"He was here this afternoon. I teased him a little about your heading in the Herald—'Business and the Cradle, the Altar and the Grave,' isn't it?—and he said it had always troubled him, but your predecessor had used it, and you thought it good. So do I. He asked me if I could think of anything that you might like better and put in place of it, and I wrote 'The Time Has Come,' because it was the only thing I could think of that was as appropriate and as fetching as your headlines. He was perfectly dear about it. He was so serious. He said he feared it wouldn't be acceptable. I didn't notice that the paper he handed me to write on was part of his notes; nor did he, I think. Afterward he put it back in his pocket. It wasn't a message."

"I'm not so sure he did not notice. He is very wise. Do you know, I have the impression that the old fellow wanted me to meet you."

"How dear and good of him!" She spoke earnestly, and her face was suffused with a warm light. There was no doubt about her meaning what she said.

"It was," John answered unsteadily. "He knew how great was my need of a few minutes' companionableness with—with"—

"No," she interrupted. "I meant dear and good to me. I think he was thinking of me. It was for my sake he wanted us to meet."

It might have been hard to convince a woman if she had overheard this speech that Miss Sherwood's humility was not the calculated affectation of a coquette. Sometimes a man's unsuspicion is wiser, and Harkless knew that she was not flirting with him. In addition, he was not a fatuous man; he did not extend the implication of her words nearly so far as she would have had him.

"But I had met you," said he, "long ago."

"What!" she cried, and her eyes danced. "You actually remember?"

"Yes. Do you?" he answered. "I stood in Jones' field and heard you singing, and I remembered. It was a long time since I had heard you sing:

"I was a ruffler of Flanders
And fought for a florin's hire.
You were the dame of my captain
And sang to my heart's desire.

"But that is the balladist's notion. The truth is that you were a lady at the court of Clovis, and I was a heathen captive. I heard you sing a Christian hymn and asked for baptism."

She did not seem overpleased with his fancy, for, the surprise fading from her face, "Oh, that was the way you remembered," she said.

"Perhaps it was not that way alone. You won't despise me for being mawkish tonight?" he asked. "I haven't had the chance for so long."

The night air wrapped them warmly, and the balm of the little breezes that stirred the foliage around them was the smell of damask roses from the garden. The creek splashed over the pebbles at their feet, and a drowsy bird, half wakened by the moon, crooned languorously in the sycamores. The girl looked out at the sparkling water through downcast lashes. "Is it because it is so transient that beauty is pathetic," she said, "because we can never come back to it in quite the same way? I am a sentimental girl. If you are born so it is never entirely teased out of you, is it? Besides, tonight is all a dream. It isn't real, you know. You couldn't be mawkish."

Her tone was gentle as a caress, and it made him tingle to his finger tips. "How do you know?" he asked.

"I just know. Do you think I'm very bold and forward?" she said dreamily.

"It was your song I wanted to be sentimental about. I am like one 'who through long days of toil'—only that doesn't quite apply—'and nights devoid of ease,' but I can't claim that one doesn't sleep well here; it is Plattville's specialty—like one who "Still heard in his soul the music

Of wonderful melodies."

"Yes," she answered, "to come here and to do what you have done and to live this isolated village life that must be so desperately dry and dull for a man of your sort, and yet to have the kind of heart that makes wonderful melodies sing in itself—oh," she cried, "I say that is fine!"

"You do not understand," he returned sadly, wishing before her to be unmercifully just to himself. "I came here because I couldn't make a living anywhere else. And the 'wonderful melodies'—I have only known you one evening—and the melodies"— He rose to his feet and took a few steps toward the garden. "Come," he said, "let me take you back. Let us go before I"— He finished with a helpless laugh.

She stood by the bench, one hand resting on it. She stood all in the tremulant shadow. She moved one step toward him, and a single long sliver of light pierced the sycamores and fell upon her head. He gasped.

"What was it about the melodies?" she said.

"Nothing. I don't know how to thank you for this evening that you have given me. I—I suppose you are leaving tomorrow. No one ever stays here. I"—

"What about the melodies?"

He gave it up. "The moon makes people insane!" he cried.

"If that is true, then you need not be more afraid than I, because 'people' is plural. What were you saying about"—

"I had heard them—in my heart. When I heard your voice tonight I knew that it was you who sang them there, had been singing them for me always."

"So!" she cried gayly. "All that debate about a pretty speech!" Then, sinking before him in a courtesy, "I am beholden to you," she said. "Do you think no man ever made a little flattery for me before tonight?"

At the edge of the orchard, where they could keep an unseen watch on the garden and the bank of the creek, Judge Briscoe and Mr. Todd were ensconced under an apple tree, the former still armed with his shotgun. When the young people got up from their bench, the two men rose hastily, then sauntered slowly toward them. When they met, Harkless shook each of them cordially by the hand without seeming to know it.

"We were coming to look for you," explained the judge. "William was afraid to go home alone—thought some one might take him for Mr. Harkless and shoot him before he got into town. Can you come out with Willetts in the morning, Harkless," he went on, "and go with the young ladies to see the parade? And Minnie wants you to stay to dinner and go to the show with them in the afternoon."

Harkless seized his hand and shook it and then laughed heartily as he accepted the invitation.

At the gate Miss Sherwood extended her hand to him and said politely, while mockery shone from her eyes: "Good night, Mr. Harkless. I do not leave tomorrow. I am very glad to have met you."

"We are going to keep her all summer, if we can," said Minnie, weaving her arm about her friend's waist. "You'll come in the morning?"

"Good night, Miss Sherwood," he returned hilariously. "It has been such a pleasure to meet you. Thank you so much for saving my life. It was very good of you, indeed. Yes; in the morning. Good night, good night." He shook hands with all of them, including Mr. Todd, who was going with him. He laughed all the way home, and William walked at his side in amazement.

The Herald building was a decrepit frame structure on Main street. It had once been a small warehouse and was now sadly in need of paint. Closely adjoining it, in a large, blank looking yard, stood a low brick cottage, over which the second story of the old warehouse leaned in an effect of tipsy affection that had reminded Harkless when he first saw it, of an old Sunday school book woodcut of an inebriated parent under convoy of a devoted child. The title to these two buildings and the blank yard had been included in the purchase of the Herald, and the cottage was the editor's home.

There was a light burning upstairs in the Herald office. From the street a broad, tumbledown stairway ran up on the outside of the building to the second floor, and at the stairway railing John turned and shook his companion warmly by the hand.

"Good night, William," he said. "It was plucky of you to join in that muss tonight. I shan't forget it."

"I jest happened to come along," replied the other awkwardly. Then, with a portentous yawn, he asked, "Ain't ye goin' to bed?"

"No; Parker wouldn't allow it."

"Well," observed William, with another yawn, which threatened to expose the veritable soul of him, "I d'know how ye stand it. It's close on 11 o'clock. Good night."

John went up the steps, singing aloud—

"For tonight we'll merry, merry be,
For tonight we'll merry, merry be,"

and stopped on the sagging platform at the top of the stairs and gave the moon good night with a wave of the hand and friendly laughter. At this it suddenly struck him that he was twenty-nine years of age and that he had laughed a great deal that evening; laughed and laughed over things not in the least humorous, like an excited schoolboy making a first formal call; that he had shaken hands with Miss Briscoe when he left her as if he should never see her again; that he had taken Miss Sherwood's hand twice in one very temporary parting; that he had shaken the judge's hand five times and William's four.

"Idjot!" he cried. "What has happened to me?" Then he shook his fist at the moon and went in to work, he thought.

CHAPTER V.

THE bright sun of circus day shone into Harkless' window, and he awoke to find himself smiling. For a little while he lay content, drowsily wondering why he smiled, only knowing that there was something new. It was thus as a boy he had wakened on birthday mornings or on Christmas or on the Fourth of July, drifting happily out of pleasant dreams into the consciousness of long awaited delights that had come true, yet lying only half awake in a cheerful borderland, leaving happiness undefined.

The morning breeze was fluttering at his window blind, a honeysuckle vine tapped lightly on the pane. Birds were trilling, warbling, whistling, and from the street came the rumbling of wagons, merry cries of greeting and the barking of dogs. What was it made him feel so young and strong and light hearted? The breeze brought him the smell of June roses, fresh and sweet with dew, and then he knew why he had come smiling from his dreams. He leaped out of bed and shouted loudly: "Zen! Hello, Xenophon!"

In answer an ancient, very black darky, his warped and wrinkled visage showing under his grizzled hair like charred paper in a fall of pine ashes, put his head in at the door and said: "Good mawn', suh. Yessuh. Hit's done pump' full. Good mawn', suh."

A few moments later the colored man, seated on the front steps of the cottage, heard a mighty splashing within, while the rafters rang with stentorian song:

"He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribbon,
He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribbon,
He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribbon,
To tie up my bonny brown hair.

"Oh, dear, what can the matter be?
Oh, dear, what can the matter be?
Oh, dear, what can the matter be?
Johnnie's so long at the fair!"

The listener's jaw dropped, and his mouth opened and stayed open. "Him!" he muttered faintly. "Singin'!"

"Well the old triangle knew the music of our tread; sang the editor.
How the peaceful Seminole would tremble in his bed!"

"I dunno huccome it," exclaimed the old man, "but, bless Gawd, de young man happy!" A thought struck him suddenly, and he scratched his head. "Maybe he goin' away," he said querulously. "What become of ole Zen?" The splashing ceased, but not the voice, which struck into a noble marching chorus.

"Oh, my Lawd," said the colored man, "I pray you listen at dat!"

"Soldiers marching up the street.
They keep the time;
They look sublime!
Hear them play 'Die Wacht am Rhein.'
They call it Schneider's band.
Tra la la, la la."

The length of Main street and all sides of the square resounded with the rattle of vehicles of every kind. Since earliest dawn they had been pouring into the village, a long procession, on every country road. The air was full of exhilaration; everybody was laughing and shouting and calling greetings, for Carlow county was turning out, and from far and near the country people came—nay, from over the county line; and clouds of dust arose from every thoroughfare and highway and swept into town to herald their coming.

Dibb Zane, the "sprinkling contractor," had been at work with the town water cart since the morning stars were bright, but he might as well have watered the streets with his tears, which, indeed, when the farmers began to come in, bringing their cyclones of dust, he drew nigh unto after a burst of profanity as futile as his cart.

"Honey, hit bad luck sing 'fo' breakfus'."

"Tief wie das Meer soll deine Liebe sein," hummed the editor in the cottage. His song had taken on a reflective tone, as that of one who cons a problem or musically ponders which card to play. He was kneeling before an old trunk in his bedchamber. From one compartment he took a neatly folded pair of duck trousers and a light gray tweed coat, from another a straw hat with a ribbon of bright colors. He examined these musingly. They had lain in the trunk for a long time undisturbed. He shook the coat and brushed it. Then he laid the garments upon his bed and proceeded to shave himself carefully, after which he donned the white trousers, the gray coat and, rummaging in the trunk again, found a gay pink cravat, which he fastened about his tall collar (also a resurrection from the trunk) with a pearl pin. He took a long time to arrange his hair with a pair of brushes. When at last it suited him and his dressing was complete, he sallied forth to breakfast.

Xenophon stared after him as he went out of the gate whistling heartily. The old darky lifted his hands, palms outward.

"Lan' name, who dat?" he exclaimed aloud. "Who dat in dem panjingeries? He gone jine de circus!" His hands fell upon his knees, and he got to his feet rheumatically, shaking his head with foreboding. "Honey, honey, hit bad luck, bad luck sing 'fo' breakfus'. Trouble 'fo' de day he done. Trouble, honey, great trouble. Bad luck, bad luck!"

Along the square the passing of the editor in his cool equipments was a progress, and wide were the eyes and deep the gasps of astonishment caused by his festal appearance. Mr. Tibbs and his sister rushed from the postoffice to stare after him.

"He looks just beautiful, Solomon," said Miss Tibbs.

Harkless usually ate his breakfast alone, as he was the latest riser in Plattville. There were days in the winter when he did not reach the hotel until 8 o'clock. This morning he found a bunch of white roses, still wet with dew and so fragrant that the whole room was fresh and sweet with their odor, prettily arranged in a bowl on the table, and at his plate the largest of all with a pin through the stem. He looked up smilingly and nodded at the red faced, red haired waitress who was waving a long fly brush over his head. "Thank you, Charmion," he said. "That's very pretty."

"That old Mr. Wimby was here," she answered, "and he left word for you to look out. The whole possetucky of Johnsons from the Crossroads passed his house this mornin', comin' this way, and he see Bob Skillett on the square when he got to town. He left them flowers. Mrs. Wimby sent 'em to ye. I didn't bring 'em."

"Thank you for arranging them."

She turned even redder than she always was and answered nothing, vigorously darting her brush at an imaginary fly on the cloth. After several minutes she said abruptly, "You're welcome."

There was a silence, finally broken by a long, gasping sigh. Astonished, he looked at the girl. Her eyes were set unfathomably upon his pink tie. The wand had dropped from her nerveless hand, and she stood rapt and immovable. She started violently from her trance. "Ain't ye goin' to finish yer coffee?" she asked, plying her instrument again, and, bending slightly, whispered, "Say, Eph Watts is over there behind ye."

At a table in a far corner of the room a large gentleman in a brown frock coat was quietly eating his breakfast and reading the Herald. He was of an ornate presence, though entirely neat. A sumptuous expanse of linen exhibited itself between the lapels of his low cut waistcoat, and an inch of bediamonded breastpin glittered there like an ice ledge on a snowy mountain side. He had a steady blue eye and a dissipated iron gray mustache. This personage was Mr. Ephraim Watts, who, following a calling more fashionable in the eighteenth century than in the latter decades of the nineteenth, had shaken the dust of Carlow from his feet some three years previously at the strong request of the authorities. The Herald had been particularly insistent upon his deportation. In the local phrase, Harkless had "run him out o' town." Perhaps it was because the Herald's opposition, as the editor had explained at the time, had been "merely moral and impersonal," and the editor had confessed to a liking for the unprofessional qualities of Mr. Watts, that there was but a slight embarrassment when the two gentlemen met today. His breakfast finished, Harkless went over to the other and extended his hand. Cynthia, the waitress, held her breath and clutched the back of a chair. However, Mr. Watts made no motion toward his well known hip pocket. Instead he rose, flushing slightly, and accepted the hand offered him.

"I'm glad to see you, Mr. Watts," said the journalist cordially. "And also, if you are running with the circus and calculate on doing business here today, I'll have you fired out of town before noon. How are you? You're looking extremely well."

"Mr. Harkless," answered Watts, "I cherish no hard feelings, and I never said but what you done exactly right when I left, three years ago. No, sir; I'm not here in a professional way at all, and I don't want to be molested. I've connected myself with an oil company, and I'm down here to look over the ground. It beats poker and fantan all hollow, though there ain't as many chances in favor of the dealer, and in oil it's the farmer that gets the rakeoff. I've come back, but in an enterprising spirit this time, to open up a new field and shed light and money in Carlow. They told me never to show my face here again, but if you say I stay I guess I can. I always was sure there was oil in the county, and I want to prove it for everybody's benefit. Is it all right?"

"My dear fellow," laughed the young man, shaking the gambler's hand again, "it is all right. I have always been sorry I had to act against you. Everything is all right. Stay and bore to Korea, if you like. Did ever you see such glorious weather?"

"I'll let you in on some shares," Watts called after him as he turned away. The other nodded in reply and was leaving the room when Cynthia detained him by a flourish of her fly brush. "Say," she said—she always called him "Say"—"you've forgot yer flower."

He came back and thanked her. "Will you pin it on for me, Charmion?"

"I don't know what call you got to speak to me out of my name," she responded, looking at the floor moodily.

"Why?" he asked, surprised.

"I don't see why you want to make fun of me."

"I beg your pardon, Cynthia," he said gravely. "I didn't mean to do that. I haven't been considerate. I didn't think you'd be displeased. I'm very sorry. Won't you pin it on my coat?"

Her face was lifted in grateful pleasure, and she began to pin the rose to his lapel. Her hands were large and red and trembled. She dropped the flower and, saying huskily, "I don't know as I could do it right," seized violently upon a pile of dishes and hurried from the room.

Harkless rescued the rose, pinned it on his coat himself, with the internal observation that the red haired waitress was the queerest creature in the village, and set forth upon his holiday.

Mr. 'Lige Willetts, a stalwart bachelor, the most eligible in Carlow, and a habitual devotee of Minnie Briscoe, was seated on the veranda when Harkless turned in at the gate of the brick house. "The ladies will be down right off," he said, greeting the editor's cool

EMARDVILLE

Seeding is in full blast around here.

Adolph Pederson made a trip to Red Lake Falls last Friday.

Frank E. Hunt, of Red Lake Falls, was out this way last week.

Rains came down last week to the amount of almost 4½ or 5 inches.

There were church services in the church last Sunday forenoon. A fair crowd attended.

The clearing of the right-of-way on the "Soo" line is nearly done, is reported at Emardville.

Adolph Pederson, who has been working the past few months up at Rainy Lake, returned home last week.

Peter Tranby, formerly of Red Lake Falls, was out here last week on Sunday and visited friends and relatives.

The railroad work will soon begin here on the "Soo" line. We all hope this county will enjoy a prosperous season this year.

The bridges in this township are getting on the bum. The eastern people can't come through on the grade for bad bridges. They can't get to the creamery with the cream because the bad places for crossing over coulberths etc.

A spring tonic that cleans and purifies and absorbs all poison from the system. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well and keep you well all summer. 35 cents. Tea or tablets. W. A. Schreiter.

The Republican convention to nominate state officers will be held at St. Paul on June 30. Senator Clapp was selected temporary chairman. The county conventions will be held on June 28. Red Lake county will be entitled to eight delegates.

Last week the creamery started. The buttermaker is the same one as we had last year, Mr. Lauritzson, a well-learned creamery man from the old country, Denmark. He knows how to put up good butter of first class quality. Mr. Lauritzson is boarding at J. Hemstad's place.

Mrs. Paul Benjamenson, who has been reported on the sick list for the past few weeks is getting worst right along. She will not live many days after this. Mr. Benjamenson is expected back from Canada every day now, where he has been for a couple months looking for a new homestead in Assiniboia, Canada.

The patron who stays by the creamery the year or season, through thick and thin is the real benefactor of the institution. He does not stop sending to the creamery as soon as his milk or cream supply begins to run low but realizes that at such times the creamery needs the undivided support of its patrons.

Remember Andrew Ellingson sells monuments without regard to cost. The Georgia Marble Co., is the biggest marble companies in the Union. Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at Schreiter's Drug Store.

At no time of the year is the croaking of frogs so pleasant to the ear as in the early spring, and this year we will almost hail the first buzzing of the mosquito.

Brede Thoreson was in Red Lake Falls and proved his land before clerk of court last Friday. A. Ellingson and Ed. Jacobson were the witnesses for final proof to Mr. Thoreson.

A reception was given Saturday evening at the home of Mr. Jorgenson, of Equality, in honor of the marriage of his daughter, Julia, to Ole Nilsen, of Garnes. Quite a number of their friends were present bringing presents and congratulations.

If you are not the happy possessor of such an outfit you can greatly improve the efficiency of those you have by the judicious use of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets They are pleasant to take and agreeable in effect. Worth Reading,

In all the Baking Powder "Wars" that have intermittently waged in the last twenty years, there is one point that has been overlooked by the belliquent makers of these goods. Rival manufacturers have contented themselves with accusing their competitors of making an unwholesome product, The question of keeping quality, and, therefore, efficiently in raising bread, the only purpose for which the baking powder is used, appears to have been generally ignored, There are many powders which, when fresh, and the can is first uncovered, will do fairly good work, but after standing for some time on the pantry shelf, the powder becomes so weak as to be almost worthless as far as raising bread is concerned. This is especially true in the case of the so-called "Phosphate" powders, which were it not for this fatal defect, would be satisfactory baking powders. The unsuccessful attempts to overcome this fault of the "Phosphate" powders has enlisted the services of more chemists and costs more more money than the solution of any other problem connected with the raising of bread. The makers of these "Phosphate" powders raise a great cry about the wonderful healthfulness of their product, but what matters of all this if the powder will not fulfil the only object for which it is purchased? The housewife to whom economy is an object wil avoid these "Phosphate" powders.

Annual Tax Sale.

The annual delinquent tax sale opened Monday, and the bidding has been quite spirited. Auditor Ford reports that the sale has exceed that of any previous year considerably, and that the farm lands are practically all gone. There were about 500 tracts, and the fact of their all being snapped up so soon shows that the people have faith in the future of Red Lake county and know that if they are not redeemed the value will exceed the price paid. The town property sale will likely be large, too, as there a great many desirable lots on the list.

The Result of Thypboid Fever.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

A Beet Harvester.

It has been the belief that American inventive ingenuity would solve the problem of beet harvesting, which has been one of the brakes on the wheel of progress in the development of the beet sugar industry. Hand and hoe work is now demanded in the culture and harvest of this crop. The American farmer saves his legs and hands and back as much as possible. Beet culture is back breaking. In some localities where sugar factories have been established farmers have refused to undergo the taxing labor necessary to grow beets, and foreigners have been imported for the purpose. If beets could be grown as corn is grown factories would not lack for supplies. Those who understand the ingenuity of invention as applied to labor saving farm machinery have been keeping an ear open for a note of success in the application of this genius to implements for beet culture. Nebraska is the state to sound it first, says Breeder's Gazette. It is reported that a couple of men in Red Willow county, in that state, have devised a beet harvester which will prove practicable. Its operation requires one man and four horses, and thus equipped it is said that it will dig, top and load three acres of beets a day. A wagon accompanies the machine to receive the beets. It is said that this harvester does the work formerly performed by fourteen men and four horses and that it can be put on the market at $125. Much interest will attend the testing of this implement in actual field work.

The Trained Farmer.

Farming is a great deal more than a matter of choice; it is a question of training and aptitude. Nobody would expect a gang of farm laborers to go into a vacant cutlery shop and turn out good knives and tableware. Yet the mechanic who has done nothing but grind and finish knives all his life is quite likely to talk as if a farm were all he needed to become an expert farmer. His first attempt to milk a cow or swing a scythe would show him a thing or two, not to mention such a task as laying a drain, budding a fruit tree, tending a sick animal or even to plow a straight furrow in the field. The man who has picked up a lot of general knowledge about farming by reading books and papers is apt to forget that most of the work consists of details that can be learned only by experience. The learning is possible owing to the neighborly kindness of most farmers. Hard study, good sense and energy will also, as in other occupations, rapidly make up for lack of early training. But the point is that nobody should expect to become a farmer all at once. For a beginner to buy a large farm with an established business is to merit almost certain disappointment if capital is limited.—American Cultivator.

The Model Farmer Found.

A dairy farmer in Pennsylvania, whose wonderful success was described in Professor L. H. Bailey's series of articles in Country Life In America on "How to Make a Living From the Land," has now been approached by the United States department of agriculture, which wishes to make his farm the subject of a bulletin on model farming. He objects, however, to making his place the Mecca of brother agriculturists the country over unless the government will pay him $20,000 down or the same sum in $2,000 annual installments for his trouble. He began with fifteen acres of ground that would not support two cows and a horse. Now the same land supplies food for thirty-five cows and two horses, bringing him a large income from the place. It is one of the most remarkable instances of practical results of model farming in this country, as Country Life In America points out.

Early Cucumbers Easily Grown.

Turn a large, grassy sod bottom upward in a shallow box. Plant in the sod seeds for as many hills of cucumbers as the space will allow, leaving plenty of room to divide it without disturbing the roots of the plants. In about six weeks from time of planting the hills may be separated by cutting the sod into small squares and transplanting them into the open ground, previously prepared by a liberal use of compost.

Make several small holes in the bottom of a tin can, sink it in the ground close to the transplanted vine and keep filled with water. Following this method will insure large cucumbers nearly as early as and more palatable than those shipped from the south.—J. V. Roach in American Agriculturist.

Beef at Cost.

In some parts of New England the old plan of a co-operative beef supply is still followed. A number of farmers agree to furnish a beef animal each in turn at intervals averaging about two weeks. The meat is distributed at 5 to 8 cents a pound, according to the cut, and the owner keeps the hide and tallow. Thus twenty-five farmers, more or less, can unite to secure fresh meat at cost, escaping the exactions of the western beef packers.

Watch Your Potato Seed.

Potatoes for seed will bear watching this spring. No one will plant badly frozen tubers, but the danger is from seed that has been chilled enough to weaken its vitality. It may sprout well enough to deceive the planter and yet not have in it the possibilities of a good crop. There is little enough profit in the potato at its best. Planting doubtful seed is fishing for disappointment with the most certain bait.—Rural New Yorker.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at Schreiter's Drug Store.

JUDGE ORDERS DITCH NO. 21

Contested Ditch Case Drawn To a Close By Decision Of Judge Watts—Ditch To Be Built.

Judge Wm. Watts yesterday handed down his findings in the famous Ditch No. 21 case, in which he orders that the ditch be built as surveyed, and the work will likely commence as soon as the jobs are let by Auditor Ford.

It will be remembered that this is the ditch that the county commissioners refused to order constructed last fall, and an appeal was taken to the district court from their decision. The ditch was originally ordered to drain the fractional township east of Rocksbury, and was opposed by the citizens of the town of Rocksbury, and so active was the opposition that the commissioners were compelled to take the action they did. The people of the fractional town appealed from their decision and in ordering the ditch the Judge recommends that the assessment be equalized, as some lands in the fraction are assessed that should not be, and others in Rocksbury are too high.

The residents along the route have twenty days in which to appeal from the assessments as fixed by the viewers, and have them equalized by legal process.

The attorneys in the case were: F. A. Grady for the county; Messrs Boughton and Germo for the people of Rocksbury; and Messrs. Hannay, of St. Hilaire, and Rowe, of Crookston for the fractional town.

The notice of sale of ditching jobs will be printed in next week's Gazette.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Governor's Proclamation Calls Attention to the Day.

Gov. Van Sant has issued his Memorial day proclamation, in which he says:

"Throughout our land, in almost every city, village and hamlet, are found the honored graves of American soldiers and sailors. They died for their country—they died for us. May we gather from their lives and deeds that inspiration which arouses genuine love for our country and devotion to its institutions. Their valor and patriotism established and preserved our republic, and we should devoutly consecrate this day to their memory, and tenderly strew their graves with garlands of love. To honor the memories of the brave who sleep in the 'windowless palace of the grave' is not only a sacred duty, but evinces the love of a grateful people."

Memorial Day falls on Monday this year, and will be fittingly celebrated throughout the state. Red Lake Falls should do her part toward paying tribute to the heroes gone beyond, by having appropriate exercises and music on that day.

The standard of shoemaking is shown in a Douglas shoe, by its fit, style and durability—$3.00 and $3.50. Garceau & Zaiser.

Mail Clerk on Great Northern.

For several months past Postmistress E. F. Marshall has been urging the postal authorities to put of a mail car and clerk on the local Great Northern passenger, and this week she received notice that on June 1 the request would be complied with, and the improvement added. The putting on of a mail car will be a great convenience to the people here, as the short time between the opening and closing of the mail for the Great Northern has made it very inconvenient at times, and the new service will give the people nearly a half hour longer in which to get out their letters. Mrs. Marshall is always alive to the interests of the patrons of the office here, and has fully demonstrated it on several occasions in the last few months.

HEARING SATURDAY.

Pros and Cons in the New Judicial Ditch Matter to be Heard.

The hearing on the new judicial ditch No. 4, in Polk and Red Lake counties, will be heard at the Lambert postoffice Saturday of this week, at which time all evidence in favor or against the construction of said ditch will be taken.

Judge Watts and Clerk of Court Lanctot, of Crookston, will be there, and it is probable that Clerk Perrault will also be present.

The Gazette understands that there will not be any opposition to the construction of the ditch planned and that the farmers are looking for a great deal of benefit as a result of it.

WILL GRADUATE WITH HONORS

Class of Eleven Bright Young People To Finish Their School Labors. —Commencement June 3.

Arrangements are completed for the commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls High school, which will be held at the Metropolitan opera house on Friday evening, June 3.

The class of '04 is composed of eleven members—six young ladies and five young gentlemen, and it is safe to assert that a Minnesota institution of learning has never graduated a brighter class of scholars.

The program will be quite lengthy, but decidedly interesting. A new idea for this sort of entertainment will be carried out by the class, and it can easily be seen by a glance at the program below that the prospects for a delightful evening's entertainment are exceptionally bright.

Minnesota, the great "North Star" state is taken for a general subject, and under four sub-heads the class will discuss the state and its standing, history, manufactories, products, etc., from before its admission to the Union down to the present time, and prophesy as to its future. The subject is one that a great majority of the people are more or less familiar with, and we all will no doubt learn many valuable points in regard to "our own, our native land."

The following is the program:

THE STAGE IS A GOOD PLACE FOR EARNEST WOMEN

By HENRIETTA CROSMAN,
Star of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs"

LIKE most every one else, my start was made in one of the smaller companies, and after a year or so I got into New York. I went to Daly's and then to the Lyceum. I thought I had made a name for myself when I played in "Gloriana," but when that play was withdrawn I found that I COULDN'T GET AN ENGAGEMENT. But what at the time seemed to me a hard blow was really my salvation, for, unable to obtain work, I was compelled to accept engagements in stock. Naturally I said to myself, "If you were a good actress, Henrietta Crosman, they would want you in New York; but, being a bad actress, you must play twice a day in any old place."

I didn't realize that that same twice a day and a long part each week to study were THE VERY EXPERIENCES I NEEDED. I only looked at the hardship of it all and complained at my lot. Stock parts and the opportunity to play good roles gave me great experience, such as I could have got in no other way, and now I am the most thankful of women that the fates decreed I could not get even one manager to give me a part on Broadway.

YET WITH IT ALL, KNOWING THE WORK AND DISAPPOINTMENTS THAT MUST COME, WERE SOME YOUNG WOMAN TO ASK MY ADVICE ABOUT GOING ON THE STAGE I SHOULD SAY, DO SO BY ALL MEANS—THAT IS, PROVIDED YOU ARE SURE THAT YOU HAVE SOME TALENT, A GOOD CONSTITUTION AND AN ABILITY TO PERFORM AN IMMENSE AMOUNT OF HARD WORK.

The opportunities offered a young woman in the dramatic profession are more, I think, than in any other. There is always room at the top, and I presume that every young woman who goes on the stage has an ambition to become a star. To a young woman who has talent my advice would be to ADOPT THE PROFESSION OF THE STAGE.

When one looks at the myriad of young girls who are working in stores, offices and other places, earning a mere pittance and WITH NO OPPORTUNITY OF ADVANCEMENT beyond a certain limit, one cannot help but see the advantage of the stage as a profession, if the applicant is suited in temperament, constitution and all else for her work. The stage is like all other arts—one does not have to wait for a vacancy in the ranks for advancement. For painters, writers, singers and actors advance comes to those who are deserving, and this does not hinge upon the will of some petty employer. Even if the dramatic schools are grinding out actors by the dozens today, I would not discourage any one with ability to enter the profession. GOOD ACTORS ARE SCARCE enough, and the stage will not be hurt by the addition of a number of bad actors if a few good actors can be given it.

To the girl who loves her work and realizes its seriousness I would say, "BY ALL MEANS GO AHEAD." But to the young woman who looks on the stage as a sort of frolic through life and an easy way of gaining the admiration she craves I should say, "KEEP AWAY FROM IT." In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred success on the stage is the result of hard work. In no profession, business or calling is the work so hard or trying, and the young person who contemplates making a step in this profession should realize that she is about to enter a profession in which the hardships, disappointments, work and triumphs, if they finally come, are greater than IN ANY OTHER walk of life I can recall.

EXPLOSION KILLS FIVE MEN

Twenty-five Others Injured In an Illinois Mine.

Carbondale, Ill., May 12.—In an explosion Wednesday at the shaft of the Big Muddy Coal and Iron company in Herran, five men were killed outright, five seriously injured and twenty others slightly injured. The dead are John Miller, Dick Reins, Fritz Seiberg, Evan Williams and Thomas Green.

Six kegs of powder had been placed in the mine during the time intervening between the night and day shifts for distribution to the men in the morning. John Miller, a driver, had charge of the distribution of the explosives.

Ten minutes after Miller was supposed to have accomplished his task the electric current which runs the machines was turned on and the explosion followed.

It is supposed that through some mistake the current was switched on before Miller had distributed the powder.

DISAGREEMENT IN AMES CASE

Jury Discharged After Being Out for Forty-three Hours.

Minneapolis, May 16.—The jury in the case of former Mayor A. A. Ames, charged with accepting a bribe, disagreed and was discharged at noon, having been in secret deliberation for forty-three hours.

The members of the jury say the vote was six to six.

Judge Elliott thanked the jurors for their faithful consideration of the case and after court adjourned Dr. Ames shook hands with every man of the twelve.

This was the second trial of Dr. Ames for alleged corruption during his regime as mayor of Minneapolis.

The charges in both instances were that he took money from women of the town for "protection."

RETIRE OLD BISHOPS

RADICAL ACTION RECOMMENDED BY COMMITTEE AT METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 14.—After a secret session lasting over ten hours and marked by periods of great confusion the committee on episcopacy of the Methodist general conference adjourned after midnight after having definitely decided, it is reliably stated, to retire five of the present bishops because of age and ineffectiveness and to choose six and probably eight new bishops. The action is said to be without precedent in the history of the church.

There is little doubt that the conference will confirm the action of the committee, as all the prominent leaders are members of the episcopacy committee. The committee's report will come before the general body next Tuesday and in the meantime the leaders of the contending elements will marshal their forces for the final fray.

The names of the bishops who will be retired, if the recommendation of the committee is accepted, have not been made public.

Mrs. Clara Barton Resigns as Head of American Red Cross.

Washington, May 14.—Miss Clara Barton has resigned the presidency of the American Red Cross society and has been succeeded by Mrs. General John A. Logan, who has heretofore occupied the office of vice president of the association.

The ceremony occurred at Mrs. Logan's residence and was participated in by Miss Barton, Mrs. Logan and members of the executive committee of the Red Cross. Miss Barton's letter of resignation was a partial review of the work of the organization.

Certain London rounds have been sold for as much as £300 as going concerns, and many such rounds change hands at a price for the good will of from £20 to £100. Several London cats' meat men have made considerable fortunes, and one of them in southeast London is said to be worth £30,000. Out of London a certain Leeds caterer for cats made a competency by selling portions of fish instead of bits of meat.

Coining Racial Characteristics.

A butcher who has a big market and confesses to his friends that he expects all of his assistants to make at least one-half their respective salaries on short weight was asked the other night how the scheme was operated. Said he:

"By studying human nature. An Irishwoman, for instance, always keeps her eyes on the scales, but is not overparticular about her change. A German woman, on the other hand, invariably counts her change over and over again, but is heedless as to the weights. We work short change on the one and short weight on the other."—New York Press.

Multiples of Nine and Six.

Possibly it was the belief in the supposed influence of nine and six on men's lives that originally gave rise to the custom of granting leases for multiples of seven and nine years, never for an even hundred or thousand, for fear of the power of the evil one. Nine, the trinity of the trinities, is the perfect plural and is credited with mystic properties. As might be supposed, therefore, many superstitions are connected with it.

DROWNING IS QUICK.

Man Cannot Live Under Water More Than Two Minutes.

"The story frequently repeated about professional divers who have been able to remain under water for over two minutes is silly," said a doctor. "No one can remain under water that long without drowning, whether he is a trained diver or not. At Navarino, where the sponge divers are reported to be able to remain under water three and four minutes, tests were made recently and resulted in conclusively proving that none of them remained down as long as a minute and a half. Ninety seconds seems a very long time to the watcher on shore, and it is about the limit of a diver's endurance under water. At Ceylon, where time tests were also made among the famous pearl divers, it was ascertained that few of them remained below the surface as long as a minute, and other tests made on the Red sea among the Arabs proved that a minute and a quarter was the longest they could endure without a fresh breath.

"On the coast of England several years ago a diver, a trained diver, one of the best on the coast, renowned for his endurance, went down and was pulled up so slowly when he gave the signal that he was under water about two minutes and five seconds. He was drawn out of the water insensible, with blood flowing from his nose and ears, and it was only after long and arduous work that his recovery from the effects of that two minute stay under water was assured. Drowning is a quick death. Even though the water is kept out of the lungs, insensibility will ensue in one minute and complete unconsciousness in two. The stories of people who have been in the water five minutes being resuscitated are generally mistakes or untrue. A man could not be in the water five minutes without coming to the surface several times and be restored to life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Many people think of gold as the most valuable metal, whereas there are now seventeen known which are more valuable. Gold, silver and sometimes platinum are classed as "precious" metals not because of their intrinsic value so much as because of their resistance to corrosion, which makes them suitable for jewelry, etc. But many metals are more rare and costly, the new element radium being the most striking example.

"Resolved that each county is entitled to one delegate for each two hundred and fifty votes or majority fraction thereof cast for the republican candidate for President in 1900 and that each county be allowed in addition thereto five delegates at large. In new precincts formed since the election of 1900 the basis of representation may be fixed for local conventions on the vote cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1902."

All county conventions in the state for the election of delegates to this convention shall be held on Tuesday, June 28, A. D. 1904.

All primary elections must be conducted as prescribed in the Primary Election laws of said state.

By order of the Republican State Central Committee.
ROBERT JAMISON, Chairman.
Charles C. Whitney Secretary.

Judge Luman C Simons is receiving daily assurance of the support of the Republicans of this district, and will be given a flattering endorsement at the fall election.

George B. Courtelyou will likely be chairman of the National Republican Committee, as it is said that President Roosevelt favors his receiving the appointment to conduct the G. O. P. elephant to a glorious victory this fall. Mr. Cortelyou is a bright statesman, and will admirably fill the place of the late Senator Hanna.

The Democrats cannot see a man in the district who is able to make a half way showing against Commissioner Wm. C. L. Demann at the polls this fall, and their immaculate organ hasn't got up courage enough yet to even suggest anyone for fear it would cause a laugh. Mr. Demann will be chosen without a fight worthy of the name.

That poor Thief River Falls Review gets it in the neck all around. Both the St. Hilaire Spectator and the Crookston Times took deserved falls out of it last week, and the rest of the people look on the product as a hugh joke. But then, these dear boys came direct from Iowa here to teach the people how to be the real thing, and they have failed so miserably that it can't help but create a laugh.

The only way the "report has has gained currency" that Chairman Martin had ever requested anything of the Gazette, in regard to supporting anyone or anybody, was in the head of the fellow who presides over the Courier and he published what he knew was a lie. If the dear Courier thinks that any one could gain notoriety or anything else by being roasted in that sheet it had better wipe off its spectacles. There isn't by actual count half a dozen people in Minnesota who for a minute could be led to believe he is earnest in what he says. A look at him would create an instant impression of inconsistency.

The Government is spending a good deal of time and energy now in preparing to build the Panama Canal. The $40,000,000 having been paid to the canal company and the $10,000,000 to Panama, and the result having been acquiesced in by practically the whole world,—for even Colombia has sent back her minister to this capital,—the real work will now begin. General Davis, governor of the canal zone, will proceed under the general supervision of the Secretary of War. It is estimated that in three years reasonable sanitation will be established and the surveys will be finished and the contracts let. Something like $25,000,000 a year will be spent for the next ten years. It is odd that this is almost precisely the estimate made by the old French company thirty years ago.

The "flopper" asks if the Gazette will support the Republican nominee for governor this fall. While we should not pay any attention to the whimperings of this youth, nevertheless we will answer him by saying that we will gladly support the choice of the Republicans of Minnesota for governor, and openly challenge and dare him to say as much in regard to his position as regards the Democratic nominee. It must be a hard pill for the Democrats of the county to think of swallowing this fellow as their chairman and dictator for the next two years, but they dare not refuse to name him or he will knife them, and that would be too bad.

BIG DANCE AT AGENCY.

Indians Get Paid and Immediately Proceed to Hold a "Blow-Out."

Advices sent out from the Red Lake Agency indicate that the Indians held a big dance and bullion last week, the "blow-out" being one of the biggest affairs of the kind held in many moons, says the Thief River Falls Press.

The Indians were paid off last week, receiving the first payment of the purchase price of lands disposed of to the government, getting $20,000 in a lump, this amounting to some $14 per capita. The report from the Agency goes onto to say that the big dance house at the Agency is in shape for the pow-wow and dancing will begin to-night. Many visitors are expected from the Cass Lake and Leach Lake reservations and some of the most famous dancers in the Chippewa nation are expected to attend and help to make merry and get the money off. The Agency stores did a thriving business yesterday in guady trinkets, blankets and all sorts of things that are dear to the heart of Poor Lo.

Preparations are being made for a big feast, which begins tomorrow. Several cattle will be barbecued and the Indians anticipate a feed that should be all sufficient to hold them for a while.

The usual coterie of tin horn gamblers are in attendance and poker on pine stumps finds great favor with the bucks, many of whom remain for days and nights at a sitting. Some of the Indians are proficient gamblers themselves and a story is being told on a poker player from an up-line town, who has the reputation of being a successful big miiter and sat into a braced proposition with four Indians and lost his bank roll with an ease and grace that was no trouble.

Arrangements are being made at the Agency for an eight days' celebration in July, at which there will be games of all sorts end a general big time. The Indians have an excellent base ball team and are particularly anxious to take on the Bemidji team.

Liked the Way They Responded.

Thief River Falls Press: On behalf of the people of Thief River we wish to express our appreciation of the generous way in which Red Lake Falls threw jelously to the winds and came to our assistance in the matter of securing the reservation sale at this place. Upon request of W. C. Smiley, Ed. L. Healy, the land man, secured the signatures of eight of the most prominent business firms of the Lower Falls to a telegram asking our representatives in Congress to use all honorable means to secure the sale at Thief River. Attached to the request were the names of such staunch men as A. P. Toupin, J. A. Duffy, Dr. N. M. Watson, S. M. Sivertson, T. Gareau, L. C. Simons, Ed. L. Healy and Chas. E. Boughton. This action on the part of the county seat citizens was handsomely done and we up here appreciate the courtesy and will endeavor at some furute time to reciprocate. St. Hilaire also came to the front with telegrams and assisted us in landing the sale, and will by so doing reap a portion of the benefits.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at Schreiter's Drug Store.

PRISONS AS INCUBATORS OF CRIME

By CHARLTON T. LEWIS, President New York State Prison Association

THE purpose of preventing future crime dictates, first of all, the abolition of every traditional institution and practice which tends to produce criminals. There is no doubt that the criminal class consists mainly of THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN MADE CRIMINALS BY PRISON LIFE. There has been much improvement in the discipline of prisons, but prisons in general are still schools of crime. Apart from the associations which they furnish the unnatural life in confinement is weakening to manhood, and it is always a degradation to its subject. Moreover, the improvement has not extended in general to local jails. These are the class rooms from which the criminal class is chiefly recruited.

ANY THOROUGH REFORM OF PENAL LAW, THEREFORE, MUST CONTEMPLATE AN IMMENSE REDUCTION IN THE USE MADE OF PRISONS AND JAILS.

If a rational rule were formulated on the subject it would be: Put no man in prison unless his confinement is necessary to the safety of the community. Keep him there ONLY SO LONG AS THIS NECESSITY CONTINUES.

NEW YORK TO PARIS BY RAIL

By LOUIS DE LOBEL, French Engineer

FOR years it has been my dream to unite New York and Paris by rail, and I think it will eventually be realized. A company has been formed to carry through the project. THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT HAS BECOME INTERESTED in it and has granted concessions to build a line from Irkutsk to Bering strait. We are now trying to secure privileges from the Canadian government to build on its land, with the right to hold Pacific terminals. I think these will be granted. The road as planned will open the Alaska mining region. Fifty million dollars has been promised to begin the undertaking. SIX YEARS WILL BE REQUIRED TO COMPLETE THE LINE, and when finished the trip in cars from New York to Paris can be made in fourteen days. I have personally explored the entire route as proposed and am confident the road can be built. The route is from Irkutsk to Jakoutsk, thence to East cape and from there direct to Bering strait and thence to Yukon City. The greatest feature of the road will be A TUNNEL UNDER BERING STRAIT, as a ferry is not practicable. This will be the most expensive part of the work. I estimate the entire line can be built at a cost of $300,000,000, which will include everything.

TEACHERS' SALARIES ARE TOO SMALL

By ALFRED MOSELY, London (England) Educationalist

IN the United States the salaries of the teachers are uniformly too small, MUCH TOO SMALL. Better inducements are offered in other lines of work, and the teaching profession is therefore left in many cities to persons who cannot secure profitable work elsewhere. The cost of living is higher here than in England, and yet we pay higher salaries to our teachers than are paid in America. America does not have enough men teachers, and for this, I suppose, the LOW SALARIES are largely responsible.

The teacher cannot do his best work if he is paid too low a salary. The salary should be sufficiently high to induce the BEST persons to take up teaching, and when the teacher's usefulness to the system is at an end he is ENTITLED to a pension.

THE MANIA FOR MONEY GETTING

By Rev. Dr. R. P. JOHNSON, John D. Rockefeller's Pastor

MONEY GETTING IS THE PASSION OF LIFE TODAY. In no age of the world have so many people made it their supreme aim in life. "Put money in thy purse" is the philosophy of the age. It is not confined to any class of men. If an examination were made of your blood and mine we would find the same microbe there. The sign of it is the tendency TO MEASURE MEN BY THE DOLLAR MARK. At one time in our history they put human beings on the block and sold them to the highest bidder; but, if what we hear is true, there is many a woman of high station today who puts her daughter on the block and auctions her off to the highest bidder. It's contagious; it's in the air we breathe. We want more money.

This is partly a cause and partly an effect. In one way or another men are anxious to show their superiority. At one time it was by physical strength. In these days of peace how has a man to show his superiority? One way is to amass a larger fortune than his neighbor. Explain this as you will, IT IS MADNESS, because it has its delusions. One is that it's the highest aim in life to accumulate a fortune. Another delusion is that its attainment argues the highest power, which isn't true. It argues simply that a man has a talent in that direction, and when it comes to measuring talents who shall say which is greatest?

IF MAN IS TO MAKE THE ACCUMULATION OF A LARGE FORTUNE HIS SOLE AIM IN LIFE, THEN MOST OF US ARE MISERABLE FAILURES. ONE OF THE EVILS IS THAT IT DRAWS OUR ATTENTION FROM FIELDS WHERE WE MIGHT WIN SUCCESS AND ENRICH THE WORLD AND KEEPS US FROM FOLLOWING OUR OWN PARTICULAR BENT.

The bright men like Washington and Jefferson who gave themselves years ago to their country are not in legislative halls now THEY ARE CORPORATION LAWYERS. This passion has robbed the country of the services of its best. It also makes us forget God.

I BELIEVE EVERY MAN SHOULD DEVELOP HIS PARTICULAR TALENT, BUT KEEP IT SUBORDINATE, WHETHER IT BE WEALTH GETTING OR SOMETHING ELSE.

The new mill will be one of the largest in this part of the state, and equipped with all the latest and best machinery.

The Gazette force has been too busy on job work this week to put in much time on the paper, and if there is a shortage of news the cause can easily be assigned. The high school commencement programs, the Juniors' invitations and menus and several other big jobs have been in process of construction and the combined efforts of the force have been necessary to keep from getting swamped with work.

Wiley Tindolph, the irrepressible Thief River Falls hustler, visited the county seat and metropolis the first couple of days of this week. Wiley returns from his western trip looking as young as ever, and is here prepared to again put in some hard licks for Northern Minnesota, and Red Lake county in particular. If Mr. Tindolph remains in Red Lake county until two years from now he will be chosen to represent this district in the state senate, and the choice would be merited in every sense of the word.

He was crossing the bridge on the way home when the freight train hove in sight, and only by the quickest kind of action did Mr. Johnson succeed in getting out of the way on the side of the bridge. His pet dog was with him, and was less fortunate than his owner, being ground under the wheels of the engine.

The many friends of Mr. Herringer are urging him to become a candidate for the Republican nomination of railroad and warehouse commissioner, and it is expected that he will announce himself one way or the other in this week's Ada Index. Mr. Herringer is the ideal man for the place, and his candidacy would receive the support of the Republicans of this part of the state to a man.

The Surprise Store's popular proprietors have both been "on the shelf," so to speak, this week, but though slightly disfigured were still in the ring at every stage of the game. Paul Berthon, the "age" of the concern, has been crippled as a result of the operation on his toes, and J. B. Armstrong, the "beauty" end of the firm, suffered with one of Job's comforters on his neck, so that he has been compelled to do the star-gazing act all week. Despite these inconveniences, both popular fellows were at their posts, though not as spry as usual.

K. J. Weeks, the popular real estate man of the up-river Falls, was a business caller last Friday. Mr. Weeks has been looking over the county a little in the interests of his candidacy for Register of Deeds, and is well satisfied with the reception he has received. He is a bright fellow and a known hustler, and will be right in the race up to the wire.

The weather since last Sunday has been all that could be desired, and by Saturday night of this week practically all the grain will be in the ground, although in some places it has been too wet to do a great deal of seeding. The trees have donned their full summer attire, and The Gazette doubts if a prettier spot exists on the face of the globe than the beautiful Red River Valley at this time.

Editor Gustafson, of the Tenstrike Tribune, filed a petition for the organization of a new town in 148-31, east of the present village of Tenstrike. The petition will be taken up at the next regular meeting of the Beltrami county board and will probably be granted. The proposed name for the new town is Taylor or Bright. The country in that vicinity has developed very rapidly during the past year and the settlers deem organization a practical necessity.

Railroad construction on the new line of the Sault St. Marie through Red Lake county has commenced at several points, and during the coming three months the work will be pushed rapidly to completion. One outfit of graders is camped at Plummer and working north, another is at Alex Sorenson's farm in Emardville, and the third one is camped at Brooks. The work will go forward rapidly, and the day of the advent of the iron horse in that neighborhood is not far distant.

Farmers of the valley anticipate one of the largest hay crops in several years this summer, because of the plentiful quantity of rain which livened the meadows and brought forth the verdure at the proper time and when nature was in the best condition to receive moisture. The meadows are already bristling with green grass and haying time will see the mowers cutting down the tall grass in unusually large quantities. It is not expected however, that the price will be low. The demand for hay in the Red River Valley at the present time is such that regardless of the amount of crop, prices will remain at a fair figure.

The many friends of this popular young man are more than pleased to him home again as well as of yore.

A certain young lady of St. Hilaire is looking for Harry Ives, the Spectator man, with a shot gun. He meant to compliment her at a party by noting that "her dainty feet were encased in shoes that might have been taken for fairy boots." When Art Ittner set up the local he had his mind on baseball, and made the item say: "Her dirty feet were encased in shoes that might have been taken for ferry boats."

Crookston Journal: Alderman Johnson who is in the contracting business is at Wylie where he has the contract for the construction of a $10,000 brick residence for Mayor Lundgren of that place. The residence will probably be the finest in the northwest in a place of that size. However Mayor Lundgren has prospered in business there and felt that it was proper to continue his residence where prosperity had smiled on him.

Potatoes are selling for $1.50 a bushel, and are scarce at that exhorbitant price, says the Grand Forks Courier. Is it not strange that a state so noted for the quality of its potatoes should ever face such a shortage as is apparent this year? It certainly should induce the farmers to plant at least double there usual acreage. Seems to us that potatoes are a source of more revenue to the farmer than any cereal he can grow at the same market value.

The recent rains have been at least good for the logging and mill men of the northern portion of the state inasmuch as the driving streams have been well filled with water and the drives in the various bodies of water have been started down stream under most favorable conditions. Manager Parker of the Clearwater Logging company stated that the Clearwater drive should come down very rapidly and with little loss of logs this spring. Men have been found in great numbers for driving and wages are not as high as a year ago. The Clearwater Company has four large wanagans and employs on the river some hundred and fifty men.

Editor McDonald, the writer of the continued story entitled "The Worldwide Wonders of that Special Reservation Addition," to be concluded —nit—was a caller here Monday. The Gazette was not favored with a call, but will withstand the shock, no doubt.

An exchange says that a country editor west of us who claimed to be an authority on grip told his readers that as long as they keep their feet dry they would not have the disease. The next day he got a communication from a subscriber, claiming that he had two wooden legs and yet suffered from the grip for five successive years.

Mrs. A. G. Bjorneby and children expect to leave sometime in June for an extended trip. They will first visit with Mrs. Bjorneby's parents at Kenyon, after that they will go to California to spend several months. Mrs. Bjorneby's health has not been of the best of late, and she is in hopes that the trip to the warmer climate will restore it to her.

Fred Borchers left on Monday evening's train for his visit of several months with his parents in Germany. He will visit in Hamburg, Stresslau and other points, and contemplates a most enjoyable trip. It is his first visit to the old country in a number of years, and certainly should prove beneficial. His many Red Lake Falls friends will wish him bon voyage.

Thief River Press: Among those to make addresses at the editorial meeting held at Heron Lake last week was W. W. Cooley, of St. Paul, who will be remembered by nearly all Thief River people as having spent several weeks in the city last fall in the interests of Collier's publications. The Major can always be depended upon to have something to say and he usually says something good.

A young man of this city is inspired to make the following comment on a highly interesting article for a subject: "The ☞ ☙ of the Red Lake Falls girls are slender and delicately tinted, their i i are like * * * *, and they are without = in this or any other §. Their frowns are like ‡ ‡ ‡, and their 345784 excite ! ! ! of pleasure and a desire to m⌣ them. Read this ¶ closely, and do not ? its veracity."

Four bright Red Lake Falls young ladies will graduate from the State Normal school at Moorhead next week with high honors, and return here to spend their summer vacation. The Gazette understands that one or two of them have secured positions in schools in the Valley for the fall and winter term.

Crookston Times: Conductor Engels, who has been running on the Great Northern out of Grand Forks arrived in Crookston last evening and this morning took the run that Conductor Spears has had for some time between Crookston, Fargo, Thief River Falls and St. Vincent. Mr. Spears will go to Grand Forks and run from there to Walhalla. He and his family have many warm friends in Crookston who will deeply regret his transfer.

Ovide Emard lest yesterday for a trip out on the road in the interests of the Beaver-Harrison Mining company, of Salt Lake City, and will spend several days at different valley points. Mr. Emard recently returned from a visit to the mines, and was favorably impressed with the prospects. The report that the share holders were afraid of getting "skinned" and had sent Mr. Emard to investigate was erroneous, as he says at no time did he feel that his shares were not what he bought them for. He thinks that without question he has got a good thing, and the people here will trust that this is the case.

RED LAKE FALLS

There is a crowd of old-time sportsmen in Red Lake Falls that claim they can catch more fish in a given period than any like aggregation in the state, and to prove their prowess in that line hied themselves to the river last Sunday, and fished to their heart's content. The Gazette isn't supposed to know the condition of their pocketbooks on their return with the nice string of fish, and wouldn't have been wise to the "picket" plan inaugerated to catch fish on dry land, if Mercier hadn't given his boss away.

Popular Young People Wed.

William St. Yves, a popular young man of Badger, and Miss Laura Quesnelle, daughter of Evangelist Quesnelle, of the same place, were married at St. Joseph's church in this city last Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Father Fayolle officiating. The contracting parties are both well and favorably known in this section, and have the well wishes of a large number of admiring friends for a long and prosperous wedded life. They will reside at Badger for the present.

Washington School Notes.

Edited by fifth and sixth grades.

The sixth grade has begun the review of Asia.

Hazel Bourdon had her seat changed Friday afternoon.

Monday's lesson in Language for the sixth grade was a study of proverbs.

Work is progressing for the field meet to take place Friday, May 27th.

There was no one tardy or absent Tuesday, a thing which seldom occurs.

The sixth grade have stopped their reader to finish their "Stories of Minnesota."

Robert Lawton and Joseph Skala have returned to school again and we are glad to see them back.

The fifth grade, altho they have been working hard, will not be able to review any Arithmetic.

The pupils are putting in good hard study on account of the final examination next week.

Friday afternoon after Geography classes we had a house cleaning party and ever one's desk was put in order.

This warm weather is sleepy weather, and one of our fifth grade boys indulged in a nap Monday afternoon.

STRONGEST EVIDENCE OF FAITH

A. L. Reichert Guarantees that Hyomei will Cure the worst Case of Catarrh in Red Lake Falls.

When one of the most reputable concerns in Red Lake Falls guarantees that a medicine will effect a cure or he will refund the money, it speaks volumes as to the merits of that remedy. It is in this way that A. L. Reichert is selling Hyomei, the treatment that has made so many remarkable cures of both acute and chronic catarrh in Red Lake Falls and vicinity.

Hyomei is not a pill nor is it a liquid that has to be taken with a tablespoon or wineglass. Just breathe it by the aid of an inhaler that comes in every outfit and benefit will be seen from the first treatment.

It destroys all germ life in the air passages and lungs and enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone. It cures catarrh or the head and throat, or of the stomach, liver and kidneys. Wherever mucous membrane contains catarrhal germs, there Hyomei will do its work of healing. When using this treatment, the air you breathe will be found like that on the mountains high above the sea level, where grow balsamic trees and plants which make the air pure by giving off volatile antiseptic fragrance that is healing to the respiratory organs.

Complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment.

Remember that if Hyomei does not cure you A. L. Reichert will refund your money. This is a good time to cure catarrh by this natural method and prevent catarrhal colds that are so common at this season.

finery with a perceptible agitation and the editor himself with a friendly shake of the hand. "Mildy says to wait out here."

There was a faint rustling within the house, the swish of draperies on the stairs, a delicious whispering, when light feet descend, tapping, to hearts that beat an answer, the telegraphic message: "We come! We come! We are near! We are near!" Lige Willetts stared at Harkless. He had never thought the latter was good looking until he saw him step to the door to take Helen Sherwood's hand and say, in a strange, low, tense voice, "Good morning," as if he were announcing, at the least: "Every one in the world, except us two, died last night. It is a solemn thing, but I am very happy."

They walked, Minnie and Mr. Willetts, a little distance in front of the others. Harkless could not have told afterward whether they rode or walked or floated on an airship to the courthouse. All he knew distinctly was that a divinity in a pink shirt waist and a hat that was woven of gauzy cloud by mocking fairies to make him stoop hideously to see under it dwelt for the time on earth and was at his side, dazzling him in the morning sunshine. Last night the moon had lent her a silvery glamour. She had something of the ethereal whiteness of night dews in that watery light, a nymph to laugh from a sparkling fountain at the moon, or, as he thought, remembering her courtesy for his pretty speech, perhaps a little lady of King Louis' court wandering down the years from Fontainebleau and appearing to clumsy mortals sometimes of a summer night when the moon was in their heads.

But today she was of the daintiest color, a pretty girl whose gray eyes twinkled to his in gay companionship. He marked how the sunshine danced across the shadows of her fair hair and seemed itself to catch a luster rather than impart it, and the light of the June day drifted through the gauzy hat to her face, touching it with a delicate and tender flush that came and went like the vibrating pink of early dawn. She had the divinest straight nose, tip tilted a faint, alluring trifle, and a dimple cleft her chin, "the deadliest maelstrom in the world!" He thrilled through and through. He had been only vaguely conscious of the dimple in the night. It was not until he saw her by daylight that he really knew it was there.

The village hummed with life before them. They walked through shimmering airs, sweeter to breathe than nectar is to drink. She caught a butterfly basking on a jimson weed, and before she let it go held it out to him in her hand. It was a white butterfly. He asked which was the butterfly.

"Bravo!" she said, tossing the captive craft above their heads and watching the small sails catch the breeze. "And so you can make little flatteries in the morning too. It is another courtesy you should be having from me if it weren't for the dustiness of it. Wait till we come to the board walk."

She fastened her rose in place of the white one.

She had some big pink roses at her waist.

Indicating these, he answered, "In the meantime, I know very well a lad that would be blithe to accept a pretty token of any lady's high esteem."

"But you have one already, a very beautiful one." She gave him a genial up and down glance from head to foot, half quizzical and half applauding, but so quick he scarcely saw it, and he was glad he had resurrected the straw hat with the youthful ribbon and his other festal vestures. "And a very becoming flower a white rose is," she continued, "though I am a bold girl to be blarneying with a young gentleman I met no longer ago than last night."

"But why shouldn't you blarney with a gentleman when you began by saving his life?"

"Especially when the gentleman had the politeness to gallop about the county with me tucked under his arm." She stood still and laughed softly, but consummately, and her eyes closed tight with the mirth of it. She had taken one of the roses from her waist, and as she stood holding it by the long stem its cool petals lightly pressed her lips.

"You may have it—in exchange," she said. He bent down to her, and she fastened her rose in place of the white one in his coat. She did not ask him, directly or indirectly, who had put the white one there for him. She knew by the way it was pinned that he had done it himself. "Who is it that ev'ry morning brings me these lovely flowers?" she burlesqued as he bent over her.

"Mr. Wimby," he returned. "I will point him out to you. You must see him and Mr. Bodeffer, who is the oldest inhabitant and the crossest of Carlow."

"Will you present them to me?"

"No; they might talk to you and take some of my time with you away from me."

Her eyes sparkled into his for the merest fraction of a second, and she laughed. Then she dropped his lapel, and they proceeded. She did not put the white rose in her belt, but carried it.

The square was heaving with a jostling, moving, good natured, happy and constantly increasing crowd that overflowed on Main street in both directions and whose good nature augmented in the ratio that its size increased. The streets were a kaleidoscope of many colors, and every window opening on Main street or the square was filled with eager faces. By 9 o'clock all the windows of the courthouse in the center of the square were occupied. Here most of the damsels congregated to enjoy the spectacle of the parade, and their swains attended, posted at coigns of less vantage behind the ladies. Some of the faces that peeped from the windows of the dark, old, shady courthouse were pretty, and some of them were not pretty, but nearly all of them were rosy cheeked, and all were pleasant to see because of the good cheer they kept.

Here and there, along the sidewalk below, a father worked his way through the throng, a licorice bedaubed cherub on one arm, his coat (borne with long enough on the other, followed by a mother, with the other children hanging to her skirts and tagging exasperatingly behind, holding red and blue toy balloons and delectable candy batons of spiral striped peppermint in tightly closed, sadly sticky fingers. A thousand cries rent the air—the strolling mountebanks and gypsying booth merchants, the peanut venders, the boys with palm leaf fans for sale, the candy sellers, the popcorn peddlers, the Italian with the toy balloons that float like a cluster of colored bubbles above the heads of the crowd and the balloons that wail like a baby; the red lemonade man, shouting in the shrill voice that reaches everywhere and endures forever: "Lemo'! Lemo'! Five a glass! Ice cole lemo'! Five cents, a nickel, a half a dime, the twentieth-potofadollah! Lemo'! Ice cole lemo'!"—all the vociferating harbingers of the circus crying their wares. Timid youths in shoes covered with dust through which the morning polish but dimly shone and unalterably hooked by the arm to blushing maidens bought recklessly of peanuts, of candy, of popcorn, of all known sweetmeats, perchance, and forced their way to the lemonade stands, and there, all shyly, silently sipped the crimson stained ambrosia. Everywhere the hawkers dinned, and everywhere was heard the plaintive squawk of the toy balloon.

In the courthouse yard, and so sinning in the very eye of the law, two swarthy, shifty looking gentlemen were operating with some greasy walnut shells and a pea what the fanciful or unsophisticated might have been pleased to call a game of chance, and the most intent spectator of the group around them was Mr. James Bardlock, the town marshal. He was simply and unofficially and earnestly interested. Thus the eye of the law may not be said to have winked upon the nefariousness now under its vision. It gazed with strong curiosity, an itch to dabble and, it must be admitted, a growing hope of profit, the game was so direct and the player so sure. Several countrymen had won small sums, and one, a charmingly rustic stranger, with a peculiar accent (he said that him and his goil should now have a smoot' olt time off his winninks, though the lady was not manifested) had pocketed $25 with no trouble at all. The two operators seemed depressed, declaring the luck against them and the Plattville people too brilliant at the game.

It was wonderful how the young couples worked their way arm in arm through the thickest crowds, never separating. Even at the lemonade stands they drank holding the glasses in their outer hands. Such are the sacrifices demanded by etiquette. But, observing the gracious outpouring of fortune upon the rare rustic just mentioned, a youth in a green tie disengaged his arm—for the first time in two hours—from that of a girl who looked upon him with fond, uncertain smiles and, conducting her to a corner of the yard, bade her remain there until he returned. He had to speak to Hartley Bowlder, he explained.

Then he plunged, red faced and excited, into the circle about the shell manipulators and offered to lay a wager.

"Hol' on there, Hen Fentriss," thickly objected a flushed young man beside him. "Iss my turn."

"I'm first, Hartley," returned the other. "You can hold yer hosses, I reckon."

"Plenty fer each and all, gents," interrupted one of the shell men. "Place yer epandulics on de little ball. W'ich is de nex' lucky gent to win our money? Gent bets four sixty-five he seen de little ball go under de middle shell. Up she comes! Dis time we wins. Plattville can't win every time. Who's de nex' lucky gent?"

Fentriss edged slowly out of the circle, abashed and with rapidly whitening cheeks. He paused for a moment outside, slowly realizing that all his money had gone in one wild, blind whirl—the money he had earned so hard and saved so hard to make a holiday for his sweetheart and himself. He stole one glance around the building to where a patient figure waited for him. Then he fled down a side alley and soon was out upon the country road, tramping sodden homeward through the dust, his chin sunk in his breast and his hands clinched tight at his sides. Now and then he stopped and bitterly hurled a stone at a piping bird on the fence or gay bobwhite in the fields. At noon the patient figure was still waiting in the corner of the courthouse yard, meekly twisting a coral ring upon her finger.

But the flushed young man who had spoken thickly to her deserter drew an envied roll of bank bills from his pocket and began to bet with tipsy caution, while the circle about the gamblers watched with fervid interest, especially Mr. Bardlock, town marshal.

From far up Main street came the cry "She's a-comin'! She's a-comin!" and this announcement of the parade proving only one of a dozen false alarms a thousand discussions took place over old fashioned silver timepieces as to when "she" was really due. Schofields' Henry was much appealed to as an arbiter in these discussions, from a sense of his having a good deal to do with time in a general sort of way, and thus Schofields' came to be reminded that it was getting on toward 10 o'clock, whereas, in the excitement of festival, he had not yet struck 9. This, rushing forthwith to do, he did, and, in the elation of the moment, seven or eight besides. Miss Helen Sherwood was looking down on the mass of shifting color from a second story window of the courthouse, and she had the pleasure of seeing Schofields' emerge on the steps beneath her when the bells had done and heard the cheers (led by Mr. Martin) with which the crowd greeted his appearance after the performance of his feat.

She turned beamingly to Harkless. "What a family it is!" she laughed. "Just one big, jolly family! I didn't know people could be like this until I came to Plattville."

"That is the word for it," he said, resting his hand on the casement beside her. "I used to think it was desolate, but that was long ago." He leaned from the window to look down. In his dark cheek was a glow the Carlow folks had never seen there, and somehow he seemed less thin and tired than usual; indeed, he did not seem tired at all, but for the contrary, and he carried himself upright, when he was not stooping to see under the hat, though not as if he thought about it. "I believe they are the best people I know," he went on. "Perhaps it is because they have been so kind to me; but they are kind to each other, too—kind, good people."

"I know," she said, nodding. "I know. There are fat women, women who rock and rock on piazzas by the sea, and they speak of country people as the 'lower classes.' How happy this big family is in not knowing it is the lower classes!"

"We haven't read Nordau down here," said John. "Old Tom Martin's favorite work is 'The Descent of Man,' and Miss Tibbs cares most for 'Lalla Rookh' and 'Beulah.' And why not?"

"It was a girl from Southeast Cottonbridge, Mass.," said Helen, "who heard I was from Indiana and asked me if I didn't 'hate to live so far away from things.'" There was a pause while she leaned out of the window with her face aside from him. Then she remarked carelessly, "I met her at Winter Harbor."

"Do you go to Winter Harbor?" he asked.

"We have gone there every summer until this one for years. Have you friends who go there?"

"I had once. There was a classmate of mine from Rouen"—

"What was his name? Perhaps I know him." She stole a glance at him and saw that his face had fallen into sad lines.

"He's forgotten me, I dare say. I haven't seen him for seven years, and that's a long time, you know, and he's 'out in the world,' where remembering is harder. Here in Plattville we don't forget."

"Were you ever at Winter Harbor?"

"I was once. I spent a very happy day there long ago, when you must have been a little girl. Were you there in"—

"Listen!" she cried. "The procession is coming. Look at the people!"

The parade had seized a psychological moment. There was a fanfare of trumpets in the east. Lines of people rushed for the streets, and as one looked down on the big straw hats and sunbonnets and many kinds of finer head apparel tossing forward they seemed like surf sweeping up the long beaches. She was coming at last. The boys whooped in the middle of the street. Some tossed their arms to heaven, others expressed their emotion by somersaults; those most deeply moved walked on their hands. In the distance one saw over the heads of the multitude tossing banners and the moving crests of triumphal cars, where "cohorts were shining in purple and gold."

There was another flourish of music. Then all the band gave sound, and, with the blare of brass and the crash of drums, the glory of the parade burst upon Plattville. Glory in the utmost! The impetus of the march time music, the fiere of royal banners, the smiling of beautiful court ladies and great silken nabobs, the swaying of howdahs on camel and elephant and the awesome shaking of the earth beneath the elephant's feet and his devastating eye (every one declared he looked the alarmed Mr. Bill Snoddy, stoutest citizen of the county, full in the face as he passed him, and Mr. Snoddy felt not at all reassured when Tom Martin severely hinted that it was with the threatening glance of a rival); then the badinage of the clown, creaking by in his donkey cart; the terrific recklessness of the spangled hero who was drawn along in a cage with two striped tigers—the delight of all this glittering pomp and pageantry needed even more than walking on your hands to express.

Last of all came the tooting calliope, followed by swarms of boys as it executed "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By, Jennie," with infinite gusto.

When it had gone Miss Sherwood's gaze relaxed—she had been looking on as eagerly as any child—and she turned to speak to Harkless and discovered that he was no longer in the room. Instead she found Minnie and Mr. Willetts, whom he had summoned from another window.

"He was called away," explained Lige. "He thought he'd be back before the parade was over and said you were enjoying it so much he didn't want to speak to you."

Minnie laughed. "Oh, everybody sends for Mr. Harkless."

"It was a farmer name of Bowlder," added Mr. Willetts. "His son Hartley 's drinking again, and there ain't any one but Harkless can do anything with him. You let him tackle a sick man to nurse or a tipsy feller to handle, and I tell you," Mr. Willetts went on, with enthusiasm, "he is at home. It beats me, and lots of people don't think college does a man any good. Why, the way he cured old Fis"— Miss Briscoe interrupted him.

"See!" she cried, pointing out of the window. "Look out there! Something's happened!"

There was a swirl in the crowd below. Men were running around a corner of the courthouse, and the women and children were harking after. They went so fast and there were so many of them that immediately that whole portion of the yard became a pushing, tugging, squirming jam of people.

"It's on the other side," said Lige. "We can see from the hall window. Come quick before these other folks fill it up."

They followed him across the building and looked down on an agitated swarm of faces. Five men were standing on the entrance steps to the door below them, and the crowd was thickly massed beyond, leaving a little semicircle clear about the steps. Those behind struggled to get closer and leaped in the air to catch a glimpse of what was going on. Harkless stood alone on the top step, his hand resting on the shoulder of the pale and contrite and sobered Hartley. On the lowest step Jim Bardlock was standing with sheepishly hanging head and between him and Harkless the two gamblers of the walnut shells. The journalist held in his hand the implements of their profession.

"Yes; give up every cent," he said quietly. "You've taken $86 from this boy. Hand it over."

The men began to edge down closer to the crowd, giving little, swift, desperate, searching looks from left to right and right to left and moving nervously about like weasels in a trap.

"Close up, there," said Harkless. "Don't let them out."

"W'y can't we git no square treatment here?" one of the gamblers whined. But his eyes blazed with a rage that belied the plaintive passivity of his tone. "We ain't been runnin' no skin. W'y d'ye say we gotter give up our own money? You gotter prove it was a skin. We risked our money fair."

"Prove it! Come up here, Eph Watts. Friends"—the editor turned to the crowd, smiling—"friends, here's a man we ran out of town once because he knew too much about things of this sort. He's come back to us again, and he's here to stay. He'll give us an object lesson on the shell game."

"It's pretty simple," remarked Mr. Watts. "The best way is to pick up the ball with your second finger and the back part of your thumb, as you pretend to lay the shell down over it—this way." He illustrated and showed several methods of manipulation with professional sang froid, and as he made plain the vulgar swindle by which many had been duped that morning there arose an angry and threatening murmur.

"You all see," said Harkless, raising his voice, "what a simple cheat it is—an old, wornout one. Yet a lot of you lost your own money on it and then stood by, staring like idiots, and let Hartley Bowlder lose $86, and not one of you lifted a hand. How hard did you work for what these two cheap crooks took from you? Ah," he cried, "it is because you were greedy that they robbed you so easily! You know it's true. It's when you want to get something for nothing that the 'confidence men' steal the money you sweat for and make you the laughingstock of the country. And you, Jim Bardlock, town marshal; you, who confess that you 'went in the game 60 cents' worth' yourself"— His face was wrathful and stern as he raised his accusing hand and leveled it at the unhappy municipal.

The town marshal smiled uneasily and deprecatingly about him and, seeing only angry, frowning brows, hearing only words of condemnation, passed his hand unsteadily over his fat mustache, shifted from one leg to the other and back again, looked up, looked down, and then, an amiable and pleasure loving man, beholding nothing but accusation and wrath in heaven and earth and wishing nothing more than to sink into the waters under the earth, but having no way of reaching them, and finding his troubles quite unbearable and himself unable to meet the manifold eye of man, he sought relief after the unsagacious fashion of a larger bird than he. His burly form underwent a series of convulsions not unlike sobs, and he shut his eyes tight and held them so, presenting a picture of misery unequaled in the memory of any spectator. The editor's outstretched hand began to shake. "You," he tried to continue; "you, a man elected to"—

"You, you, a man elected to"—

There came from the crowd the sound of an odd, high keyed voice drawling, "That's a nice vest Jim's got on, but it ain't hardly the feathers fitten for an ostrich, is it?"

Harkless broke into a ringing laugh and turned to the shell men. "Give up the boy's money. Hurry."

"Step down here and git it," said the one who had spoken.

There was a turbulent motion in the crowd, and a cry arose: "Run 'em out! Ride 'em on a rail! Tar and feathers! Run 'em out o' town!"

"I wouldn't dillydally long if I were you," said Harkless. A roll of bills was sullenly placed in his hand, which he counted and turned over to the elder Bowlder. One of the shell men clutched the editor's sleeve with his dirty hand.

"We hain't done wi' youse," he said hoarsely. "Don't belief it, not for a minute, see?"

The town marshal opened his eyes briskly and, placing a hand on each of the gamblers, said, "I do hereby arrest your said persons and declare you my prisoners."

The cry arose again louder: "Run 'em out! String 'em up! Hang 'em! Hang them!" And a forward rush was made.

"This way, Jim. Quick!" cried Harkless, bending down and jerking one of the gamblers half way up the steps. "Get through the hall to the other side and then run 'em to the lockup. No one will stop you that way. Watts and I will hold this door."

Bardlock hustled his prisoners through the doorway, and the crowd pushed up the steps, while Harkless struggled to keep the vestibule clear until Watts got the double doors closed. "Stand back, there!" he shouted. "It's all over. Don't be foolish. The law is good enough for us. Stand back, will you?" He was shoving vigorously with open hand and elbow, when a compact little group of men suddenly dashed up the steps together, and a heavy stick swung out over their heads. A straw hat with a gay ribbon sailed through the air. The editor's long arms went out swiftly from his body in several directions, the hands not open, but clinched and hard. The next instant he and Mr. Watts stood alone on the steps, and a man with a bleeding, blaspheming mouth dropped his stick and tried to lose himself in the crowd. Mr. Watts was returning something he had not used to his hip pocket.

"Prophets of Israel!" exclaimed William Todd ruefully. "It wasn't Eph Watts' pistol. Did you see Mr. Harkless? I was up on them steps when he begun. I don't believe he needs as much takin' care of as we think."

"Wasn't it one of them Crossroads devils that knocked his hat off?" asked Judd Bennett. "I thought I see Bob Skillett run up with a club."

Harkless threw open the doors behind him. The hall was empty. "You may come in now," he said. "This isn't my courthouse."

CHAPTER VI.

THEY walked slowly back along the pike toward the brick house. He was stooping very much as they walked. He wanted to be told that he could look at her for a thousand years. The small face was rarely and exquisitely modeled, but perhaps just now the salient characteristic of her beauty (for the salient characteristic seemed to be a different thing at different times) was the coloring, a delicate glow under the white skin, a glow that bewitched him in its seeming to reflect the rich benediction of the noonday sun that blazed overhead.

Once he had thought the way to the Briscoe homestead rather a long walk, but now the distance sped malignantly. Strolled they never so slow, it was less than a "young bird's flutter from a wood." With her acquiescence he rolled a cigarette, and she began to hum lightly the air of a song, a song of ineffably gentle, slow movement.

That, and a reference of the morning and perhaps the smell of his tobacco mingling with the fragrance of her roses, awoke again the old reminiscence of the night before. A clearly outlined picture rose before him—the high green slopes and cool cliff walls of the coast of Maine and the sharp little estuary waves he lazily watched through half closed lids while the pale smoke of his cigarette blew out under the rail of a waxen deck where he lay cushioned. And again a woman pelted his face with handfuls of rose petals and cried: "Up, lad, and at 'em! Yonder is Winter Harbor!" Again he sat in the oak raftered casino, breathless with pleasure, and heard a young girl sing the "Angel's Serenade," a young girl who looked so bravely unconscious of the big, hushed crowd that listened, looked so pure and bright and gentle and fresh that he had spoken of her as "Sir Galahad's little sister." He had been much taken with this child, but he had not thought of her from that time to this, he supposed. He had almost forgotten her. No! Her face suddenly stood out to his view as though he saw her with his physical eye, a sweet and vivacious child's face, with light brown hair and gray eyes and a short upper lip like a curled rose leaf. And the voice—

He stopped short. "You are Tom Meredith's little cousin."

"The great Harkless," she answered and stretched out her hand to him.

"I remember you."

"Isn't it time?"

"Ah, but I never forgot you!" he cried. "I thought I had. I didn't know who it was that I was remembering. I thought it was fancy, and it was memory. I never forgot your voice, singing, and I remembered your face, too, though I thought I didn't." He drew a deep breath. "That was why"—

"Tom has not forgotten you," she said as he paused.

"Would you mind shaking hands once more?" he asked.

She gave him her hand again. "With all my heart. Why?"

"I'm making a record of it; that's all. Thank you."

"They called me 'Sir Galahad's little sister' all one summer because the great John Harkless called me that. You danced with me in the evening."

"Did I?"

"Ah," she said, shaking her head, "you were too busy being in love with pretty Mrs. Van Skuyt to remember a waltz with only me! I was allowed to meet you as a reward for singing my very best, and you—you bowed with the indulgence of a grandfather and asked me to dance."

"Like a grandfather! How young I was then! How time changes us!"

"I'm afraid my conversation did not make a great impression upon you," she continued.

"But it did. I am remembering very fast. If you will wait a moment I will tell you some of the things you said."

The girl laughed merrily. Whenever she laughed he realized that it was becoming terribly difficult not to tell her how adorable she was. "I wouldn't risk it if I were you," she warned him, "because I didn't speak to you at all. I shut my lips tight and trembled all over every bit of the time I was dancing with you. I did not sleep that night, and I was unhappy, wondering what the great Harkless would think of me. I knew he thought me unutterably stupid because I couldn't talk to him. I wanted to send him word that I knew I had bored him. I couldn't endure that he shouldn't know that I knew I had. But he was not thinking of me in any way. He had gone to sea again in his white boat, the ungrateful pirate, cruising with Mrs. Van Skuyt."

"How time does change us!" said John. "You are wrong, though. I did think of you. I have at"—

"Yes," she interrupted, tossing her head in airy travesty of the stage coquette, "you think so—I mean, you say so—now. Away with you and your blarneying!"

And so they went through the warm noontide, and little he cared for the heat that wilted the fat mullein leaves and made the barefoot boy who passed by skip gingerly through the burning dust with anguished mouth and watery eye. Little he knew of the katydid that suddenly whirred its mill of shrillness in the maple tree and sounded so hot, hot, hot; or that other that railed at the country quiet from the dim, cool shade around the brick house, or even the rain crow that sat on the fence and swore to them in the face of a sunny sky that they should see rain ere the day were done. Little the young man recked of what he ate at Judge Briscoe's good noon dinner—chicken wing and young roas'n ear, hot rolls as light as the fluff of a summer cloudlet, and honey and milk and apple butter flavored like spices of Arabia and fragrant, flaky cherry pie and cool, rich, yellow cream. Lige Willetts was a lover, yet he said he asked no better than to just go on eating that cherry pie till a sweet death overtook him; but railroad sandwiches and restaurant chops might have been set before Harkless for all the difference it would have made to him.

At no other time is a man's feeling of companionship with a woman so strong as when he sits at table with her, not at a "decorated" and becatered and bewaitered table, but at a homely, appetizing, wholesome, home table like old Judge Briscoe's. The very essence of the thing is domesticity, and the implication is utter confidence and liking. There are few greater dangers for a bachelor. An insinuating imp perches on his shoulder and, softly tickling the bachelor's ear with the feathers of an arrow shaft, whispers: "Pretty gay, isn't it, eh? Rather pleasant to have that girl sitting there, don't you think?"

Enjoy having her notice your butter plate was empty? Think it exhilarating to hand her those rolls? Looks nice, doesn't she? Says 'Thank you' rather prettily? Makes your lonely breakfast seem mighty dull, doesn't it? How would you like to have her pour your coffee for you tomorrow, my boy? How would it seem to have such pleasant company all the rest of your life? Pretty cheerful, eh? It's my conviction that your one need in life is to pick her up in your arms and run away with her, not anywhere in particular, but just run and run and run away!"

After dinner they went out to the veranda, and the gentlemen smoked. The judge set his chair down on the ground, tilted back in it with his feet on the steps and blew a wavery, domed city up in the air. He called it solid comfort. He liked to sit out from under the porch roof, he said. He wanted to see more of the sky. The others moved their chairs down to join in the celestial vision. A feathery thin cloud or two had been fanned across it, but save for these there was nothing but glorious and tender brilliant blue. It seemed so clear and close one marveled the little church spire in the distance did not pierce it. Yet at the same time the eye ascended miles and miles into warm, shimmering ether. Far away two buzzards swung slowly at anchor halfway to the sun.

"O bright, translucent, cerulean hue,
Let my wide wings drift on in you,"

Harkless quoted, pointing them out to Helen.

"You seem to get a good deal of fun out of this kind of weather," observed Lige as he wiped his brow and shifted his chair into the shade.

"I expect you don't get such skies as this up in Rouen," said the judge, looking at the girl from between his lazily half closed eyelids.

"It's the same Indiana sky, I think," she answered.

"I guess maybe in the city you don't see as much of it or think as much about it, then. Yes, they're the Indiana skies," the old man went on.

"Skies as blue
As the eyes of children when they smile at you.

"There aren't any others anywhere that ever seemed much like them to me. They've been company for me all my life. I don't think there are any others half as beautiful, and I know there aren't any as sociable. They were always so." He sighed gently, and Miss Sherwood fancied his wife must have found the Indiana skies as lovely as he had in the days of long ago. "Seems to me they are the softest and bluest and kindest in the world."

"I think they are," said Helen, "and they are more beautiful than the Italian skies, though I doubt if many of us Hoosiers realize it, and certainly no one else does."

The old man leaned over and patted her hand. Harkless gasped. "'Us Hoosiers!'" chuckled the judge. "You're a great Hoosier, young lady! How much of your life have you spent in the state? 'Us Hoosiers!'"

"But I'm going to be a good one," she answered gayly, "and if I'm good enough when I grow up maybe I'll be a great one."

The buckboard had been brought around, and the four young people climbed in, Harkless driving. Before they started the judge, standing on the horse block in front of the gate, leaned over and patted Miss Sherwood's hand again. Harkless gathered up the reins.

"You'll make a great Hoosier, all right," said the old man, beaming upon the girl. "You needn't worry about that, I guess, my dear."

When he said "my dear," Harkless spoke to the horses.

"Wait," said the judge, still holding the little hand. "You'll make a great Hoosier some day; don't fret. You're already a very beautiful one." Then he bent his white head and kissed her gallantly.

"Good afternoon, judge," said John. The whip cracked, and the buckboard dashed off in a cloud of dust.

"Every once in awhile, Harkless," the old fellow called after them, "you must remember to look at the team."

The enormous white tent was filled with a hazy, yellow light, the warm, dusty, mellow light that thrills the rejoicing heart because it is found nowhere else in the world except in the tents of a circus, the canvas filtered sunshine and sawdust atmosphere of show day.

Here swayed a myriad of palm leaf fans; here paraded blushing youth and rosy maiden more relentlessly arm in arm than ever; here crept the octogenarian, Mr. Bodeffer, shaking on cane and the shoulder of posterity; here waddled Mr. Snoddy, who had hurried through the animal tent for fear of meeting the elephant; here marched sturdy yeomen and stout wives; here came William Todd and his true love, the good William hushed with the embarrassments of love, but looking out warily with the white of his eye for Mr. Martin and determined not to sit within a hundred yards of him; here rolled in the orbit of habit the town bacchanal, Mr. Wilkerson, who politely answered in kind all the uncouth roarings and guttural ejaculations of jungle and fen that came from the animal tent—in brief, here came with lightest heart the population of Carlow and part of Amo.

Helen had found a true word; it was a big family. Jim Bardlock, broadly smiling and rejuvenated, shorn of depression, paused in front of the "reserve" seats, with Mrs. Bardlock on his arm, and called loudly to a gentleman on a tier about the level of Jim's head: "How are ye? I reckon we were a leetle too smart fer 'em this morning, huh?" Five or six hundred people, every one within hearing, turned to look at Jim, but the gentleman addressed was engaged in conversation with a lady and did not notice.

"Hi! Hi, there! Say! Mr. Harkless!" bellowed Jim informally. The people turned to look at Harkless. His attention was arrested, and his cheek grew red.

"What is it?" he asked, a little confused and a good deal annoyed.

"I don't hear what ye say," shouted Jim, putting his hand to his ear.

"What is it?" repeated the young man. "I'll kill that fellow tonight," he added to Lige Willetts. "Some one aught to have done it long ago."

"What?"

"I said, What is it?"

"I jest wanted to say me and yan certainly did fool these here Hoosiers this morning. Hustled them two fellers through the courthouse, and nobody thought to slip round to the other door and head us off. Ha, ha! We were jest a leetle too many fer 'em, huh?"

From an upper tier of seats the rusty length of Mr. Martin erected itself joint by joint, like an extension ladder, and he peered down over the gaping faces at the town marshal. "Excuse me," he said sadly to those behind him, but his dry voice penetrated everywhere. "I got up to hear Jim say 'we' again."

Mr. Bardlock joined in the laugh against himself and proceeded with his wife to some seats forty or fifty feet distant. When he had settled himself comfortably he shouted over cheerfully to the unhappy editor, "Them shell aien got it in fer you, Mr. Harkless!"

"Hain't that fool shet up yit?" snarled the aged Mr. Bodeffer indignantly. He was sitting near the young couple, and the expression of his sympathy was distinctly audible to them and many others. "Got no more regards than a brazing calf—disturbin' a feller with his sweetheart!"

"The both of 'em says they're going to do fer ye," bleated Mr. Bardlock; "swears they'll ketch their evens with ye."

Mr. Martin rose again. "Don't git scared and leave town, Mr. Harkless!" he called out. "Jim 'll protect you."

Vastly to the young man's relief the band began to play and the equestrians and equestriennes capered out from the dressing tent for the "grand entrance," and the performance commenced. Through the long summer afternoon it went on—wonders of horsemanship and of horsewomanship, hair raising exploits on wires tight and slack, giddy tricks on the high trapeze, feats of leaping and tumbling in the rings, while the tireless musicians blatted inspiringly through it all, only pausing long enough to allow that riotous jester, the clown, to ask the ringmaster what he would do if a young lady came up and kissed him on the street, and to explode his witticisms during short intervals of rest for the athletes.

When it was over, John and Helen found themselves in the midst of a densely packed crowd and separated from Miss Briscoe and Lige. People were pushing and shoving, and he saw her face grow pale. He realized with a pang of sympathy how helpless he would feel if he were as small as she and at his utmost height could only see big, suffocating backs and huge shoulders pressing down from above. He was keeping them from crowding heavily upon her with all his strength, and a royal feeling of protectiveness came over him. She was so little. And yet, without the remotest hint of hardness, she gave him such a distinct impression of poise and equilibrium. She seemed so able to meet anything that might come; to understand it—even to laugh at it—so Americanly capable and sure of the event that, in spite of her pale cheek, he could not feel quite so protective as he wished to feel.

He managed to get her to one of the tent poles and placed her with her back to it. Then he set one of his own hands against it, over her head, braced himself and stood keeping a little space about her and ruggedly letting the crowd surge against him as it would. No one should touch her in rough carelessness.

"Please don't do that," he answered.

"Thank you. It was rather trying in there," she said and looked up into his eyes with a divine gratitude.

"Please don't do that," he answered in a low voice.

"Do what?"

"Look like that."

She not only looked like that, but more so. "Young man, young man," she said, "I fear you're wishful of turning a girl's head."

The throng was thick around them, garrulous and noisy, but they two were more richly alone together, to his appreciation, than if they stood on some far satellite of Mars. He was not to forget that moment, and he kept the picture of her, as she leaned against the big blue tent pole there, in his heart; the clear, gray eyes lifted to his, the piquant face with the delicate flush stealing back to her cheeks and the brave little figure that had run so straight to him out of the night shadows. There was something about her and in the moment that suddenly touched him with a saddening sweetness too keen to be borne. The forget-me-not finger of the flying hour that could not come again was laid on his soul, and he felt the tears start from his heart on their journey to his eyes. He knew that he should always remember that moment. She knew it too. She put her hand to her cheek and turned away from him a little tremulously. Both were silent.

They had been together since early morning. Plattville was proud of him. Many a friendly glance from the folk who jostled about them favored his suit and wished both of them well, and many lips, opening to speak to Harkless in passing, closed when their owners, more tactful than Mr. Bardlock, looked a second time.

Old Tom Martin, still perched alone on his high seat, saw them standing by the tent pole and watched them from under his dusty hat brim. "I reckon it's be'n three or four thousand years sence I was young," he sighed to himself. Then, pushing his hat still farther down over his eyes, "I don't believe I'd ort to rightly look on at that." He sighed again as he rose and gently spoke the name of his dead wife: "Marjie, I reckon you're mighty tired waitin' for me. It's be'n lonesome sometimes"—

"Do you see that tall old man up there?" said Helen, nodding her head toward Martin. "I think I should like to know him. I'm sure I like him."

"That is old Tom Martin."

"I know."

"I was sorry and ashamed about all that conspicuousness and shouting. It must have been very unpleasant for you. It must have been so for a stranger. Please try to forgive me for letting you in for it."

"But I liked it. It was 'all in the family,' and it was so jolly and good natured, and that dear old man was so bright. Do you know," she went on in a low voice, "I don't believe I'm so much a stranger—I think I love all these people a great deal—in spite of having known them only two days."

At that a wild exhilaration possessed him. He wanted to shake hands with every soul in the tent, to tell them all that he loved them with his whole heart; but, what was vastly more important, she loved them a great deal—in spite of having known them only two days.

He made the horses prance on the homeward drive, and once, when she told him that she had read a good many of his political columns in the Herald, he ran them into a fence. After this it occurred to him that they were nearing their destination and had come at a perversely sharp gait, so he held the roans down to a snail's pace (if it be true that a snail's natural gait is not a trot) for the rest of the way, and they talked of Tom Meredith and books and music, and discovered that they differed widely about Ibsen.

They found Mr. Fisbee in the yard, talking to Judge Briscoe. As they drove up and before the horses had quite stopped Helen leaped to the ground and ran to the old scholar with both her hands outstretched to him. He looked timidly at her and took the hands she gave him; then he produced from his pocket a yellow telegraph envelope, watching her anxiously as she received it. However, she seemed to attach no particular importance to it, and instead of opening it leaned toward him, still holding one of his hands.

"These awful old men!" Harkless groaned inwardly as he handed the horses over to the judge. "I dare say he'll kiss her too." But when the editor and Mr. Willetts had gone it was Helen who kissed Fisbee.

"They're coming out to spend the evening, aren't they?" asked Briscoe, nodding to the young men as they set off down the road.

"Lige has to come whether he wants to or not," Minnie laughed rather consciously. "It's his turn tonight to look after Mr. Harkless."

"I guess he won't mind coming," said the judge.

"Well," returned his daughter, glancing at Helen, who stood apart reading the telegram to Fisbee, "I know if he follows Mr. Harkless he'll get here pretty soon after supper—as soon as the moon comes up, anyway."

The editor of the Herald was late to his evening meal that night. It was dusk when he reached the hotel, and for the first time in history a gentleman sat down to meat in that house of entertainment in evening dress. There was no one in the dining room when he went in—the other boarders had finished, and it was Cynthia's "evening out"—but the landlord, Columbus Landis, came and attended to his wants himself and chatted with him while he ate.

"There's a picture of Henry Clay," remarked Landis in obvious relevancy to his companion's attire—"there's a picture of Henry Clay somewheres about the house in a swallow tail. Governor Ray spoke here in one, Bodeffer says; always wore one, except it was higher built up 'n yourn about the collar and had brass buttons, I think. Ole man Wimby was here again tonight," the landlord continued, changing the subject. "He waited around fer ye a good while, but last he had to go. He's be'n mighty wrought up sence the trouble this morning an' wanted to see ye bad. I don't know if you seen it, but that feller 't knocked your hat off with a club got mighty near tore to pieces in the crowd before he got away. Seems some of the boys re-cog-nized him as one of the Crossroads Skillets and sicked the dogs on him, and he had a pretty mean time of it. Wimby says the Crossroads folks 'll be worse 'n ever, and, says he, 'Tell him to stick

Several of the pupils of this school district are to be placed at school in the adjoining districts with the understanding that they are to attend in that district a sufficient number of days to draw apportionment. We cannot blame the parents for this as we have had no school for over a year and the efforts being made in that direction seem only half hearted any way.

We have had another school meeting, consequently another chance to vote. This time on the site for a school house again. As the site was located something over a year ago, and fully decided upon it seemed rather superfluous to call a meeting for the same purpose again, but we got a chance to vote, and that is all that seems to be necessary. We do not need a school-house, or we do not need school. Garnes children are supposed to inherit a liberal education, so if the state is willing let us drop the school question, until we get restless and want to vote again, then we can vote on another site.

Your correspondent was out here on a business trip last week and returned home from McIntosh on Sunday.

Edvind Jacobson is going to prove up on his land before the clerk of Courts in Red Lake Falls next Saturday, May 21.

Edvind Jacobson sold a lot of sheep last week to Sortedahl & Bjorneby, of Red Lake Falls. He sold about 13 or 14 head.

E. K. Gjernes was a business visitor at [illegible] last Friday.

At last, spring has appeared in all her [illegible]. Her dressmaker must have been [illegible]," or she would have [illegible] her debut a little earlier.

Our farmers have again begun seeding, but the ground is very wet, and most of them are discouraged over the outlook for a crop on low ground.

John Vik has sold his farm one-half mile north of the post-office to Knute Larson, and will move his family [illegible] as soon as the condition of the roads will permit.

Several of the pupils of this school district are to be placed at school in the adjoining districts with the understanding that they are to attend in that district a sufficient number of days to draw apportionment. We cannot blame the parents for this as we have had no school for over a year and the efforts being made in that direction seem only half hearted any way.

We have had another school meeting, consequently another chance to vote. This time on the site for a school house again. As the site was located something over a year ago, and fully decided upon it seemed rather superfluous to call a meeting for the same purpose again, but we got a chance to vote, and that is all that seems to be necessary. We do not need a school-house, or we do not need school. Garnes children are supposed to inherit a liberal education, and if the state is willing let us drop the school question, until we get restless and want to vote again, then we can vote on another site.

MET DEATH IN RIVER.

Jacob Wespby, River Driver, Drowns at St. Hilaire.

Jacob Wespby, aged 32 years, was drowned in the river at St. Hilaire Monday morning at 9 o'clock. He went to St. Hilaire from Thief River Falls to take a position as river driver for the Crookston lumber company. In working about the sluiceway that morning he made an effort to spring from a boom stick to one of the logs and was carried through the sluice and over the dam. The river was dynamited in order to bring the body of the unfortunate man to the surface.

Wespby was a Norwegian and used to log driving in his native country, where they do not use spiked shoes. with the shoes used in this country [illegible] at work as rivermen, and it is supposed that his accident was the result of his unfamiliarity with them and their use. The young man was but recently married at Thief River Falls and leaves a young widow there. He came from Milton, North Dakota, to Thief River and the remains were taken to the latter place.

THE VALLEY AHEAD.

Wiley Tindolph Returns Convinced of Its Superiority.

Wiley Tindolph, the popular Thief River Falls real estate dealer passed through the city yesterday enroute home from an extended visit over the United States says the Crookston Journal. He visited 23 states and saw much land and a great variety of soils, but is of the opinion that the valley has them all distanced for productiveness. He was gone five months and visited from here to New York and from there to Washington and Florida. From the land of palms he traversed the south with many stops to New Orleans. From there he went to California and explored the coast from the Mexican border to the Puget Sound. He says there are many opportunities in the south and west but none greater than in Northern Minnesota. Every avenue of business in those lands is overdone and the man who wins must meet sharp competition.

Mr. Tindolph was especially impressed with the size of the fir trees in Washington. He said that it took about 65 logs to make a car load at Thief River Falls, while in Washington three made all that a car could haul and he would venture that they were heavier than the 65 at Thief River Falls.

Mr. Tindolph made this extensive trip for the purpose of looking up a better place to locate. He failed to find anything that equaled the Red River Valley and comes back perfectly contented.

While in Washington he knew something of the efforts of Thief River Falls to get the reservation opened for settlement and in his opinion Congressman Steenerson was true to Crookston.

WITHDRAW THE APPEAL.

Great Northern and N. P. Accept Order of Railroad Commission.

The distributing rates on merchandise from Moorhead, Crookston, Fergus Falls, St. Cloud and Brainerd, which were ordered in by the railroad and warehouse commission by its order of Oct. 17, 1900, will soon go into effect.

The Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies have withdrawn their appeal from the order of the commission, and now purpose to put into effect the rates specified io the order, under which the basis of merchandise rates from these points was made the same as the rates from Minneapolis for an equal distance, that is, the same rate per mile from said points as from Minneapolis.

The commissioners' order was complied with by the compaoies and rates put into effect on Nov. 10, 1900, but on Jan. 18, 1902, notice was received by the commission that said rates would be cancelled on Jan. 25, 1902, which was done by the companies, and distance tariff rates substituted, thus depriving these towns of the advantage of distributing rates equal to those enjoyed by the Twin Cities.

The commission notified the companies to restore the rates within ten days, which was not complied with, resulting in their order to that effect of March 13, 1902, from which the companies appealed to the district court of Ramsey county. In his recent decision Judge Kelly affirmed the order of the commission. An appeal was then taken to the state supreme court.

This appeal is now withdrawn, and a stipulation was entered into last Monday between the attorneys for the railway companies and Gen. H. W. Childs, associate counsel for the commission, whereby the rates specified in the original order of the commission will be put into effect at an early date.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is hereby given that the town board of the township of Lake Pleasant will let the contracts for building three bridges in said town on Monday, May 30, at one o'clock p. m. of said day. For particulars and other information call on Mathias Waldorf, chairman, or Moses Ducharme, town clerk.

WANT THE LAND OFFICE.

People of Thief River Falls Will Go After It.

A dispatch to the Minneapolis Journal from Thief River Falls says that the Commercial club of that city held a mass meeting for the purpose of discussing matters relating to the sale of the Red Lake reservation lands, which will take place on June 20. It was decided to make an organized effort at this time for the permanent removal of the land office from Crookston to Thief River Falls.

The club will point out to the commissioner of the general land office, who will be present at the sale, the fact that there is no homestead land west of the Soo line and that with the construction of this new railroad Crookston ceases to be the most convenient point for settlers from this district to make their entries; also that by moving the land office to Thief River Falls the homesteader will save much time and expense in the transaction of his business.

The present time is considered favorable for such a movement by reason of the fact that Crookston is involved in a controversy with Congressman Steenerson and both Minnesota senators over the location of the present sale.

Daniel Shaw, P. W. Mabey and W. C. Smiley were appointed a commitee to prepare a statement of the conditions and set forth the arguments for the removal of the land office, and an appropriation was made for printing and disseminating literature bearing on the matter.

DITCH HEARING IS POSTPONED

Viewers Not Present Last Saturday, and Judge Continues the Hearing for One Week.

The hearing in the matter of Judicial ditch No. 4, to run through the towns of Johnson, Polk county, and Equality, in this county, was held last Saturday before Judge William Watts, at Lambert, and the school building in which the meeting was held was crowded full of interested parties. Engineer George A. Ralph, of Crookston, was present and gave a full explanation of the location of the proposed ditch, its length, width and depth, estimated cost, estimated benefits, etc., and answered all questions as to any point on which information was asked.

Only one viewer was present, Ed. Stowe, of McIntosh, and the Judge ordered teams sent out at once to bring in the other two. Not very much objection developed to the construction of the ditch, but there were many who felt that they had not been fairly used in the matter of assessments. After several hours spent in the discussion, the two recreant viewers not having yet arrived, the Judge announced that he would adjourn the hearing to next Saturday, the 28th inst., at Fred Bender's barn in Equality township. He also stated that he would ask the viewers to go over the ground again and make corrections wherever necessary, in the assessments and the names of parties who desired corrections made were taken.

It seems that the viewers arrived on the ground in the midst of a severe snow storm early in the year, and for two days were unable to do any work. When they could get about the ground was covered with snow and water, hence the unequal assessments. At present there would seem to be no reason why the assessments could not be made just and equitable, and satisfactory to all concerned. They can now get over the ground and they will be able to see what lands will or will not be benefited by the proposed drainage. With a satisfactory adjustment of the assessments, there would seem to be no ground for objection to the ditch, and at the meeting next Saturday it is thought there will not be a dissenting voice.

THE WHITE MAHATMA.

Everyone Should Turn Out Tonight and See Him.

The people of Red Lake Falls are to have an opportunity to see and investigate the wonderful manifestations of the world famed original White Mahatma, who appears at the opera house tonight. The White Mahatma has recently appeared at Fargo, Grand Forks and Crookston, under the Walker theatre management, and, according to the daily papers of those cities, his entertainments were largely attended, while his demonstrations along the line of Hindoo and Occult phenomena created a profound sensation.

The advance notice in Red Lake Falls is short because of a change in Winnepeg dates, which leaves only tonight's date open, but those who attend may do so with the assurance of seeing something quite out of the ordinary and of a very weird and startling character.

The prices are very low—25, 35 and 50 cents. Reserved seats can be secured today at Anderson's jewelery store.

PAY TRIBUTE TO HEROES GONE

Red Lake Falls Will Fittingly Celebrate Memorial Day.—Arrangements are Completed.

Red Lake Falls will celebrate Memorial Day next Monday in fitting style, all arrangements for the exercises having been made.

A parade headed by the band and followed by the members of the G. A. R., citizens, officers, school children, etc., will form and march through the streets, bringing up at the city hall, where appropriate speaking, music, etc., will be rendered.

There will in all probability be a ball game in the afternoon, which will make the day one of enjoyment, as well as paying tribute to the heroes of the nation.

It is the understanding that all business places will close most of the day, and make it a general holiday.

Let everyone turn out and help make the exercises a grand success.

THE LAND IS GOOD.

Land Office Officials Visit the Reservation.

Crookston Times: M. D. McEniry, special agent of the general land office, is in the city after a trip over the lands to be opened for settlement near Thief River Falls on the Red Lake agency. Together with Special Agent O'Brien from Colorado, he will be on duty until and during the opening of the lands in that section, with the exception of a short trip in Wisconsin. They have already spent several days on the lands and have formed a very good estimate. It seems that the lands are of the best and that the swamps are small and easily drained. The matter of drainage for the entire tract will be simple. Some of the lands are as good as any to be found in the Red River Valley. Hundreds of claims are prairie with no drainage necessary. In Mr. McEniry's judgement, some of the lands will be sold quite cheap. He believes the entire tract is as good as could be found elsewhere in the valley and that some fine farms will be opened in that section.

This is the last land in the Red River Valley which can be obtained from the government at any price and there will likely be a scramble for it. The people at Thief River Falls expect a large crowd of people to be on hand by the first, but as yet little if any prospecting has been done.

WILL CATCH "SOONERS."

Government Will Not Stand for Any Monkey Business This Time.

Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, through the department of justice, has directed United States marshals in Minnesota and South Dakota to take immediate action towards removing all the "squatters and sooners" who are swarming on the lands to be opened in June and July.

These lands include the Chippewa reservation and the Red Lake lands in Minnesota and the Rosebud reservation in South Dakota.

The general land office has been notified that since the issuance of the proclamation of the president opening the lands of the Red Lake reservation in Minnesota and the Rosebud reservation in South Dakota, they are being swarmed by "sooners" who are laboring under impression that they will be given first selection when the formal opening takes place.

COMMENCEMENT NEXT FRIDAY

General Public Looking Forward to Pleasing Entertainment.—Invitations Out.

The invitations and programs for the commencement exercises of the high school were printed at the Gazette office this week, and have been mailed to the public.

The program as published last week, gives promise of being more than enjoyable, and Red Lake Falls people are awaiting with pleasure the date set for the exercises.

Next week will be devoted largely to class exercises. The alumni association will entertain the seniors, the juniors will banquet their elder class-mates, and the class day exercises and commencement exercises will round out a week of enjoyment to all concerned.

The Gazette will print the program again next week.

BALL TEAM LOSES.

Thief River Indians Scalp Their Visitors.

The Red Lake Falls base ball team opened the season at Thief River Falls last Sunday, and while they put up a good fight to retain them, their scalps were captured by the Indians in an exciting contest.

The line-up of the Thief River team is nearly the same as it was last year, Rosch and Murphy doing the battery work.

Ittner and Richards occupied the points for Red Lake Falls and had fair support, but the Indians out batted the home boys and won out.

The score was 4 to 7. It is expected that a return game will be played here soon.

CLEARWATER GETS A BOY

Son of Ole Hemle, of Emardville Township, Drowned last Friday.

The 11-year old son of Ole Hemle, of Emardville, was drowned in the Clearwater river near the family home last Friday, while fishing on thh logs with some companions. It seems that he lost his balance and fell into the river, and before he could catch hold of anything he was sweyt down by the swift current.

The alarm was given immediately and searching parties went to work hunting for the body, but not until Sunday were the efforts rewarded.

The funeral was held Tuesday, and the remains laid at rest in the Emardvilie cemetery. The parents and family have the sympathy of the community in their bereavment.

LAMBERT PIONEER DIES.

Louis Hince, Sr., Passed Away Last Sunday.

Louis Hince, Sr., one of the old-time residents of Lambert this county, died at his home in that town last Sunday at the advanced age of 87 years. The funeral was held Tuesday, and one of the largest crowds that ever turned out there assembled to pay their last resbects to a respected neighbor and citizen. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Roy and the remains interred in the Catholic cemetery there.

The six sons of the old gentleman acted as pall bearers. They were: Louis, jr., Peter, Adolph, Adolor, Wilfred and Arthur.

The mining of cryolite, or "ice that never melts," as the Esquimos call it, is the chief industry of Greenland. Greenland has the distinction of containing the only workable deposit of this mineral in the world. Small quantities of cryolite have been found at Miask, in the Ural mountains, and a trace was found at Pike's peak, in Colorado. The man who reported the find at Pike's peak to a capitalist was informed that if he could produce a ton he could secure $150 for it. The money was never paid. The value of this mineral lies in the fact that from it may be obtained sal soda, or carbonate of soda, bicarbonate of soda, alum and caustic soda at a cost below that of securing these products from any other source.

My Breath.

Shortness of Breath Is One of the Commonest Signs of Heart Disease.

Notwithstanding what many physicians say, heart disease can be cured. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure has permanently restored to health many thousands who had found no relief in the medicines (allopathic or homoeopathic) of regular practicing physicians.

It has proved itself unique in the history of medicine, by being so uniformly successful in curing those diseases.

Nearly always, one of the first signs of trouble is shortness of breath. Whether it comes as a result of walking or running up stairs, or of other exercises, if the heart is unable to meet this extra demand upon its pumping powers—there is something wrong with it.

The very best thing you can do, is to take Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. It will go to the foundation of the trouble, and make a permanent cure by strengthening and renewing the nerves.

"I know that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is a great remedy. For a number of years I suffered from shortness of breath, smothering spells, and pains in my left side. For months at a time I would be unable to lie on my left side, and if I lay flat on my back would nearly smother. A friend advised using Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which I did with good results. I began to improve at once, and after taking several bottles of the Heart Cure the pains in my side and other symptoms vanished. I am now entirely well. All those dreadful smothering spells are a thing of the past."—F. P. DRAKE, Middletown, O.

SIX HUNDRED PERISH

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE AS RESULT OF THE SINKING OF TWO JAPANESE WARSHIPS.

BATTLESHIP STRIKES RUSSIAN MINE AND CRUISER GOES DOWN IN COLLISION.

LESS THAN FOUR HUNDRED OF THE THOUSAND MEN ON BOARD RESCUED.

Tokio, May 20.—Vice Admiral Togo has reported as follows:

"A report from Rear Admiral Dewa says that the cruisers Kasuga and Yoshino collided during a fog off Port Arthur on May 15. The Yoshino sank, only ninety of her crew being saved.

"On the same day the battleship Hatsuse struck a Russian mine and sank."

Giving details of the disaster Vice Admiral Togo says:

"At 1:14 in the afternoon of May 15, in a deep fog off Port Arthur, the Kasuga rammed the Yoshino, sinking the latter in a few minutes. Ninety of her crew were saved.

"The same morning the Hatsuse, while cruising off Port Arthur, covering the landing of the soldiers, struck a mine ten knots southeast of the harbor entrance. She signalled for help and instantly struck another mine. She sank in half an hour. Three hundred of her crew were saved by torpedo boats."

The Yoshino was a cruiser of 4,180 tons, launched in 1892; crew, 300 men.

The Hatsuse was a battleship of 15,000 tons, launched in 1900; crew, 741 men. Both vessels were built in England.

JAPANESE LOSS LARGE

SUSTAIN OVER A THOUSAND CASUALTIES IN ENGAGEMENT NEAR PORT ARTHUR.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—The government has received news confirmatory to the rumors in circulation here that General Stoessel has made a successful sortie from Port Arthur, resulting in the defeat of the Japanese with the loss of more than 1,000 killed or wounded. The Russian losses were 116 killed or wounded.

The movement was carried out by a combination with a train bringing in war munitions and supplies and General Stoessel's force, communications being maintained by wireless telegraphy. The Japanese barred the route between the train and General Stoessel's forces, whereupon the Russians attacked and routed the Japanese.

After the engagement General Stoessel's force, together with the train, returned to Port Arthur.

CRUISER ON THE ROCKS.

Private Advices From Vladivostok Confirm the Report.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—Private advices received from Vladivostok confirm the report that the cruiser Bogatyr was run on the rocks. Officials claim that they have no intimation regarding the incident.

RUSSIANS ADMIT LOSS

CRUISER BOGATYR RAN ASHORE NEAR VLADIVOSTOK AND WAS DESTROYED.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The report that Rear Admiral Jessen, finding it impossible to save the protected cruiser Bogatyr, which went ashore recently in a fog on the rocks off Vladivostok, caused her to be blown up, is officially confirmed.

The guns of the Bogatyr were removed before she was destroyed. No loss of life attended her destruction.

STRUCK BY A SHELL

TWENTY-FIVE JAPS KILLED ON BOARD THE DESTROYER AKATSUKI.

Tokio, May 23.—During the reconnaissance of Port Arthur made by Admiral Togo on Friday of last week a shell hit the torpedo boat destroyer Akatsuki, killing one officer and twenty-four men.

RUSSIAN LOSS AT KINCHOU.

Sustain Three Hundred Casualties In Battle of May 16.

London, May 20.—The Japanese legation here has given out the following dispatch received from Tokio:

"The enemy's forces participating in the fight near Kinchou, Liaotung peninsula, May 16, consisted of the Fifth, Fourteenth and Sixteenth sharpshooters, with eight quick firing guns. They left on the field thirty dead officers and men. According to the prisoners the enemy's casualties were over 300."

KILLED BY EXPLOSION

SEVEN PEOPLE MEET DEATH AND FIFTEEN OTHERS ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Disaster Occurs in a Fireworks Factory at Findlay, O., Two Powder Magazines Blowing Up With Fearful Effect—Immense Plant Shattered Into Fragments, Bricks and Timbers Being Scattered Over Large Area.

Findlay, O., May 23.—As a result of an explosion in the two dryingrooms of the Lake Shore Novelty company's plant seven persons are known to be dead, five are so seriously hurt that recovery is believed to be impossible and twelve or fifteen are injured badly.

From reports of the physicians ten of the most seriously injured may die as a result of blood poisoning from the potash that was driven into their bodies. The dead are: Joseph Sherwood, aged twenty-one; Jay Sherwood, twenty-four; Edith Dillon, seventeen; Dean Shaw, eighteen; Mary Snider, twenty-two; Estella Decker, fifteen; Frank Grant, twenty-one.

The exact cause of the explosion is not known.

Railroad torpedoes and Fourth of July explosives were manufactured at this large plant that covered nearly ten acres of ground. Not a wall is left standing. The loss is $60,000.

Bodies were picked up 300 feet from the scene of the explosion.

THREE PERSONS KILLED.

Ten Others Injured by an Explosion at Camden, N. J.

Camden, N. J., May 24.—Three persons were killed and ten others were injured, two of them probably fatally, by an explosion Monday in the factory of the Independent Fireworks company here.

Robert T. Weser of Philadelphia, president of the company, and Joseph Scalon, a vice president, were arrested and held in $1,500 bail to await the action of the coroner.

Warrants have been issued for other officers of the concern. Scalon's father was fatally injured.

The plant consisted of a two-story brick storehouse and four frame sheds, all of which were wrecked. The explosion occurred in the mixing department, but its cause has yet to be determined.

LIVES LOST IN FLOODS

BODIES OF FOUR VICTIMS RECOVERED AND A NUMBER OF PEOPLE ARE MISSING.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 21.—Four bodies of persons drowned during the night's floods have been recovered. It is feared there have been other casualties, as a number of persons are still missing.

The dead resided near the river. They were asleep in bed when the flood came and were unable to get out.

Fort Collins, Colo., May 21.—Estimates of the damage caused by the flood in the Cache la Poudre valley run from $1,000,000 upwards. The head gates of all the irrigating ditches have been washed away and miles of embankments destroyed. Unless repairs can be made in time to save water for irrigating this year the loss will be nearer $2,000,000 than $1,000,000.

One hundred and fifty houses in the Russian settlement at the sugar factory north of this town were destroyed.

SEVERAL ARRESTS MADE.

Opium Valued at $20,000 Seized on Pacific Coast.

Washington, May 23.—Chief Wilkie of the secret service has given out the following statement:

"Secret service agents detailed at the request of Assistant Secretary Armstrong have been investigating the suspected smuggling of opium between Seattle and Portland. After three months' work under the direction of Operative Frank Burke, who was specially detailed for this service from the New York division, the investigation closed at midnight sunday last with the seizure of $20,000 worth of crude opium and the arrest of S. R. Stevens, alias Tuttle, W. S. Cree and Alfred Larsen, all of Seattle.

COST HIS OWNER $150,000.

Famous Stallion Ormonde Killed to End His Suffering.

San Francisco, May 23.—Ormonde, the world famous horse, is dead. He was killed at the Menlo Park stock farm of W. O. D. MacDonough to relieve great suffering from paralysis. Ormonde, who was foaled in England in 1883, won every race that he started in and earned for his owner in stakes the sum of $142,325. He also had the distinction of winning all three of the great events of the British turf—2,000 guineas, the derby and the St. Leger. He was eventually sold to his late owner for $150,000 for breeding purposes.

THIRTEEN PERSONS PERISH.

Steamer Turret Bay Wrecked Off the Cape Breton Coast.

North Sydney, N. S., May 21.—The worst marine disaster in the history of the St. Lawrence river coal trade occurred off Cape North, the northernmost point of Cape Breton, when the British steamer Turret Bay, laden with coal and bound from Sydney to Montreal, struck on the rocks off St. Paul Island, and sank in deep water twenty minutes later, causing a loss of thirteen lives. Only nine men from a crew of twenty-two were saved.

RECIPROCITY DEFEATED.

Standpatters in Control of Iowa Republican Convention.

Des Moines, Ia., May 19.—Iowa's long fight between stand pat Republicans and liberals upon the issue of tariff revision and reciprocity ended in a complete victory for the former in the state convention for selecting delegates to the national convention. Of twenty-six delegates chosen, twenty are stand patters and only six are liberals.

The resolutions adopted contain no sentiment whatever in favor of tariff revision, but declare that protective principles "found its high fulfillment" in the Dingley law. As to reciprocity, the platform declares that it is "unwise to seek markets abroad by sacrificing some parts of the markets at home."

REPUBLICANS OF OHIO.

Nominate a State Ticket and Chose Delegates to Chicago.

Columbus, O., May 19.—The following Republican state ticket was nominated here:

Secretary of state, Lewis C. Laylin, Norwalk; supreme court judge, William F. Spear, Lisbon; supreme court clerk, Lawson E. Emerson, St. Clairsville; dairy and food commissioner, Horace Ankeny, Xenia; member of board of public works, Richard B. Crawford, Massilon.

MASSACRED BY MOROS

FIFTY-THREE FILIPINOS SLAUGHTERED ON THE ISLAND OF MINDANAO.

Manila, May 24.—A report has been received here from Camp Overton, on the island of Mindanao, dated May 15, stating that a massacre had taken place on the 12th inst. near Malahang, on the southern coast of Mindanao. Fifty-three Filipino men, women and children, the families of employes of the United States military government at Malahang, were surprised at midnight while asleep by the Datto Alis and a band of Moros from the Rio Grande valley and slaughtered.

The chief and his followers escaped before the alarm could be given.

Details of the massacre are meager. Major General Wood has been in the interior of Mindanao since May 12. Cable communication between Manila and Mindanao is interrupted and the wires are down in the interior of the island. The report of the massacre was received by mail from a correspondent at Camp Overton.

LAST BISHOP CHOSEN.

Methodist Conference Completes That Part of Work.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 21.—Dr. J. R. Day, chancellor of Syracuse university, was chosen bishop on the fourteenth ballot, receiving 474 out of the 690 ballots cast, at the Methodist general conference here. This completes the election of bishops. The other seven chosen are:

Joseph F. Berry, Chicago; Henry F. Spellmeyer, Newark, N. J.; William F. MacDowell, New York; James W. Bashford, Delaware, O.; William Burt, Rome, Italy; Luther B. Wilson, Baltimore, and Thomas B. Neely, Philadelphia.

Tokio, May 23.—After repeated conferences between the bankers, the business men and elder statesmen of Japan, the bankers have accepted the terms of the new popular loan of $50,000,000. It will be issued at 92, bear 5 per cent interest and run for seven years.

Nancy Hanks Sold for $4,000.

Readville, Mass., May 23.—Nancy Hanks, the mare which for nearly three years held the trotting championship of the world when the record stood at 2:04, has been sold for $4,000 to J. M. Johnson, mayor of Calais, Me.

NUT VALUES.

Chestnuts are starchy and take the place of potatoes.

Brazil or cream nuts are very rich in fat and should be blended with pecans, English walnuts or hazelnuts.

Black and white walnuts as well as hickory nuts contain nitrogen and oil, but no starch. Blend with rice or potatoes.

Coconuts contain very little nitrogen, but are rich in oil. The fiber is difficult of digestion. The cream and milk are excellent for salads and sauces.

Peanuts are very rich in nitrogen and contain considerable starch and oil. When boiled and mashed they are much better than when roasted and ground.

Almonds are really digesters or appetizers. They are too expensive to be used alone in large quantities. Four or five thoroughly masticated at the end of a meal will frequently aid in the digestion of other foods.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Man and the Match.

"Show me two men with unlighted cigarettes, and if I watched them for a minute I can tell you correctly whether the one who has the match is from Philadelphia, Boston or New York."

The speaker was a person of some observation, and his friend naturally asked:

"How can you tell?"

"In this way," said the observant man. "If the man is a Philadelphian he will strike the match, hold it for his friend to get a light, then take a light himself and throw the match away. If he is a Bostonian he will light his own cigarette first, then hold the match for his friend and after that throw it away. If he is a New Yorker, however, he will strike the match, light his own cigarette and throw the match away."—Philadelphia Press.

Spencer and Music.

Mr. Herbert Spencer cultivated what he called the "receptive sense" in respect to music and was wont to speak with more than a little bitterness of the general desire to be a performer. One performer who had been chosen to play Beethoven for him was thunderstruck on arrival at Mr. Spencer's residence at being asked to render an extract from one of Sullivan's operas. Light music had a charm for the philosopher which light literature never had.

An Apt Pupil.

Teacher—James, you were late yesterday morning. Pupil—Yes; but, as you were saying to the class today, we should let bygones be bygones. Teacher—But have you no excuse to offer? Pupil—In that same talk you said that one who was good at excuses was usually good at nothing else. Under the circumstances I think it better for me not to do anything that will lower me in your estimation.—Boston Transcript.

A Reminder.

Mother—Johnny, on your way home from school stop at the store and get me a stick of candy and a bar of soap. Father—What do you want of a stick of candy? Mother—That's so he'll remember the soap.—New York Weekly.

No Chance For Him.

"Come on; have a game of poker!"

"I don't believe in games of chance."

"That need make no difference. Come on and play."—Houston Post.

Republican State Convention.

A Republican State Convention for the State of Minnesota is hereby called to be held on Thursday, June 30, A. D. 1904, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the Metropolitan Opera House in the City of St. Paul, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following state offices to be voted for at the General election in November 1904:

Four Justices of the Supreme Court; Governor; Lieutenant Governor; Secretary of State; State Treasurer; Attorney General; Two Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners; Eleven Presidential Electors.

The Republican voters of the state and all other voters without regard to past political affiliations who believe in the principals advocated by the Republican party and endorse its policies are cordially invited to participate in the selection of delegates to this convention.

Representation for this convention will be in accordance with the following resolution unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Republican State Central Committee held at the City of St. Paul on Wednesday, May 4, 1904.

> "Resolved that each county is entitled to one delegate for each two hundred and fifty votes or majority fraction thereof cast for the republican candidate for President in 1900 and that each county be allowed in addition thereto five delegates at large. In new precincts formed since the election of 1900 the basis of representation may be fixed for local conventions on the vote cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1902.

All county conventions in the state for the election of delegates to this convention shall be held on Tuesday, June 28, A. D. 1904.

All primary elections must be conducted as prescribed in the Primary Election laws of said state.

By order of the Republican State Central Committee, ROBERT JAMISON, Charles C. Whitney Chairman.
Secretary.

Webster distinguishes between a gentleman and a hypocrite.

The county convention will be held June 28, at Red Lake Falls. The primaries will be held the Saturday evening previous.

K. J. Weeks is making an active canvass for the Republican nomination of Register of Deeds, and his friends look for him to land the prize.

Query: If the "pa and the kid" stories, "collided with itself" leaders, and other dirty flings were simply jokes, how contemptibly low could the author of them crawl if he was in real earnest?

The Courier keeps up a dirty fight for a month or so, and when he gets a dose of his own medicine he hollers "abuse." The general public can easily draw its own conclusions as to who has been the agressor in the present fight.

You wouldn't believe it, would you, by looking at the apparition called King, that your eyes were feasting on the "real thing" in the line of knowledge. Perhaps, tho, if we would all subscribe for some southern paper and swipe its editorials bodily, there might be a chance for us to pose as learned gentlemen.

The people of Red Lake Falls know that the editor of the Gazette doesn't know "beans," and have great sympathy for him in his affliction. But then, the transient King still lingers here, and maybe we can induce him to instruct a night school so that all of the people he has put in the dummy column can receive instruction at his hands.

There appears to be prospects for some interesting developments in county politics when the campaign gets under way. The scrap for the Democratic nomination of Register of Deeds holds out promise of being fast and furious. It is stated that there will be several campaigners of recognized "getting" qualities after the place, and if such is the case we are assured of seeing some fun. So far, however, there has been no positive announcements.

Mr. King is sustaining his earned reputation as one who is always striving to keep up a newspaper row, in the hopes of benefitting himself. The people know that the first thing he done when he landed here was to commence attacking several different parties, and never since that time has he been satisfied to print an issue of his paper without a little sneaking slap at some one. He formed the habit long years ago, and the people might as well hope for the sun to stop as to hope for him to cease his mischief-making.

It took a column and a half of space for the present day edition of Solomon in all his glory to tell the people that the Gazette editor was a jackass. Why this unnecessary waste of space, brother? Couldn't you simply have stated that we were unfortunate enough to have been in your employ at one time, and let the general public draw their natural conclusion that we had absorbed some of the characteristic traits.

The watch-dog of Red Lake county is neglecting his duty. Here is the Thief River Falls Press as quiet as a mouse in regard to the governorship contest, after howling for Dunn so long, and the great King hasn't yet charged him with being bought, insincere and several other things. Can it be that friend Bagley, like a whole lot more Red Lake county Republicans, objects to this self-appointed Tammany Democrat dictating as to what the Republicans shall do? If Bob Dunn could have hired someone to sandbag the mouthy chairman of our democratic county central committee early in the game, it would without doubt have "helped some."

The editor of the Wabasha Herald recently referred to the unprecedented unanimity of the press of the state in urging Judge Jaggard of St. Paul for the supreme bench, but it adds that this beautiful unanimity will disappear when it comes to determining which one of the four men now on the supreme bench shall be dropped, says the Moose Lake Star. The fact is, however, that the unanimity has not only continued, but increased. Judge Brown and Judge Lovely will undoubtedly be renominated. This will leave the fight between Judge Douglas and Judge Lewis. It is also conceded that Judge Jaggard will be nominated. In the fight between Judge Douglas and Judge Lewis our sympathies might incline to be with Judge Lewis because of the geographical situation, but it is obvious to anyone who has the slightest familiarity with the situation, that in his own district Judge Lewis will encounter very considerable and very earnest opposition. Any talk of a combination between the four members of the bench is insulting to their conception of judicial dignity, and is political folly. We would like to know who has undertaken the job of delivering this district to any candidate, irrespective of the judgment and the choice of the district.

ANOTHER TIME.

A. E. Caldwell, formerly publisher of the Worthington Globe, and one of the brightest newspaper men Minnesota ever possessed, last year published the following beautiful tribute to the heroes whose valiant deeds are yet fresh in the minds of the American people, and the Gazette takes the liberty of reproducing it at this appropriate season:

"Next Monday will again mark the day for an observance which should be the most sacred of all days observed by the people of these United States, both for what it means to the whole people and also to that remnant of that grand army which fixed and broadened forever the liberty for which the men of '76 fought and died. To those of us who were not old enough to go to the front but can remember the thrilling events of the sixties there is a hazy remembrance of the young men of town and country who had every day for years been 'Jim' or 'Bill,' dressed in jeans or homespun, being suddenly transformed into superior beings, clad in the red of the zouave and drilled according to the 'Hardee' until, with his comrades, he helped to form a great machine before which the 'secesh' could never stand a minute—in our youthful minds.

"Scenes of glory those were, and the memory is only as a medley of men wearing red flannel shirts and nondescript pants and moving in perfect alignment, and later, as individuals, being followed about the streets by crowds of small boys and greeted by the grown-up girls with a smile that made every wearer of the red more than willing to die—once for his country and once for the American girl.

"There is a more distinct remembrance than this, for there is something about sorrow and horror that fixes itself in the mind firmly and unalterably. The boys—the little fellows—of the sixties can never forget the first home-coming of the heroes who had so shortly before gone away. Some of them came in coffins and were borne with all the pomp and circumstance possible to the cemetery and for many days their graves furnished the community with a center of interest which is continued to this day. Other heroes came home deformed and helpless and for a time were the observed of all observers, but in the years that followed, in many cases, became only subjects of the coldest charity. That which they had given to the people was then taken as a matter of course, and the giver received grudgingly only a portion of that for which he had contributed so much.

"Then the struggle ended. The days and nights of watchfulness, of fighting, of foraging, of short rations, were only a memory. But what a memory! Like pain—it can be remembered much more easily than described for another who never felt it. And the future—was chaos. The bright dreams of the past in which competence and a happy home had figured had been dispelled by war's alarms and the realization of a handicap of wounds or an appetite for excitement which the humdrum of everyday existence could not satisfy was a ghost of the immediate past that would not "down" at the behest of the veteran.

"The dreary vista of the years down which the veteran looked then is now almost all behind him, and as he gathers with his comrads Monday the remembrance of the sufferings after 'peace' will blend with memories of war, and his life will be something to which you should do honor. Let not your thoughts and your flowers go to the dead alone. The veteran will care for that; but let your thoughts dwell on him who marches with halting step to the cemetary, and try to do him justice which will give him the crown he deserves—the crown of the hero who is to be found nowhere on God's green earth except in the home of the American war veteran."

TWO TICKETS NAMED

WISCONSIN REPUBLICANS SPLIT AS RESULT OF BITTER FACTIONAL FIGHT.

Madison, Wis., May 20.—Two conventions, both claiming legal status by right of delegate majorities holding prima facie credentials, and both standing for the election of Roosevelt as president and asserting themselves to be regular Republican in nature, were concluded in Madison last night.

Two state tickets, one headed by Governor Robert M. Lafollette, and the other by Former Congressman Samuel A. Cook, are in the field.

Characterized by order and the absence of strife, the deliberations of both conventions seem entitled to an identical degree of recognition. No clause in the Lafollette resolutions bears relation to any national representative except Theodore Roosevelt. The ticket named by the Lafollette convention included all the present state officers and the platform differs from the Cook platform only in the intensity of its declarations in favor of Lafollette reforms.

Since the Baensch and the Cook delegates deserted the convention to rally under the banner of Cook, there has been no dissension in the ranks of that branch of the party. The organization candidates and the propaganda went through without a hitch. Governor Lafollette regards himself the choice of the Republican party. His delegates, according to the state central committee's count, numbered 585½.

The other convention, endorsed by Senators John C. Spooner and Joseph V. Quarles and every congressional representative, stands ready to back a state ticket which they declare was legally nominated by 567 delegates, holding prima facie credentials.

WEARY OF BALLOTING.

Illinois Republicans Adjourn Until May 31.

Springfield, Ill., May 21.—Unable to end the deadlock on the gubernatorial nomination, the Republican state convention adjourned Friday until 2 p. m. May 31.

Only one ballot was taken. It was the fifty-eighth roll call and showed no material change from the fifty-seventh, taken Thursday night. The convention suspended operatons leaving Governor Yates in the lead with 483 votes. The others follow: Lowden, 392; Deneen, 385; Hamlin, 113; Warner, 53; Sherman, 46; Pierce, 29.

All the candidates agreed to the eleven day recess. The band played "Home, Sweet Home," but nobody sang, for ten days of shouting had left the crowd hoarse and exhausted. The convention was in session less than an hour Friday.

FLAG DAY JUNE 14.

One Hundred and Twenty-Seventh Anniversary Drawing Near.

The American Flag association, composed of individuals and members of flag committees from patriotic societies in the United States, formed in 1897 to promote reverences for and prevent any destruction of the American flag, has issued a notice setting June 14 as Flag Day. That day will be the 127th anniversary of the adoption of the present flag by the Continental congress. The address of the association says in part:

"Mayors are requested to order flags to be displayed upon the municipal buildings of their respective cities and by formal proclamation, or otherwise, to invite their fellow citizens to do the same upon their private buildings.

"Editors are requested to make editorial articles upon the subject of the flag; and to request the public to display the national colors on June 14.

"School officers and teachers are requested to arrange for patriotic exercises appropriate to the day.

"American patriotic societies are urged, thru their officers and members, to assist in stirring up popular enthusiasm by public appeals thru local mediums, and by observance of the anniversary.

"All American citizens are earnestly invited to join in the public recognition of the birthday of the emblem of our nationality. In many of the states pursuant to law, the public schools and also voluntarily in private schools, exercises will be conducted in celebration of Flag Day. Let us extend this practice. Teach the story of the flag, what it represents and have the young people pledge their fealty and loyalty to it.

"We earnestly exhort our citizens to join in making Flag Day an event and its celebration in 1904 a great event. Let us from one end of our land to the other, fling the stars and stripes to the breezes on June 14, '04. May it greet the rising and salute the setting of the sun, and float all day long from every church edifice, school building, public and private, and however humble, thruout the land."

Ruling As to School Examinations

A great many Red Lake Falls school patrons will be interested in the following taken from the columns of the Minneapolis Tribune:

"A number of parochial schools have in the past requested that their students be allowed to take the state high school board examinations and in order to get at a definite understanding of how to meet these requests the following resolution was offered and adopted by the state high school board at a meeting in the capitol Saturday:

"Resolved, that hereafter students of parochial or private schools desiring to take the high school board examinations shall take the same at the time and place offered by the public schools in the place in which the parochial or private schools are located; but in case such examinations are not offered in the public schools at that place they may be offered at the parochial or private schools at the discretion of the examiner. This resolution to take effect at the beginning of the next school year."

Crookston's Social Scandal.

St. Hilaire Spectator; Crookston has a social sensation that by dint of its magnitude has passed beyond the pale of the gossips. Some three months or so ago a prominent young married man was discovered in a compromising situation with a prominent young woman, wife of another man. The woman's husband promptly secured a divorce and for a few days the air cleared off. Two weeks ago tha guilty man's wife died and one week ago today he was married to the divorced woman. Today he is expected to be at home in Crookston with his bride. Both have children living the fruit of their former marriages but who have been provided for away from the influence of their parents.

This series of incidents furnish food for both thought and expression. It will be interesting to note how the Crookston papers, preachers and the public will voice their sentiments in this matter.

RED LAKE FALLS

STRONGEST EVIDENCE OF FAITH

A. L. Reichert Guarantees that Hyomei will Cure the worst Case of Catarrh in Red Lake Falls.

When one of the most reputable concerns in Red Lake Falls guarantees that a medicine will effect a cure or he will refund the money, it speaks volumes as to the merits of that remedy. It is in this way that A. L. Reichert is selling Hyomei, the treatment that has made so many remarkable cures of both acute and chronic catarrh in Red Lake Falls and vicinity.

Hyomei is not a pill nor is it a liquid that has to be taken with a tablespoon or wineglass. Just breathe it by the aid of an inhaler that comes in every outfit and benefit will be seen from the first treatment.

It destroys all germ life in the air passages and lungs and enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone. It cures catarrh of the head and throat, or of the stomach, liver and kidneys. Wherever mucous membrane contains catarrhal germs, there Hyomei will do its work of healing. When using this treatment, the air you breathe will be found like that on the mountains high above the sea level, where grow balsamic trees and plants which make the air pure by giving off volatile antiseptic fragrance that is healing to the respiratory organs.

Complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment.

Remember that if Hyomei does not cure you A. L. Reichert will refund your money. This is a good time to cure catarrh by this natural method and prevent catarrhal colds that are so common at this season.

Washington School Notes.

Edited by fifth and sixth grades.

The boys are practicing for the field meet.

The principal game of the girls now is mumble peg. They enjoy this game very much.

The fifth and sixth grade girls have given up their idea of playing basket ball this year.

The third and fourth grades will give their closing program on Thursday afternoon, June 2nd.

The final examination will begin Thursday, arithmetic coming Thursday morning. We hope every grade will win the banner.

The upper grades of the Washington building have divided into two sections for the purpose of cheering the field teams on to victory the coming Friday.

Last Friday, instead of having lessons, the fifth and sixth grades went down to the Clearwater river fishing. Some caught five or six and others did not catch anything. They had a very good time.

The field meet will be held at the Washington school on Friday afternoon, May 27. Most of the best boys were chosen to be in the teams, called the Whites and the Blues. The Whites are the following: Alphonse Guerin, Thomas Payment, Rudolph Olsen, Walter Garceau, Carl Buse, Thomas Mayeres, Preston Hall. The Blues are John Rodgers, Robert Zaiser, Fred Schmitz, Marcus Marshall Wilcia Prosper, George Tandberg and Theo. Tandberg.

Minnesota City is interested over the report that an Eastern cereal company has secured an option on the waterpower site there of the mill which was recently burned. It is said the company is figuring on the erection of a large plant for the manufacture of breakfast foods, if an investigation of conditions justifies the investment.

Sandy Boy, a Sandy Lake Indian, was brought into court at Aitkin and, pleading guilty to murder in the second degree, was sentenced to Stillwater for life by Judge McClenahan of the district court. The crime for which the Indian was sentenced was the murder of another Indian named Joe Agonosh Nov. 3 last north of McGregor.

W. A. Richards, commissioner of the general land office, has issued an announcement regarding the sale of lands in the Red Lake reservation to the highest bidders. The date is June 20 and the place of sale Thief River Falls. The land to be opened will be offered in tracts of 160 acres and no bids less than $4 an acre will be considered.

In the district court at Aitkin George Coti was found guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced by Judge McClenahan to state prison for life. Coti was tried for murdering Christ Hanson, a woodsman, north of McGregor, in January, and admitted attacking Hanson, but claimed self-defense, as he was a great deal the smaller man.

Frank White, a Duluth tailor, has been convicted of murder in the third degree, his victim being Jerome Monaige, a bartender in the Bowery district there. White insisted upon buying the young man a drink after the bartender said he could have no more. A fight ensued in which White shot Manaige three times, death resulting a few hours later.

After four hours' deliberation the jury in the case of the government vs. the Commonwealth Lumber company, on trial at Fergus Falls, returned a verdict of $18,000 in favor of the plaintiff. As the government sued for over $100,000 this verdict was not at all satisfactory to the plaintiff. The Commonwealth company had offered to compromise for $15,000, but this was refused by the government.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Rochelle, Ga., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

close to town,' says he. 'They'll do anything to git him now,' says he. 'and resk anything.' I told him you wouldn't take no stock in what any one says, and I knowed well enough you'd laugh that a-way. But, see here, we don't put nothin' too mean for them folks. I tell ye, Mr. Harkless, all of us are scared for ye."

The good fellow was so earnest that when the editor's supper was finished and he would have departed, Landis detained him almost by force until the arrival of Mr. Willetts, who, the landlord knew, was his allotted escort for the evening. When Lige came (wearing a new tie, a pink one he had hastened to buy as soon as his engagements had given opportunity) the landlord hissed a savage word of reproach for his tardiness in his ear and whisperingly bade him not let the other out of reach that night. Mr. Willetts replied with a nod implying his trustworthiness, and the young men went out into the darkness.

CHAPTER VII.

THE moon had risen, and there was a lace of mist along the creek when John and Helen reached their beach. (Of course they went back there.) She turned to him with a little frown.

"Why have you never let Tom Meredith know you were living so near him—less than a hundred miles—when he has always liked and admired you above all the rest of mankind? I know that he has tried time and again to hear of you, but the other men wrote that they knew nothing, that it was thought you had gone abroad. I had heard of you, and so has he seen your name in the Rouen papers—about the White Caps and in politics—but he would never dream of connecting the Plattville Mr. Harkless with his Mr. Harkless; though I did, just a little, in a vague way. I knew you, of course, when you came into Mr. Halloway's lecture the other evening. But why haven't you written to my cousin?"

"Rouen seems rather far away to me," he answered quietly. "I've been there only once, half a day on business. Except that, I've never been much farther than Amo—and then for a convention or to make a speech—since I came here."

"Wicked," she exclaimed, "to shut yourself up like this! I said it was fine to drop out of the world, but why have you cut off your old friends from you? Why haven't you had a relapse now and then and come over to hear Ysaye play and Melba sing, or to see Mansfield or Henry Irving, when we have had them? And do you think you've been quite fair to Tom? What right had you to assume that he had forgotten you?"

"Oh, I didn't exactly mean forgotten," he said, pulling a blade of grass to and fro between his fingers and staring at it absently. "It's only that I have dropped out of the world, you know. They rather expected me to do a lot of things, and I haven't done them. Possibly it is because I am sensitive that I never let Tom know. They expected me to amount to something, but I don't believe his welcome would be less hearty to a failure—he is a good heart."

"Failure!" she cried and clapped her hands and laughed.

"I'm really not very tragic about it, though I must seem consumed with self pity," he returned, smiling. "It is only that I have dropped out of the world while Tom is still in it."

"'Dropped out of the world!'" she echoed impatiently. "Can't you see you've dropped into it? That you"—

"Last night I was honored by your praise of my graceful mode of quitting it!"

"And so you wish me to be consistent," she retorted scornfully. "What becomes of your gallantry when we abide by reason?"

"True enough; equality is a denial of privilege."

"And privilege is a denial of equality? I don't like that at all." She turned a serious, suddenly illuminated face upon him and spoke earnestly: "It's my hobby, I should tell you, and I'm tired of that nonsense about 'women always sounding the personal note.' It should be sounded as we would sound it. And I think we could bear the loss of 'privilege'"—

He laughed and raised a protesting hand. "But we couldn't."

"No, you couldn't. It's the ribbon of superiority in your buttonhole. I know several women who manage to live without men to open doors for them, and I think I could bear to let a man pass before me now and then or wear his hat in an office where I happened to be, and I could get my own ice at a dance, I think, possibly with even less fuss and scramble than I've sometimes observed in the young men who have done it for me. But you know you would never let us do things for ourselves, no matter what legal equality might be declared, even when we get representation for our taxation. You will never be able to deny yourselves giving us our 'privilege!' I hate being waited on! I'd rather do things for myself."

She was so earnest in her satire, so full of scorn and so serious in her meaning, and there was such a contrast between what she said and her person—she looked so pre-eminently the pretty marquise, the little exquisite, so essentially to be waited on and helped, to have cloaks thrown over the dampness for her to tread upon, to be run about for—he could see half a dozen youths rushing about for her ices, for her carriage, for her chaperon, for her wrap, at dances—that to save his life he could not repress a chuckle. He managed to make it inaudible, however, and it was as well that he did.

"I understand your love of newspaper work," she went on less vehemently, but not less earnestly. "I have always wanted to do it myself, wanted to immensely. I can't think of a more fascinating way of earning one's living. And I know I could do it. Why don't you make the Herald a daily?"

To hear her speak of "earning one's living" was too much for him. She gave the impression of riches, not only by the fine texture and fashioning of her garments, but one felt that luxuries had wrapped her from her birth. He had not had much time to wonder what she did in Plattville. It had occurred to him that it was a little odd that she could plan to spend any extent of time there, even if she had liked Minnie Briscoe at school. He felt that she must have been sheltered and petted and waited on all her life. One could not help yearning to wait on her.

He answered inarticulately, "Oh, some day," in reply to her question and then fell into outright laughter.

"I might have known you wouldn't take me seriously," she said, with no indignation, only a sort of wistfulness. "I am well used to it. I think it is because I am not tall. People take big girls with more gravity. Big people are nearly always listened to."

"Listened to!" he said, and felt that he must throw himself at her feet. "You oughtn't to mind being Titania. She was listened to. You"—

She sprang to her feet, and her eyes flashed. "Do you think personal comment is ever in good taste?" she cried fiercely, and in his surprise he almost fell off the bench. "If there is one thing I cannot bear, it is to be told that I am 'small!' I am not. Every one who isn't a giantess isn't 'small.' I detest personalities. I am a great deal over five feet, a great deal more than that—I"—

"Please, please," he said, "I didn't"—

"Don't say you are sorry," she interrupted, and in spite of his contrition he found her angry voice delicious, it was still so sweet, hot with indignation, but ringing, not harsh. "Don't say you didn't mean it, because you did! You can't unsay it, you cannot alter it, and this is the way I must remember you! Ah!" She drew in her breath with a sharp sigh and, covering her face with her hands, sank back upon the bench. "I will not cry," she said, not so firmly as she thought she did.

"My blessed child!" he cried in great distress and perturbation. "What have I done? I—I"—

"Call me 'small' all you like," she answered. "I don't care. It isn't that. You mustn't think me such an imbecile." She dropped her hands from her face and shook the tears from her eyes with a mournful little laugh. He saw that her fingers were clinched tightly and her lip trembled. "I will not cry," she said again.

"Somebody ought to murder me. I ought to have thought—personalities are hideous"—

"Don't! It wasn't that."

"I ought to be shot"—

"Ah, please don't say that," she said, shuddering. "Please don't, not even as a joke, after last night!"

"But I ought to be for hurting you. Indeed"—

She laughed sadly again. "It wasn't that. I don't care what you call me. I am small. You'll try to forgive me for being such a baby? I didn't mean anything I said. I haven't acted so badly since I was a child."

"It's my fault, all of it. I've tired you out, and I let you get crushed at the circus, and"—

"That!" she said. "I don't think I would have missed the circus."

He had a thrilling hope that she meant the tent pole. She looked as if she meant that, but he dared not let himself believe it.

"No," he continued, "I have been so madly happy in being with you that I've fairly worn out your patience. I've haunted you all day, and I have"—

"All that has nothing to do with it," she said, with a gentle motion of her hand to bid him listen. "Just after you left this afternoon I found that I could not stay here. My people are going abroad at once, and I must go with them. That's what is almost making me cry. I leave here tomorrow morning."

He felt something strike at his heart. In the sudden sense of dearth he had no astonishment that she should betray such agitation over her departure from a place she had known so little and friends who certainly were not part of her life. He rose to his feet, and, resting his arm against a sycamore, stood staring away from her at nothing. She did not move. There was a long silence. He had wakened suddenly. The skies had been sapphire, the sward emerald, Plattville a Camelot of romance, a city of enchantment, and now, like a meteor burned out in a breath, the necromancy fell away and he gazed into desolate years. The thought of the square, his dusty office, the bleak length of Main street, as they would appear tomorrow gave him a faint physical sickness. Today it had all been touched to beauty. He had felt fit to live and work here a thousand years—a fool's dream, and the waking was to arid emptiness. He should die now of hunger and thirst in this Sahara. He hoped the fates would let it be soon, but he knew they would not; knew that this was hysteria, that in his endurance he should plod on, plod, plod dustily on, through dingy, lonely years.

There was a rumble of thunder far out on the western prairie. A cold breath stole through the hot stillness, and an arm of vapor reached out between the moon and the quiet earth. Darkness fell. The man and girl kept silence between them. They might have been two sad guardians of the black little stream that plashed unseen at their feet. Now and then a reflection of faraway lightning faintly limned them with a green light. Thunder rolled nearer, ominously. The gods were driving their chariots over the bridge. The chill breath passed, leaving the air again to its hot inertia.

"I did not want to go," she said at last, with tears just below the surface of her voice. "I wanted to stay here, but he—they wouldn't—I can't"—

"Wanted to stay here?" he said huskily, not turning. "Here? In Indiana?"

"Yes."

"In Rouen, you mean?"

"In Plattville."

"In Plattville!" He turned now, astounded.

"Yes. Wouldn't you have taken me on the Herald?" She rose and came toward him. "I could have supported myself here if you would, and I've studied how newspapers are made. I know I could have earned a wage. I could have helped you make it a daily." He searched in vain for a trace of raillery in her voice. There was none. She seemed to intend her words to be taken literally.

"I don't understand," he said. "I don't know what you mean."

"I mean that I want to stay here; that I ought to stay here; that my conscience tells me I should; but I can't, and it makes me very unhappy. That was why I acted so badly."

She sprang to her feet, and her eyes flashed.

"Your conscience!" he cried.

"Oh, I know what a jumble and puzzle it must seem to you!"

"I only know one thing—that you are going away tomorrow morning and that I shall never see you again."

The darkness had grown intense. They could not see each other, but a wan glimmer gave him a fleeting, misty view of her. She stood half turned from him, her hand to her cheek in the uncertain fashion of his great moment in the afternoon. Her eyes, he saw in the flying picture that he caught, were troubled, and her hand trembled. She had been irresistible in her gayety, but now that a mysterious distress assailed her, of the reason for which he had no guess, she was so adorably pathetic and seemed such a rich and lovely and sad and happy thing to have come into his life only to go out of it, and he was so full of the prophetic sense of loss of her, it seemed so much like losing everything, that he found too much to say to be able to say anything.

He tried to speak and choked a little. A big drop of rain fell on his bare head. Neither of them noticed the weather or cared for it. They stood with the renewed blackness hanging like a drapery between them.

"Can—can you—tell me why you think you ought not to go?" he whispered finally with a great effort.

"No; not now. But I know you would think I am right in wanting to stay. I know you would if you knew about it; but I can't, I can't. I must go in the morning."

"I should always think you right," he answered in an unsteady tone, "always." He went over to the bench, fumbled about for his hat and picked it up.

"Come," he said gently, "I am going now."

She stood quite motionless for a full minute or longer; then, without a word, she moved toward the house. He went to her, with hands extended to find her, and his fingers touched her sleeve. Together and silently they found the garden path and followed its dim length. In the orchard he touched her sleeve again and led the way.

As they came out behind the house she detained him. Stopping short, she shook his hand from her arm. She spoke in a breath, as if it were all one word.

"Will you tell me why you go? It is not late. Why do you wish to leave me, when I shall not see you again?"

"The Lord be good to me!" he broke out, all his long pent passion of dreams rushing to his lips as the barrier fell. "Don't you see it is because I can't bear to let you go? I hoped to get away without saying it. I want to be alone. I want to be with myself and try to realize things. I didn't want to make a babbling idiot of myself, but I am. It is because I don't want another second of your sweetness to leave an added pain when you've gone. It is because I don't want to hear your voice again, to have it haunt me in the loneliness you will leave. But it's useless, useless. I shall hear it always, just as I shall always see your face, just as I have heard your voice and seen your face these seven years, ever since I first saw you, a child, at Winter Harbor. I forgot for awhile. I thought it was a girl I had made up out of my own heart, but it was you all the time. The impression I thought nothing of then; just the merest touch on my heart, light as it was, grew and grew deeper till it was there forever. You've known me twenty-four hours, and I understand what you think of me for speaking to you like this. If I had known you for years and had waited and had the right to speak and keep your respect, what have I to offer you? I couldn't even take care of you if you went mad as I and listened. I've no excuse for this raving— Yes, I have."

He saw her in another second of lightning, a sudden, bright one. Her back was turned to him, and she had taken a few startled steps from him.

"Ah," he cried, "you are glad enough now to see me go! I knew it. I wanted to spare myself that. I tried not to be a hysterical fool in your eyes." He turned aside, and his head fell on his breast. "God help me!" he said. "What will this place be to me now?"

The breeze had risen. It gathered force. It was a chill wind, and there rose a wailing on the prairie. Drops of rain began to fall.

"You will not think a question implied in this," he said, more composedly, but with an unhappy laugh at himself. "I believe you will not think me capable of asking you if you care"—

"No," she answered, "I—I do not love you."

"Ah, was it a question, after all? I—you read me better than I do, perhaps. But, if I asked, I knew the answer."

She made as if to speak again, but words refused her.

After a moment, "Goodby," he said very steadily. "I thank you for the charity that has given me this little time—with you. It will always be precious to me. I shall always be your servant." His steadiness did not carry him to the end of his sentence. "Goodby"—

She started toward him and stopped. He did not see her. She answered nothing, but stretched out her hand to him and then let it fall quickly.

"Goodby," he said again. "I shall go out the orchard gate. Please tell them good night for me. Won't you speak to me? Goodby!"

He stood waiting, while the rising wind blew their garments about them. She leaned against the wall of the house. "Won't you say goodby and tell me ~~you can forget my~~—

She did not speak.

"No!" he cried wildly. "Since you don't forget it! I have spoiled what might have been a pleasant memory for you, and I know it. You are already troubled, and I have added, and you won't forget it, nor shall I—nor shall I. Don't say goodby! I can say it for both of us. God bless you, and goodby, goodby, goodby!"

He crushed his hat down over his eyes and ran toward the orchard gate. For a moment lightning flashed repeatedly. She saw him go out the gate and disappear into sudden darkness. He ran through the field and came out on the road. Heaven and earth were revealed again for a dazzling white second. From horizon to horizon rolled clouds contorted like an illimitable field of inverted haystacks, and beneath them enormous volumes of bluish vapor were tumbling in the west, advancing eastward with sinister swiftness. She ran to a little knoll at the corner of the house and saw him set his face to the storm. She cried aloud to him with all her strength and would have followed, but the wind took the words out of her mouth and drove her back, cowering, to the shelter of the house.

Out on the road the lashing dust came stinging him like a thousand nettles. It smothered him and beat him so that he covered his face with his sleeve and fought into the storm shoulder foremost, dimly glad of its uproar, yet almost unconscious of it, keeping westward on his way to nowhere. West or east, north or south, it was all one to him. The few heavy drops that fell boiling into the dust ceased to come; the rain withheld while the wind kings rode on earth. On he went in spite of them. On and on, running blindly when he could run at all. At least the wind kings were company. He had been so long alone. There was no one who belonged to him or to whom he belonged. For a day his dreams had found in a girl's eyes the precious thing that is called home. Oh, the wild fancy! He laughed aloud.

There was a startling answer—a lance of fire [illegible] from the sky, riving the fields before his eyes, while crash on crash [illegible] his ears. With that common sense awoke, and he looked about him. He was two miles from town. The nearest house was the Briscoes', far down the road. He knew the rain would come now. There was a big oak near him at the roadside, and he stepped under its sheltering branches and leaned against the great trunk, wiping the perspiration and dust from his face. A moment of stunned quiet had succeeded the peal of thunder. It was followed by several moments of incessant lightning that played along the road and the fields. From that intolerable brightness he turned his head and saw, standing against the fence, five feet away, a man, leaning over the top rail and looking at him.

The same flash swept brilliantly before Helen's eyes as she crouched against the back steps of the brick house. It revealed a picture like a marine of big waves, the tossing tops of the orchard trees, for in that second the full fury of the storm was loosed, wind and rain and hail. It drove her against the kitchen door with cruel force. The latch lifted, the door blew open violently, and she struggled to close it in vain. The house seemed to rock. A candle flickered toward her from the inner doorway and was blown out.

"Helen! Helen!" came Minnie's voice anxiously. "Is that you? We were coming to look for you. Did you get wet?"

Mr. Willetts threw his weight against the door and managed to close it. Then Minnie found her friend's hand and led her through the dark hall to the parlor, where the judge sat placidly reading by a student lamp.

Lige chuckled as they left the kitchen. "I guess you didn't try too hard to shut that door, Hurkless," he said, and then when they came into the lighted room, "Why, where is Harkless?" he asked. "Didn't he come with us from the kitchen?"

"No," answered Helen faintly. "He's gone." She sank upon the sofa and put her hand over her eyes as if to shade them from too sudden light.

"Gone!" The judge dropped his book and sat staring across the table at the girl. "Gone! When?"

"Ten minutes—five—half an hour—I don't know. Before the storm commenced."

"Oh!" The old gentleman appeared to be reassured. "Probably he had work to do and wanted to get in before the rain."

But Lige Willetts was turning pale. "Which way did he go? He didn't come around the house. We were out there till the storm broke."

A man was leaning over the top rail and looking at him.

"He went by the orchard gate. When he got to the road he turned that way." She pointed to the west.

"He must have been crazy!" exclaimed the judge. "What possessed the fellow?"

"I couldn't stop him. I didn't know how." She looked at her three companions, slowly and with growing terror, from one face to another. Minnie's eyes were wide, and she had unconsciously grasped Lige's arm. The young man was staring straight before him. The judge got up and walked nervously back and forth. Helen rose to her feet and went toward the old man, her hands pressed to her bosom.

"Ah," she cried out, "I had forgotten that! You don't think they—you don't think he"—

"I know what I think," Lige broke in. "I think I'd ought to be hanged for letting him out of my sight. Maybe it's all right. Maybe he turned and started right back for town—and got there. But I had no business to leave him, and if I can I'll catch up with him yet." He went to the front door and, opening it, let in a tornado of wind and flood of water that beat him back. Sheets of rain blew in horizontally in spite of the porch beyond.

Briscoe followed him. "Don't be a fool, Lige," he said. "You hardly expect to go out in that." Lige shook his head. It needed them both to get the door closed. The young man leaned his back against it and passed his sleeve across his wet brow. "I hadn't ought to have left him."

"Don't scare the girls," whispered the other; then in a louder tone: "All I'm afraid of is that he'll get blown to pieces or catch his death of cold. That's all there is to worry about. They wouldn't try it again so soon after last night. I'm not bothering about that; not at all. That needn't worry anybody."

"But this morning"—

"Pshaw! He's likely home and dry by this time. All foolishness. Don't be an old woman."

The two men re-entered the room and found Helen clinging to Minnie's hand on the sofa. She looked up at them quickly.

"Do you think—do you—what do you"—

Her voice shook so that she could not go on.

The judge pinched her cheek and patted it. "I think he's home and dry, but I think he got wet first. That's what I think. Never you fear. He's a good hand at taking care of himself. Sit down, Lige. You can't go for awhile."

Nor could he. It was a long, long while before he could venture out. The storm raged and roared without abatement. It was Carlow's worst since '51, the old gentleman said. They heard the great limbs crack and break outside, while the thunder pealed and boomed, and the wind ripped at the eaves till it seemed as if the roof must go. Meanwhile the judge, after some apology, lit his pipe and told long stories of the storms of early days and of odd freaks of the wind. He talked on calmly, the picture of repose, and blew rings above his head, but Helen saw that one of his big slippers beat an unceasing little tattoo on the carpet. She sat with fixed eyes, in silence, holding Minnie's hand tightly, and her face was colorless, growing whiter as the slow hours dragged by.

Every moment Mr. Willetts became more restless. He assured the ladies he had no anxiety regarding Mr. Harkless. It was only his own dereliction of duty that he regretted. The boys would have the laugh on him, he said. But he visibly chafed more and more under the judge's stories and constantly rose to peer out of the window into the wrack and turmoil, and once or twice he struck his hands together with muttered ejaculations. At last there was a lull in the fury without, and as soon as it was perceptible he announced his intention of making his way into town. He "had ought to have went before," he declared apprehensively, and then, with immediate amendment, of course he would find the editor at work in the Herald office. There wasn't the slightest doubt of that, he agreed with the judge, but he better see about it. He would return early in the morning and bid Miss Sherwood goodby. Hoped she'd come back some day; hoped it wasn't her last visit to Plattville. They gave him an umbrella, and he plunged into the night, and as they stood for a moment at the door, the old man calling after him cheery good nights and laughing messages to Harkless, they could see him fight with his umbrella when he got out into the road.

Helen's room was over the porch, the windows facing north, looking out upon the pike and across the fields. "Please don't light the lamp, Minnie," she said when they had gone upstairs. "I don't need it." Miss Briscoe was flitting about the room hunting for matches. In the darkness she came to her friend and laid a kind, large hand on Helen's eyes, and the hand became wet. She drew Helen's head down on her shoulder and sat beside her on the bed.

"Sweetheart, you mustn't fret," she soothed in motherly fashion. "Don't you worry, dear. He's all right. It isn't your fault, dear. They wouldn't come on a night like this."

But Helen drew away and went to the window, flattening her arm against the pane, her forehead pressed against her arm. She had let him go; she had let him go alone. She had forgotten the danger that always beset him. She had been so crazy; she had seen nothing, thought of nothing. She had let him go into that and into the storm alone. Who knew better than she how cruel they were. She had seen the fire leap from the white blossom and heard the ball whistle, the ball they had meant for his heart—that good, great heart. She had run to him the night before. Why had she let him go into the unknown and the storm tonight? But now could she have stopped him? How could she have kept him after what he had said? He had put it out of her power to speak the word "Stay!" She peered into the night through distorting tears.

The wind had gone down a little, but only a little, and the electrical flashes danced all round the horizon in magnificent display, sometimes far away, sometimes dazingly near, the darkness doubly deep between the intervals when the long sweep of flat lands lay in dazzling clearness, clean cut in the washed air to the finest detail of stricken field and heaving woodland.

A staggering flame clove earth and sky, and sheets of light echoed it, and a frightful uproar shook the house and rattled the casements, but over the crash of thunder Minnie heard her friend's loud scream and saw her spring back from the window with both hands, palms outward, pressed to her face. She leaped to her and threw her arms about her.

"What is it?"

"Look!" Helen dragged her to the window. "At the next flash! The fence beyond the meadow."

"What was it? What was it like?" The lightning flashed incessantly. Helen tried to point. Her hand only jerked from side to side.

"Look!" she cried.

"I see nothing but the lightning," Minnie answered breathlessly.

"Oh, the fence! The fence! And in the field!"

"Helen! What was it like?"

"Ah, ah!" she panted. "A long line of white looking things—horrible white"—

"What like?" Minnie turned from the window and caught the other's wrist in a strong clasp.

"Minnie, Minnie! Like long white gowns and cowls crossing the fence!" Helen released her wrist from her companion's grasp and put both hands on Minnie's cheeks, forcing her around to face the flickering pane. "You must look! You must look!" she cried.

"They wouldn't do it! They wouldn't—it isn't!" Minnie shuddered. "They couldn't come in the storm. They wouldn't do it in the pouring rain."

"Yes! Such things would mind the rain!" She burst into hysterical laughter, and Minnie seized her round the waist, almost as unnerved as Helen, yet trying to soothe her. "They would mind the rain." Helen whispered. "They would fear a storm. Yes

And I let him go; I let him go!"

Pressing close together, clasping each other's waist, the two girls peered out at the landscape.

"Look!"

Up from the distant fence that bordered the northern side of Jones' field a pale, pelted, flapping thing reared itself, poised and seemed, just as the blackness came again, to drop to the ground.

"Did you see?"

But Minnie had thrown herself into a deep chair with a laugh of wild relief. "My darling girl!" she cried. "Not a line of white things—just one—Mr. Jones' scarecrow! And we saw it blown down!"

"No, no, no! I saw the others. They were in the field beyond. I saw them. When I looked the first time they were nearly all on the fence. This time we saw the last man crossing. Ah, I let him go alone!"

Minnie sprang up and infolded her. "No; you dear, imagining child, you're upset and nervous, that's all the matter in the world. Don't worry; don't, child; it's all right. Mr. Harkless is home and safe in bed long ago. I know that old scarecrow on the fence like a book, and you're so unstrung you fancied the rest. He's all right. Don't you bother, dear."

The big, motherly girl took her companion in her arms and rocked her back and forth soothingly and petted and reassured her and then cried a little with her, as a good hearted girl always will with a friend. Then she left her for the night, with many a cheering word and tender caress. "Get to sleep, my dear," she called through the door when she had closed it behind her. "You must if you have to go in the morning. It just breaks my heart. I don't know how we'll bear it without you. Father will miss you almost as much as I will. Good night. Don't bother about that old white scarecrow; that's all it was. Good night, dear; good night."

"Good night, dear," answered a plaintive little voice. Helen's cheek pressed the pillow and tossed from side to side. By and by she turned the pillow over; it had grown wet. The wind blew about the eaves and blew itself out. Sleep would not come. She got up and laved her burning eyes; then she sat by the window. The storm's strength was spent at last. The rain grew lighter and lighter until there was but the sound of running water and the drip, drip on the tin roof of the porch. Only the thunder rumbling in the distance marked the storm's course, the chariots of the gods rolling farther and farther away till they finally ceased to be heard altogether. The clouds parted majestically, and then, between great curtains of mist, the day star was seen shining in the east.

"Look!" she cried.

The night was hushed, and the peace that falls before dawn was upon the wet, flat lands. Somewhere in the sodden grass a swamped cricket chirped; from an outlying flange of the village a dog's howl rose mournfully; it was answered by another far away and by another and another. The sonorous chorus rose above the village, died away, and quiet fell again.

Helen sat by the window, no comfort touching her heart. Tears coursed her cheeks no longer, but her eyes were wide and staring, and her lips parted breathlessly, for the hush was broken by the far clamor of the courthouse bell ringing in the night. It rang and rang and rang and rang. She could not breathe. She threw open the window. The bell stopped. All was quiet once more. The east was gray.

Suddenly out of the stillness there came the sound of a horse galloping over a wet road. He was coming like mad. Some one for a doctor? No; the hoof beats grew louder, coming out from the town, coming faster and faster, coming here. There was a plashing and trampling in front of the house and a sharp "Whoa!" In the dim light of first dawn she made out a man on a foam flecked horse. He drew up at the gate.

A window to the right of hers went screeching up. She heard the judge clear his throat before he spoke.

"What is it? That's you, isn't it, Wiley? What is it?" He took a good deal of time and coughed between the sentences. His voice was more than ordinarily quiet, and it sounded husky. "What is it, Wiley?"

"Judge, what time did Mr. Harkless leave here last night, and which way did he go?"

There was a silence. The judge turned away from the window. Minnie was standing just outside his door. "It must have been about half past 9, wasn't it, father?" she called in a choked voice. "And—you know—Helen thought he went west."

"Wiley!" The old man leaned from the sill again.

"Yes," answered the man on horseback.

"Wiley, he left about half past 9—just before the storm. They think he went west."

"Much obliged. Willetts is so upset he isn't sure of anything."

"Wiley!" The old man's voice shook. Minnie began to cry aloud. The horseman wheeled about and turned his animal's head toward town. "Wiley!"

"Yes."

"Wiley, they haven't—you don't think they've got him?"

Said the man on horseback, "Judge. I'm afraid they have."

CHAPTER VIII.

THE courthouse bell ringing in the night! No hesitating stroke of Schofields' Henry, no uncertain touch, was on the rope. A loud, wild, hurried clamor pealing out to wake the countryside, a rapid clang! clang! clang! that struck clear in to the spine. The courthouse bell had tolled for the death of Morton, of Garfield, of Hendricks; had rung joy peals of peace after the war and after political campaigns, but it had rung as it was ringing now only three times—once when Hibbard's mill burned, once when Webb Landis killed Sep Bardlock and intrenched himself in the lumber yard and would not be taken until he was shot through and through, and once when the Rouen accommodation, crowded with children and women and men, was wrecked within twenty yards of the station.

Why was the bell ringing now? Men and women, startled into wide wakefulness, groped to windows. No red mist hung over town or country. What was it? The bell rang on. Its loud alarm beat increasingly into men's hearts and quickened their throbbing to the rapid measure of its own. Vague forms loomed in the gloaming. A horse, madly ridden, splashed through the town. There were shouts; voices called hoarsely; lamps began to gleam in the windows; half clad people emerged from their houses, men slapping their braces on their shoulders as they ran out of doors; questions were shouted into the dimness.

Then the news went over the town.

It was cried from yard to yard, from group to group, from gate to gate, and reached the furthermost confines. Runners shouted it as they sped by, and boys panted it, breathless; women with loosened hair stumbled into darkling chambers and faltered it out to new wakened sleepers, and pale girls, clutching wraps at their throats, whispered it across fences. The sick, tossing on their hard beds, heard it. The bell clamored it far and near; it spread over the countryside, and it flew over the wires to distant cities. The White Caps had got Mr. Harkless!

Lige Willetts had lost track of him out near Briscoe's, it was said, and had come into town at midnight seeking him. He had found Parker, the Herald foreman, and Ross Schofield, the typesetter, and Bud Tipworthy, the devil, at work in the printing office, but no sign of Harkless there or in the cottage. Together these had sought for him and had roused others who had inquired at every house where he might have gone for shelter, and they had heard nothing. They had watched for his coming during the slackening of the storm. He had not come, and there was no place he could have gone. He was missing. Only one thing could have happened.

They had roused up Warren Smith, the prosecutor, and Horner, the sheriff, and Jared Wiley, the deputy. William Todd had rung the alarm. It was agreed that the first thing to do was to find him. After that there would be trouble, if not before. It looked as if there would be trouble before. The men tramping up to the muddy square in their shirt sleeves were bulgy about the right hips, and when Homer Tibbs joined Columbus Landis at the hotel corner and Landis saw that Homer was carrying a shotgun Landis went back for his. A hastily sworn posse galloped out Main street. Women and children ran into neighbors' yards and began to cry. Day was coming, and as the light grew men swore and savagely kicked at the palings of fences as they ran by them.

In the foreglow of dawn they gathered in the square and listened to Warren Smith, who made a speech from the courthouse fence and warned them to go slow. They answered him with angry shouts and hootings. But he made his big bass voice heard and bade them do nothing rash. No facts were known, he said. It was far from certain that harm had been done, and no one knew that the Six Crossroads people had done it, even if something had happened to Mr. Harkless. He declared that he spoke in Harkless' name. Nothing could distress him so much as for them to defy the law, to take it out of the proper hands. Justice would be done.

"Yes, it will!" shouted a man below him, brandishing the butt of a rawhide whip above his head. "And while you jaw on about it here he may be tied up like a dog in the woods, shot full of holes by the men you never lifted a finger to hender, because you want their votes when you run for circuit judge. What are we doin' here? What's the good of listening to you?"

There was a yell at this, and those who heard the speaker would probably have started for the Crossroads had not a rumor sprung up which passed rapidly from man to man and in a few moments had reached every person in the crowd. The news came that the two shell gamblers had wrenched a bar out of a window under cover of the storm, had broken jail and were at large. Their threats of the day before were remembered now with convincing vividness. They had sworn repeatedly to Bardlock and to the sheriff and in the hearing of others that they would "do" for the man who had taken their money from them and had them arrested. The prosecuting attorney, quickly perceiving the value of this complication in holding back the mob that was already forming, called Horner from the crowd and made him get up on the fence and confess that his prisoners had escaped, at what time he did not know, probably toward the beginning of the storm, when it was noisiest.

"You see," cried the attorney, "there is nothing as yet of which we can accuse the Crossroads. If our friend has been hurt it is much more likely that these crooks did it. They escaped in time to do it, and we all know they were laying for him. You want to be mighty careful, fellow citizens. Horner is already in telegraphic communication with every town around here, and he'll have those men before night. All you've got to do is to control yourselves a little and go home quietly."

They answered him with angry shouts.

He could see that his words (except those in reference to returning home—no one was going home) made an impression. There was a babble of shouting and argument and swearing that grew louder and louder.

Mr. Ephraim Watts, in spite of all confusion, cind as carefully as upon the preceding day, deliberately climbed the fence and stood by the lawyer and made a single steady gesture with his hand. He was listened to at once, as his respect for the law was less notorious than his irreverence for it, and he had been known in Carlow as customarily a reckless man. They wanted illegal and desperate advice and quieted down to hear it. He spoke in his professionally calm voice.

"Gentlemen, it seems to me that Mr. Smith and Mr. Bibshaw," nodding to the man with the rawhide whip, "are both right. What good are we doing here? What we want to know is what's happened to Mr. Harkless. It looks just now like the shell men might have done it. Let's find out what they done. Scatter and hunt for him. Soon as anything's known for certain Hibbard's mill whistle will blow three times. Keep on looking till it does; then," he finished, with a barely perceptible scornful smile at the attorney—"then we can decide on what had ought be done."

Six Crossroads lay dark and steaming in the sun that morning. The forge was silent, the saloon locked up, the roadway deserted even by the pigs. The broken old buggy stood rotting in the mud without a single lean little old man or woman—such were the children of the Crossroads—to play about it. Once, when the deputy sheriff rode through alone, a tattered black hound, more wolf than dog, half emerged, growling, from beneath one of the tumbledown barns and was jerked back into the darkness by his tail, with a snarl fiercer than his own, while a gun barrel shone for a second as it swung for a stroke on the brute's head. The hound did not yelp or whine when the blow fell. He shut his eyes twice and slunk sullenly back to his place.

The shanties might have received a volley or two from some of the mounted hands, exasperated by futile searching, had not the escape of Horner's prisoners made the guilt of the Crossroads appear doubtful in the minds of many. As the morning waned the advocates of the theory that the gamblers had made away with Harkless grew in number. There came a telegram from the Rouen chief of police that he had a clew to their whereabouts. He thought they had succeeded in reaching Rouen, and it began to be generally believed that they had escaped by the 1 o'clock freight train, which had stopped to take on some empty cars at a side track a mile northwest of town, across the fields from the Briscoe house. Toward noon a party went out to examine the railroad embankment.

Men began to come back into the village for breakfast by twos and threes, but many kept on searching the woods, not feeling the need of food or caring if they did. Every grove and clump of underbrush, every thicket, was ransacked. The waters of the creek, shallow for the most part, but swollen overnight, were dragged at every pool. Nothing was found. There was not a sign.

The bar of the hotel was thronged all morning as the returning citizens rapidly made their way thither, and those who had breakfasted and were going out again paused for internal as well as external re-enforcement. The landlord, himself returned from a long hunt, set out his whisky with a lavish hand.

"He was the best man we had, boys," said Landis as he poured the little glasses full. "We'd ort of sent him to the legislative halls of Washington long ago. He'd of done us honor there. But we never thought of doin' any-

Saw Mill Will Not Run.

St. Hilaire Spectator: During the past few days rumors, believed to be well founded, have been spread in Crookston and here to the effect that the St. Hilaire saw mill would be fitted up and started as quickly as possible. The story was published in a Crookston paper and the reason given was that the Crookston Lumber Co's. mill at Bemidji was damaged to such an extent that it had to shut down and this mill would be run instead.

In order to get at the truth of the matter the Spectator this morning telephoned Manager J. M. Richards of the Crookston Lumber Co., who states that there has been no consideration whatever given the advisability of running this mill and that it will not be started. The Bemidji mill was shut down last Friday owing to the sinking of its boilers and the burning off of the piling on which they stood, and the damages are sufficient to preclude the possibility of its running until July 1st at the best.

Pay Your Taxes Before July 1.

The real estate taxes which were due the 1st day of January will be increased by 10 per cent providing at least one-half of the amount due is not paid on or before the 1st day of June. If half is paid by that date, the balance can run till the first of the following November without any penalties being added.

If no portion of them are paid a penalty of 10 per cent is added June 1st and January next another 5 per cent is added; on that day they become delinquent and if not paid before the first Monday in May the land is sold for the amount taxed against it.

Thus far about the usual percentage of taxes against real estate has been paid and by the 1st of June there will be a large additional amount of money turned into the treasury to avoid the penalty.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Comfortable Sick Bed.

When sickness comes, as unfortunately it does, it may be made easier for the one who cares for the patient if the following is observed in making the bed:

Three sheets should be in use at a time—the upper, the lower and the draw, which is placed directly under the patient. Blankets of good quality make the best covering, with a light weight counterpane at the top.

There should be two large pillows and as many small pillows as the exigencies of the case require. If a rubber sheet is necessary, spread it smoothly on the mattress. Put on the lower sheet and pin it into place on the underside of the mattress, so that the patient may not work it up into wrinkles.

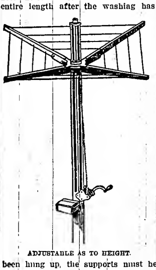
Fold the draw sheet and pin it across the middle of the bed so that it will extend from the patient's shoulders to well below the hips. Put on the upper sheet, leaving it a little loose for the feet end long enough to turn over the blanket at the top.

The blankets need not be so long as the sheet, but should be long enough to tuck around the patient's neck. The counterpane may be of the same length as the sheet and left long enough to fold over.

In changing the bed roll the patient to one side, putting one hand against the shoulder and the other against the hip. Roll the lower sheet up in lengthwise folds against the patient, put on the fresh sheet and the draw sheet and put in place. Protect the patient with the upper sheet and roll him over on to the spread out portion of the clean sheets. Pull the lower sheet smooth and pin. Put a clean upper sheet on over the soiled one, tuck in the clean one and remove the soiled one.

Improved Clothes Drier.

Whether it is a small washing hung on a short line in the back yard of a city house or a long string of garments stretched from pole to pole and braced at the center by props to keep the clothes from dragging in the dirt it is no pleasant task to reach up and attach the pieces one by one to the line. As no arrangement has heretofore been introduced to elevate the line the entire length after the washing has been hung up, the supports must be elevated until the line is barely within reach, and so the woman goes on week after week pulling the line down and pinning the clothes fast. Now, however, the inventor has come to her relief with the clothes drier here presented, which is capable of such adjustment as to bring the line within easy reach while the washing is being hung out. In fact, this line support could be lowered almost to the ground if so desired. The central post is firmly fixed in the ground and is surrounded by a sliding frame in which the branching line supports are secured. On one side of the central post is a shaft on which ropes are wound, with the free ends leading over a pulley in the top of the post and down to the sliding frame. By the aid of a crank with which to revolve the shaft and wind up or unwind the ropes the frame can be lowered to a convenient position until the washing is hung up and then elevated to the highest point, out of reach of the ground, there to remain until the clothes dry and are ready for lowering again to be placed in the basket for ironing.



ADJUSTABLE AS TO HEIGHT.

Codfish With Cheese.

This may be made of the boiled fresh cods or from the dessicated salt fish. For the former take a pound of fresh fish, pick in small pieces, put in a saucepan, cover with cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Drain the fish and leave in the colander while you make a cream dressing, using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, a cup and a half of milk and a little cayenne Butter a casserole and place a layer of fish in the bottom. Cover with a layer of the sauce, and over this grate a covering of cheese, not too thick. Repeat until the dish is filled, having the cheese at the top. Grate a sprinkling of stale bread crumbs over this, dot with butter, place in a hot oven and bake half an hour.

To Take Out Wrinkles.

I have often, says a writer in Good Housekeeping, taken the wrinkles out of a cloth skirt or jacket and restored the fresh look by hanging them over a line in the bathroom, then closing all the doors and windows, turning on the hot water and letting it run till the room was full of steam. Let the clothes hang undisturbed in the vapor for two hours, then open the room and let the garments dry in the fresh air. You will be surprised and gratified to see how they will be renovated by this simple process. Soft silk can be treated the same way.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Colonel Mills' Promotion Delayed.

The impression seems to prevail about the senate and in Washington military circles that Colonel Albert L. Mills will not be confirmed as brigadier general during the present session of congress. Colonel Mills is superintendent of the Military academy at West Point, where he is very popular with the cadets because of his generous and liberal administration. His real rank is captain, and the fight against his confirmation is based upon the fact that the promotion would have the effect of "jumping" him over a large number of army officers who are now his superiors in rank.

COLONEL ALBERT L. MILLS.

Posed as Queen.

A silver haired American woman is still living who posed for many a day as queen of England, and she still recalls with a shudder the burden of forty pounds of royal clothes which she wore for so many weary hours.

Shortly after the coronation of Queen Victoria the Society of St. George and St. Andrew of Philadelphia commissioned Mr. Thomas Sully to paint a portrait of the queen in her coronation robes. The artist went to England accompanied by his daughter, Blanche, a young lady of eighteen. The queen received him graciously and sat for him till the head was finished. She then relinquished the task to the artist's daughter, who sat dressed in the queen's robes for many a long day.

Mr. Sully received $40,000 for the portrait and Miss Blanche was made happy by an autograph letter from the queen and the present of a diamond ring.

Tolstoi's Outdoor Life.

Still vigorous at the age of seventy-five years, Count Leo Tolstoi nearly every day either takes a ride on his favorite horse, goes for a walk under the linden trees with his daughter Alexandra or, in company with his great wolfhound, tramps over the broad acres of the famous estate of Ysnaya Polyana. Tolstoi has long been an ardent out of doors man, in early life a hurdle rider of no mean accomplishments, a hunter and an athlete, in later years a pedestrian to whom twelve miles a day was an average walk and to whom a day in the saddle was as nothing.

The Kaiser Almost Himself.

The swing around the Mediterranean circle taken by the kaiser seems to have had the desired results in bringing back his usual health and vigor. He was so pleased with the trip and the way it was managed by the North German Lloyd Steamship company that he sent a telegram from Naples to the manager of the company at Berlin, expressing his thanks. As a mark of his majesty's appreciation of the comfort and service on board the Koenig Albert the emperor decorated members of the crew, and in recognition of the arrangement of the company he conferred the order of the Red Eagle of the second class upon Dr. Wiegand, general manager of the company, and President Plate of the North German Lloyd company. As a further evidence that the kaiser is himself again it is said that on leaving the steamship at Naples he asked if his state cabins would be left as he had occupied them. On the captain answering his question in the negative Emperor William said:

"Oh, that is a great mistake. I am sure lots of Americans would pay any sum to live in the cabins occupied by me."

OPENING OF THE NEW LANDS

But Two Weeks Remain—Many Inquiries Being Received In Regard to Them.

Only about two weeks now remain now before the opening for settlement and entry of certain lands in Pigeon River, Bois Fort, Deer Creek, White Oak Point, Red Lake, Chippewa of the Mississippi, and Winnibigoshish Indian reservations in northern Minnesota. This important event in the history of the settlement of the northern counties has been set to occur at the hour of 9 a. m., June 20th.

The reputation of this section of the state for possessing a large amount of choice farming land has become so thoroughly established in central and west Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota particularly, that the advertised opening of any piece of land, no matter how small is sure to be the means of bringing in inquiries regarding the settlement of the land in almost every mail. The land office clerks are kept busy answering the questions, and sending out circulars giving necessary details.

Particularly is this true in the present instance, when 49,517 acres of good agricultural land in the Duluth land district will be open to entry, located in the Pigeon river, Bois Fort and Red Lake reservations. Most of the land in this district to be opened is located in the Bois Fort reservation, where 38,692 acres are free to be taken by actual settlers.

Many people do not understand the land district divisions, and when they wish to find out anything about the opening to settlement of agricultural lands they address the nearest office, instead of the office in the district in which the land in question is located. But this answers the purpose equally well, for usually the officials of one district can give information of this character regarding neighboring districts. It makes the clerks a little more work, that is all.

In all 248,731 acres of reservation land will be opened to entry. Of this there are 71,168 acres in the Cass Lake district, 128,045 acres in the Crookston district, and 49,517 acres in the Duluth district. A prior right to enter the lands will not be secured by settling on them before the date of opening.

MUST WAIT A YEAR.

Judicial Ditch Hearing Is Postponed Again.

The postponed hearing in the matter of Judicial Ditch No. 4, was held at Fred Beuder's farm in Equality township last Saturday, and quite a crowd of spectators was present.

After taking into consideration all the facts in the matter, the officials decided that in view of existing conditions, the best interests of all concerned would be to postpone the hearing in this matter until May of next year, and this was ordered done.

It seems that a great many of the farmers living along the route of the proposed ditch have not yet proved up on their land, and as the Judge has held that until such final proof is made no assessment can be levied against the land for ditch purposes, the postponement of the final hearing until next year was necessary, in order that all may have a chance to prove up and bear their share of the expense of the drainage.

The ditch is one that will do a great amount of good, and it is likely that when the necessary steps are taken to make the assessments possible on all lands benefitted, there will be no doubt about its establishment.

Musicale June 21.

The ladies of St. Mary's church announce that they will give a musicale at the Metropolitan opera house on the evening of June 21, and they are planning on making it an event long to be remembered. Local talent will render the program. and it promises to be srrictly first-class. The program in full will likely be announced next week.

WILL APPEAL FROM ORDER.

Citizens of Rocksbury Township Not Satisfied With Ruling.

The citizens of Rocksbury township are not satisfied with the findins of the court in the matter of Ditch No. 21, and at a meeting last Saturday evening decided to appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

As explained week before last, this case is one that has been hanging fire for so long, and from present indications it will yet be sometime before it is definitely settled.

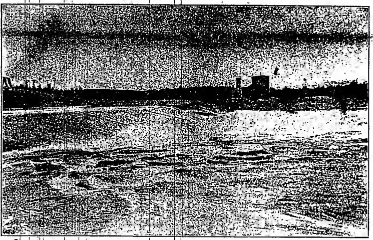
The residents of the fraction east of Rocksbury petitioned for the construction of the ditch, the estimated assessments, etc., were made by the viewers and the hearing held. At the hearing a number of the residents of Rocksbury appeared and fought the establishment of the ditch, claiming that it was taxing them too much to support it where it crossed that town. and so strenuous was the opposition that the county commissioners refused to order the ditch constructed.

From this decision the residents of the fractional town appealed, and week before last Judge Watts rendered his decision, ordering that the board's findings be reversed and the ditch constructed, and recommended that some changes be made in the assessments.

The Rocksbury peolpe are not satisfied and will appeal the case to the Supreme Court before they will be content to let the construction of the ditch go ahead.

Messrs. Bonghton and Germo represent Rocksbury, F. A. Grady the county, and Messrs Hannay and Rowe the fractional people, and the appeal case will be in reality the town of Rocksbury vs. Red Lake county.

The case has attracted considerable attention, and the final outcome will be watched with interest.



MILL DAM IN RED LAKE RIVER, WHERE HERMAN KRIEL WAS DROWNED.

OVER THE DAM TO HIS DEATH

Herman Kriel. An Employee of the Red Lake Falls Milling Company, is Drowned.

While working at some repairs on the dam in the Red Lake river near the Red Lake Falls Milling company's plant last Friday, Herman Kriel was carried over the apron of the dam to the swift waters below, and drowned before help could reach him.

In company with several others, he was working on the roadway across the apron, and when noon came part of the men went to shore in the boat, and while standing in the swift water waiting for the return of the boat Mr. Kriel lost his footing, and before he could attempt to save himself was carried over the apron of the dam. He came to the surface only once, and then but for a moment, and then disappeared below the rushing waters never to rise again.

The alarm was given immediately and searching parties at once went to work hunting for the body. The search proved unsuccessful, and considerable dynamite was used in an attempt to bring the body to the surface, but not until Tuesday morning were the efforts of the searchers rewarded, when the body was found about 400 feet below the dam.

Mr. Kriel was an old resident of Red Lake Falls, and had worked for the Red Lake Falls Milling company for the past sixteen years being a faithful and conscientious employee, and his sudden summons to the other world was learned of with great sorrow by his numerous friends.

The funeral was held from the Presbyterian church yesterday morning at ten o'clock, and one of the largest gatherings in the history of the city turned out to pay their last respects to a neighbor and friend. The remains were interred in the cemetery east of town.

Deceased was 46 years of age, and leaves a wife and six children to mourn the loss of a good father and kind husband, and the heartfelt sympathy of the community is extended to them in their hour of sadness.

Commencement Tomorrow Night.

The commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls high school will take place at the Metropolitan opera house tomorrow evening, at which time eleven young ladies and gentlemen will participate in a program that will mark the end of their school life.

The exercores will start promptly at 8:30 p. m., and the people are requested to be on time, as the program is quite lengthy and will consume considerable time.

Junior Banquet Saturday.

The class of '04 will be banqueted at the Metropolitan opera house Saturday evening by the Junior class of the high school, and those who will attend are looking joyfully forward to the event. The menu will be interspersed with toasts and speeches, and altogether the affair will be one of the many pleasant incidents that have marked class week.

JAPS CAPTURE KINCHOU

SERIES OF RUSHES CHECKED BY DEALY RIFLE AND CANNON FIRE OF DEFENDERS.

JAP VICTORY IS COMPLETE, BUT THEIR CASUALTIES NUMBER THREE THOUSAND.

Tokio, May 28.—The Japanese army swept the Russians from Kinchou Thursday morning and in a desperate attack stormed the almost impregnable position of the Russians on Nanshan hill, west of Talienwan.

Subsequent reports indicate that the storming of Nanshan hill was a bloody affair. The Japanese first centered their fire on the Russian batteries, in which they were aided by four gunboats from Kinchou bay. They succeeded in silencing many of the enemy's guns.

The Russians had constructed a series of trenches around the hill on a terrace protected by wire entanglements and other such devices.

The Japanese made a series of rushes, but they were in vain. The deadly rifle and cannon fire of the enemy checked them repeatedly.

Finally, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Japanese reformed and stormed the crest of the hill. The Russians held to their position doggedly and it was 7 o'clock in the evening before the Japanese finally gained possession of the ridge.

The Japanese troops fought bravely for sixteen hours under an extremely heavy fire before clearing the Russians from the Southern heights after a brave resistance. The Muscovites made several attempts to retake the hills, but after much loss of life retired from the narrowest part of the peninsula, which had been held so long.

Admiral Togo has established a blockade around the southern end of the Liaotung peninsula, completely enveloping Port Arthur. This marks the final investment of the fortress.

JAP CASUALTIES BIG

LOSE THREE THOUSAND KILLED AND WOUNDED IN FIGHTING AROUND KINCHOU.

Tokio, May 28.—Japan paid heavily for her victories at Kinchou, Nanshan and Talienwan, losing 3,000 men in killed and wounded in the repeated assaults against these positions, but she scored a sweeping and valuable victory over the Russians, capturing [illegible] guns, clearing the way to Port [illegible] and inflicting losses on the [illegible] which in the end are expected to total 2,000 men.

It is doubted if the Russians will stand again north of Port Arthur. They retired from the field beaten and then taken to rally at Nanguanling, where it was anticipated that a second stand would be made.

The desperate onslaughts of the Japanese on the heights of Nanshan were telling, for the Russians left 500 dead in the trenches there. A complete search of this field is expected to show a greater number of dead.

Jap Soldiers Greatly Fatigued.

Nanguanling was occupied Friday morning by a force of infantry, artillery and engineers under the command of General Nakamura. The main Japanese force spent Friday night billeted in the villages around Nanshan. The soldiers were greatly fatigued as a result of the constant fighting, but they entered with much spirit upon the new operations. A force of Russians held San-shilipu station, which is northwest of Dalny, but the Japanese drove them out.

The Russians abandoned and burned the station and retired in the direction of Port Arthur.

The estimates of the Russians engaged in the defense of Kinchou, Nanshan hill and the south shore of Talienwan vary, but it is evident that the Russians drew [illegible] men from the forces at Port Arthur and offered all the resistance possible. It is understood here that Lieutenant General Stoessel, commander of the military forces at Port Arthur, was in personal command of the recent operations. As soon as the Japanese troops have rested they will press on to the south.

INVALUABLE TO JAPS.

Fall of Kinchou Will Aid in Campaign Against Port Arthur.

London, May 27.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister, discussing the recent fighting north of Port Arthur, said:

"Kinchou will be occupied as a first base. The neighboring hills will be strongly fortified in order that they can be held indefinitely. For food supplies and ammunition Port Dalny will be second base.

"The possession of Kinchou will be of invaluable aid in the campaign against Port Arthur. The hills command positions of the country for several miles in the direction of Port Arthur. I presume from the action at Kinchou that the Russians intend to make another stand at Port Dalny. Their justification for defending Kinchou must have been the belief that their numbers were able to cope with ours, so I expect that practically all the available Russian troops have been moved out from Port Arthur in the attempt to head off the investment."

JAPS FORCED TO RETREAT.

Kurapatkin Reports Small Encaunter Near Waefanghaan.

St. Petersburg, May 30.—The emperor has received the following dispatch from General Kuropatkin:

"A detachment of Japanese cavalry, consisting of 150 sabres, moved forward from the main body May 27 and approached within eight kilometres southeast of Waefanghoon station, but on encountering our frontier guards fell back rapidly.

"On May 26 a Russian patrol heard heavy artillery firing in the direction of Kinchou."

JAPS ROUT COSSACKS.

Twa Thousand Russians Put to Flight Near Fenghuancheng.

Tokio, May 31.—A detachment of Japanese troops attacked and defeated 2,000 Cossacks at Aiyangpienmen, northeast of Fenghuancheng, Saturday. The engagement began at 10:30 and ended at 11:30 a. m. The Japanese lost four men killed and twenty-eight wounded. The Russian casualties are not known.

CONTINUE TO RETIRE

RUSSIANS ON LIAOTUNG PENINSULA WITHDRAWING TO PORT ARTHUR.

Tokio, May 30.—General Oku, in command of the Japanese forces operating against Port Arthur, reports that the Russians have abandoned Chenkochenpau, Huangshan and Liushutun. No Russians have been seen east of Chenkochenpau.

General Nakamura's detachment, which occupied Liushutun Friday, captured four Russian guns.

TEN MEN SUFFOCATED

SUCCUMB TO FUMES FROM A LOCOMOTIVE WHILE PASSING THROUGH TUNNEL.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 26.—A telegram received at the Susquehanna Coal company's office in this city last evening states that ten miners were suffocated by gas and sulphur fumes from a small locomotive Wednesday afternoon in the workings of the Summit Branch Coal company at Williamstown.

The tunnel in which the disaster occurred is one mile in length and is used by the coal company to convey the coal mined in the workings in the Bear Valley to the breaker in the Williams Valley.

About 4 o'clock p. m. General Inside Foreman Golden and about fifty miners boarded a loaded train which was about to be hauled from Bear Valley to Williamstown. Everything went all right until about half of the journey was made when some of the men attracted the attention of the engineer, who at once stopped and it was found that nearly every man in the party on the cars had been overcome by the gas and sulphur which emanated from the stack of the locomotive and floated back over them. The engineer at once crowded on all steam possible and the unconscious men were hurried to the Williamstown end of the tunnel. Every possible effort to resuscitate them failed.

TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

MAYOR M'LANE OF BALTIMORE DRIVEN INSANE BY CRITICISM AND WORRY.

Baltimore, May 31.—Mayor Robert M. McLane of this city shot and killed himself at his home Monday afternoon in his bedroom at his residence, No. 29 West Preston street. His bride of less than two weeks was at the time of the tragedy asleep in an adjoining room, and was awakened by the discharge of the revolver, which Mr. McLane evidently fired while standing before the mirror of the dressing case. The bullet entered the right temple and crashing through the head escaped in the rear of the left ear.

Mrs. McLane and other members of the household rushed to the mayor's assistance, but he did not regain consciousness after he fell to the floor, and expired within an hour.

No cause can be assigned for the act by the members of Mr. McLane's family. Since the fire of last February he has been kept assiduously at work administering the affairs of the city, besides endeavoring to direct the rehabilitation and rebuilding of the burned district. This, together with criticisms by his political opponents, are thought by many to have caused a temporary aberration of mind.

Mayor McLane was thirty-six years of age, the youngest chief executive Baltimore ever had.

YAZOO CITY IN ASHES

TWO HUNDRED BUILDINGS, VALUED AT $2,000,000, ARE COMPLETELY DESTROYED.

Jackson, Miss., May 26.—With every business house of any importance in ashes, together with a large number of private residences, the principal hotel and the passenger depot, Yazoo City, a town of 6,000 people, forty-five miles from Jackson, is resting after one of the most exciting days in its history. The fire started at 8:30 a. m. and burned until 5 p. m., destroying a total of 200 houses. The burned district is three blocks wide and twelve blocks long. The estimates of the loss are between $1,600,000 and $2,000,000.

A man named Chambliss, a citizen of Yazoo City, was killed by falling walls, and Mayor Holmes was badly burt. He is in a precarious condition.

FOR UNION OF CHURCHES.

Presbyterian General Assembly Favars Proposed Plan.

Buffalo, May 28.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, by an overwhelming voice vote, adopted the report of the committee on union with the Cumberland Presbyterian church. The resolutions adopted included not only favorable action on the report, but recommended certain other steps to be taken to secure the union of the churches and to make plain the position of the church.

The question of proposed basis of union will now go to the presbyteries of the general assembly. If it is approved by a vote of two-thirds of them the necessary steps will be taken at the next general assembly to effect the union.

SENATOR QUAY DEAD

NOTED PENNSYLVANIAN PASSES AWAY PEACEFULLY AT HIS HOME IN BEAVER.

Illness That Caused Death Began Abaut a Year Aga and Was Due, It Is Said, to Heavy Eating, Smoking and the Great Nervaua Strains Which He Underwent In Recent Political Contests.

Beaver, Pa., May 30.—Matthew Stanley Quay, senior senator from Pennsylvania, died peacefully Saturday afternoon from chronic gastritis. The funeral will be on Tuesday, May 31, and burial will be at Beaver cemetery.

Senator Quay's illness began about a year ago. It was a recurrence of the trouble that beset him during the latter part of 1900 and the early days of January, 1901, when he was undergoing the strain of a campaign for reelection to the senate.

SENATOR M. S. QUAY.

Senator Quay, in health, was a great eater, and his troubles of later years date, it is said, from over drafts on his vital system, due to heavy eating, smoking and the great nervous strains which he underwent.

Outdoor life in the Maine woods and a sojourn in Florida and other places failed to renew the vitality of Mr. Quay, and finally he came back here. He gradually declined in weight and at last succumbed.

To Raise the Maine.

Havana, May 31.—Joseph R. Wyckoff of Havana has returned from the United States having organized a company, he says, to raise the wreck of the battleship Maine.

NINETY SHAMBAS KILLED.

Tunisian Raiders Pursued and Severely Punished.

Tripoli, May 30.—Three bands of Shamba Tunisians raided the Tripolitan oasis of Sinaun May 27, killing a number of the inhabitants. Tripolitans pursued the raiders and overtook them at Ders. In the fighting which followed ninety Shambas were killed.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

thing fer him. Jest set round and left him build up the town and give him empty thankyes. Drink hearty, gentlemen," he finished gloomily. "I don't grudge no liquor today—except to Lige Willetts."

"He was a good man," said young William Todd, whose nose was red, not from the whisky. "I've about give up."

"It's goin' to seem mighty empty around here," said Ross Schofield. "What's goin' to become o' the Herald and the party in this district? Where's the man to run either of 'em now? Like as not," he continued desperately, "it'll go against us in the fall."

Dibb Zane choked over his four fingers. "We might's well bust up the dab dusted ole town ef he's gone."

"I don't know what's come over that Cynthy Tipworthy," said the landlord. "She's waited table on him last two years, and her brother Bud works at the Herald office. She didn't say a word, only looked and looked and looked, like a crazy woman; then her and Bud went off together to hunt in the woods. They jest tuck hold of each other's hands like"—

"I reckon there ain't many crazier than them two Bowlders, father and son," interrupted a patron, wiping the drops from his beard as he set his glass on the bar. "They rid into town like a couple of wild Indians, the old man beatin' that gray mare o' theirn till she was one big welt, and he ain't natcherly no cruel man either. I expect Lige Willetts better keep out of Hartley's way."

"I keep out of no man's way!" cried a voice behind him. Turning, they saw Lige standing on the threshold of the door that led to the street. In his hand he held the bridle of the horse he had ridden across the sidewalk and that now stood panting, with lowered head half through the doorway, beside his master. Lige was hatless, splashed with mud from head to foot; his jaw was set, his teeth ground together, his eyes burned under red lids, and his hair lay tossed and damp on his brow. "I keep out of no man's way," he repeated hoarsely. "I heard you, Mr. Tibbs, but I've got too much to do, while you loaf and gas and drink over Landis' bar. I've got other business than keepin' out of Hart Bowlder's way. I'm lookin' for John Hurkless. He was the best man we had in this ornery hole, and he was too good for us, and so we've maybe let him get killed, and maybe I'm to blame. But I'm goin' to find him, and if he's hurt I'm goin' to have a hand on the rope that lifts the men that did it if I have to go to Rouen to put it there. After that I'll answer for my fault, not before."

He threw himself on his horse and was gone. Soon the room emptied, as the patrons of the bar returned to the search, and only Mr. Wilkerson and the landlord remained, the bar being the professional office, so to speak, of both.

At 11 o'clock Judge Briscoe dropped wearily from his horse at his own gate and said to a wan girl who came running down the walk to meet him: "There is nothing yet. I sent the telegram to your mother—to Mrs. Sherwood."

Helen turned away without answering. Her face was very white and looked pinched about the mouth. She went back to where old Fisbee sat on the porch, his white head held between his two hands. He was rocking himself to and fro. She touched him gently, but he did not look up. She spoke to him. "Father," she said.

He did not seem to hear her.

"There isn't anything yet. He sent the telegram. I shall stay with you now, no matter what you say." She sat beside him and put her head down on his shoulder, and, though for a moment he appeared not to notice it, when Minnie came out on the porch, hearing her father at the door, the old man had put his arm about the girl and was stroking her fair hair softly.

Briscoe glanced at them and raised a warning finger to his daughter, and they went tiptoeing into the house, where the judge dropped heavily upon a sofa. Minnie stood before him with a look of pale inquiry, and he shook his head.

"No use to tell him, but I can't see any hope," he answered her, biting nervously at the end of a cigar. "I expect you better bring me some coffee in here. I couldn't take another step to save me. I'm too old to tear around the country horseback before breakfast, like I have today."

"Did you send her telegram?" Minnie asked as he drank the coffee she brought him. She had interpreted "coffee" liberally and, with the assistance of Mildy Upton, whose subdued nose was frankly red and who shed tears on the raspberries, had prepared an appetizing table at his elbow.

"Yes," responded the judge, "and I'm glad she sent it. I talked the other way yesterday, what little I said—it isn't any of our business—but I don't think any too much of those people somehow. She thinks she belongs with Fisbee, and I guess she's right. That young fellow must have got along with her pretty well, and I'm afraid when she gives up she'll be pretty bad over it; but I guess we all will. It's terribly sudden, somehow, though it's only what everybody half expected would come, only we thought it would come from over yonder." He nodded toward the west. "But she's got to stay here with us. Boarding at Tibbs' with that old man won't do, and she's no girl to live in two rooms. You fix it up with her—you make her stay."

"She must," answered his daughter as she knelt beside him and patted his coat and handed him several things to eat at the same time. "Mr. Fisbee will help me persuade her, now that she's bound to stay in spite of him and the Sherwoods too. I've always thought she was grand, ever since she took me under her protection at school, when I"— Minnie was speaking sadly, mechanically, but suddenly she broke off with a quick sob, turned to the window, then turned again to Briscoe and cried: "I don't believe it! He knew how to take care of himself too well. He'd have got away from them."

"Father," she said.

Her father shook his head. "Then why hasn't he turned up? He'd have gone home after the storm if something bad wasn't the matter."

"But nothing—nothing that bad could have happened. They haven't found—any—anything."

"But why hasn't he come back, child?"

"Well, he's lying hurt somewhere, that's all."

"Then why haven't they found him?"

"I don't care," she cried and choked with the words and tossed her disheveled hair from her temples, "it isn't true! Helen won't believe it. Why should I? It's only a few hours since he was right here in our yard talking to us all. I won't believe it till they've searched every stick and stone of Six Crossroads and found him."

"It wasn't the Crossroads," said the old gentleman, pushing the table away and relaxing his limbs on the sofa. "They probably didn't have anything to do with it. We thought they had at first, but everybody's about come to believe it was those two fellows that he had arrested yesterday."

"It wasn't the Crossroads!" echoed Minnie, and she began to tremble violently. "Haven't they been out there yet?"

"What use? They are out of it, and they can thank God they are."

"They are not!" she cried, very much agitated. "They did it. It was the White Caps. We saw them, Helen and I."

The judge got upon his feet with an oath. He had not sworn for years until that morning. "What's this?" he said sharply.

"I ought to have told you before, but we were so frightened, and—and you went off in such a rush after Mr. Wiley was here. I never dreamed everybody wouldn't know it was the Crossroads; that they would think of any one else. And I looked for the scarecrow as soon as it was light, and it was away off from where we saw them and wasn't blown down at all; and Helen saw them in the field besides; saw all of them"—

He interrupted her. "What do you mean? Try to tell me about it quietly, child." He laid his hand on her shoulder.

She told him breathlessly what she and Helen had seen, and he grew more and more visibly perturbed and uneasy, biting his cigar to pieces and groaning at intervals. When she had finished he took a few quick turns about the room, with his hands thrust deep in his coat pockets, and then, charging her to repeat the story to no one, left the house and, forgetting his fatigue, rapidly crossed the fields to the point where the bizarre figures of the night had shown themselves to the two girls at the window.

The soft ground had been trampled by many feet. The boot prints pointed to the northeast. He traced them backward to the southwest through the field and saw where they had come from near the road, going northeast; then, returning, he climbed the fence and followed them northward through the next field. From there the next field to the north, lying beyond the road that was a continuation of Main street, stretched to the railroad embankment. The track, ruggedly defined in trampled loam and muddy furrow, bent in a direction which indicated that its terminus might be the switch where the empty cars had stood last night waiting for the 1 o'clock freight. Though the fields had been trampled in many places by the searching parties, he felt sure of the direction taken by the Crossroads men, and he perceived that the searchers had mistaken the tracks he followed for those of earlier parties in the hunt. On the embankment he saw a number of men walking west and examining the ground on each side and a long line of people following them out from town. He stopped. He held the fate of Six Crossroads in his hand, and he knew it.

The men on the embankment were walking slowly, bending far over, their eyes fixed on the ground. Suddenly one of them stood erect and tossed his arms in the air and shouted loudly. Other men ran to him, and another far down the track repeated the shout and the gesture to another far in his rear. This man took it up and shouted and waved to a fourth man, and so they passed the signal back to town. There came almost immediately three long, loud whistles from a mill near the station, and the embankment grew black with people pouring out from town, while the searchers came running from the fields and woods and underbrush on both sides of the railway.

Briscoe began to walk on toward the embankment.

The track lay level and straight, not dimming in the middle distances, the rails converging to points both northwest and southeast in the clean washed air like examples of perspective in a child's drawing book. About seventy miles to the west and north lay Rouen. In the same direction, nearly six miles from where the signal was given, the track was crossed by a road leading directly south to Six Crossroads.

The embankment had been newly ballasted with sand. What had been discovered was a broad brown stain in the sand on the south slope near the top. There were smaller stains above and below, none beyond it to left or right, and there were many deep footprints in the sand. Men were examining the place excitedly, talking and gesticulating. It was Lige Willetts who had found it. His horse was tethered to a fence near by at the end of a lane through a cornfield. Jared Wiley, the deputy sheriff, was talking to a group near the stain, explaining.

"You see, them two must have knowed about the 1 o'clock freight and that it was to stop here to take on the empty lumber cars. I don't know how they knowed it, but they did. It was this way: When they got out the window they beat through the storm straight for this side track. At the same time Mr. Harkless leaves Briscoe's, goin' west. It begins to rain. He cuts across to the railroad to have a sure footin' and strikin' for the deepo for shelter—near place as any, except Briscoe's, where he's said good night already, and prob'ly don't wish to go back, fear of givin' trouble or keepin' 'em up. Anybody can understand that. He comes along and gets to where we are precisely at the time they do, them comin' from town, him strikin' for it. They run right into each other. That's what happened. They re-cog-nized him and raised up on him and let him have it. What they done it with I don't know. We took everything in that line off of 'em. Prob'ly used railroad iron, and what they done with him afterward we don't know, but we will by night. They'll sweat it out of 'em up at Rouen when they get 'em."

"I reckon maybe some of us might help," remarked Mr. Watts reflectively.

Jim Bardlock swore a violent oath. "That's the talk!" he shouted. "Ef I ain't the first man of this crowd to set my foot in Roowun and first to beat in that jail door I'm not town murshal of Plattville, county of Carlow, state of Indiana, and the Lord have mercy on our souls!"

Tom Martin looked at the brown stain and quickly turned away. Then he went back slowly to the village. On the way he passed Warren Smith.

"Is it so?" asked the lawyer.

Martin answered with a dry throat. He looked out over the sunlit fields and swallowed once or twice. "Yes, it's so. There's a good deal of it there. Little more than a boy he was." The old fellow passed his seamy hand over his eyes without concealment. "Peter ain't very bright sometimes, it seems to me," he added brokenly; "overlook Bodeffer and Fisbee and me and all of us old husks, and—and"—he gulped suddenly, then finished—"and act the fool and take a boy that's the best we had. I wish the Almighty would take Peter off the gate. He ain't fit fer it."

When the attorney reached the spot where the crowd was thickest, way was made for him. The old colored man, Xenophon, approached at the same time, leaning on a hickory stick and bent very far over, one hand resting on his hip as if to ease a rusty joint. The negro's age was an incentive to fable. From his appearance he might have known the prophets, and he wore that hoary look of unearthly wisdom which many decades of superstitious experience sometimes give to members of his race. His face, so tortured with wrinkles that it might have been made of innumerable black threads woven together, was a living mask of the mystery of his blood. Harkless had once said that Uncle Xenophon had visited heaven before Swedenborg and hell before Dante. Today as he slowly limped over the ties his eyes were bright and dry under the solemn lids, and, though his heavy nostrils were unusually distended in the effort for regular breathing, the deeply puckered lips beneath them were set firmly. He stopped and looked at the faces before him. When he spoke his voice was gentle, and, though the tremulousness of age harped on the vocal strings, it was rigidly controlled. "Kin some kine gelmun," he asked, "please t' be so good ez t' show de ole main whuh de W'ite Caips is done shoot Marse Hawkliss?"

"Here was where it happened, Uncle Zen," answered Wiley, leading him forward. "Here is the stain."

Xenophon bent over the spot on the sand, making little odd noises in his throat. Then he painfully resumed his former position. "Dass his blood," he said in the same gentle, quavering tone. "Dass my bes' frien' whut lay on de groun' whay yo' staind, gelmun. Dass whuh dey laid 'im, un' dass whuh he lie," the old negro continued. "Dey shot 'im in de fiel's. Dey ain't shot 'im heah. Yondeh dey druggen 'im, but dis whuh he lie." He bent over again, then knelt groaningly and placed his hand on the stain, one would have said, as a man might place his hand over a heart to see if it still beat. He was motionless, with the air of hearkening.

"Marse, honey, is you gone?" He raised his voice as if calling. "Is yo' gone, suh—marse?"

He looked up at the circle about him, and then, still kneeling, not taking his hand from the sand, seeming to wait for a sign to listen for a voice, he said: "Whafo' yo' gelmun think de good Lawd summon Marse Hawkliss? Kase he de mos' fittes'? You know, dat man be ketch me in de cole night, wintuh 'fo' lais', stealin' 'is wood. You know whut he done t' de ole thief? Tek an' buil' up big fah en ole Zen' shainty. Say: 'He'p yo'se'f, an' welcome. Reckon you hongry, too, ain' you, Xenophon?' Tek an' feed me, tek an' tek keer o' me ev' since. Ah pump de baith full in de mawn', mek 'is bed, pull de weeds out'n de front walk; dass all. He tek me in. When Ah aisk 'im ain' he 'fraid keep ole thief he say, jesso: 'Dass all my fault, Xenophon; ought look you up long 'go; ought know long 'go you be cole dese hahd nights. Reckon Ah'm de thievenest one 'us two, Xenophon, keep'n' all dis wuod stock' up when you got none,' he say, jesso. Tek me in; say he taik a thief; pay me sala'y; feed me. 'Dass de main whut de Caps gone shot lais' night." He raised his head sharply, and the mystery in his gloomy eyes intensified as they opened wide and stared at the sky unseeingly.

"Ah's bawn wid a cawl!" he exclaimed loudly. His twisted frame was braced to an extreme tension. "Ah's bawn wid a cawl! De blood answuh!"

"It wasn't the White Caps, Uncle Xenophon," said Warren Smith, laying his hand on the old man's shoulder.

Xenophon rose to his feet. He stretched a long, bony arm straight to the west, where the Crossroads lay; stood rigid and silent, like a seer; then spoke:

"De men whut done Marse Hawkliss lies yondeh, hidin' f'um de light o' day. An' him"—he swerved his whole rigid body till the arm pointed northwest—"he lies yondeh. You won' fine 'im heah. Dey fought 'im in de fiel's, an' dey druggen 'im heah. Dis whuh dey lay 'im down. Ah's bawn wid a cawl!"

There were exclamations from the listeners, for Xenophon spoke as one having authority. Suddenly he turned and pointed his outstretched hand full at Judge Briscoe.

"An' dass de main," he cried; "dass de main kin tell yo' Ah speak de trufe!"

Before Briscoe answered, Eph Watts looked at him keenly and then turned to Lige Willetts and whispered: "Get on your horse, ride in and ring the courthouse bell like fury. Do as I say."

"A new gubernatorial candidate is about to be heard from. His photo already occupies a conspicuous place on the walls in every court house in the state, and in many other public places," says the Detroit Standard. The Standard doesn't offer a prize for a solution of the puzzle propounded. Wonder who it can be.

These girls will have to be careful. A Niagara Falls maiden hugged a young man so hard that she broke one of his ribs and now he is suing for $10,000. Girls should remember that the tender young things of the opposite sex are not armor plated and do not rank in their class when it comes to a close engagement.—Ex.

Frank L. Packard has resigned his position as editor-in-chief of the Crookston Journal, and has been succeeded by Fred T. Lincoln, late of the Times. Mr. Packard brought the Journal to its present excellent status by the hardest kind of work, and the people of the Valley will hope that Mr. Lincoln will keep it there.

Minnesota populists are not going to hold any state convention for selecting delegates to their national convention at Jacksonville. They do not consider it worth while. The state committee has directed the three national committeemen, Z. H. Austin, of Minneapolis, Thomas J. Meighen, of Forestville and N. T. Moen, of Ada, to prepare a list of twenty four delegates, and submit them for approval to such counties as hold conventions. This will save holding a forlorn little remnant of a state gathering. As to whether an independant state ticket will be put in the field, the committee will determine tater.

The Norman County Index makes the formal announcement of the candidacy of E. J. Herringer, county auditor of Norman county, for the office of railroad and warehouse commissioner. The Index says: "it is with pleasure that the Index is able this week to announce the candidacy of Mr. E. J. Herringer, our present county auditor and fellow townsman, for the offiice of railroad and warehouse commissioner. Mr. Herringer's candidacy is announced after a careful canvass of his home district, the Ninth, and with the positive assurance of the support of his many friends throughout the state. He comes before the people free from all entanglements. Is tied to no railroad company and free from political promises of all kinds. A man of integrity, honesty and marked ability. Fearless in his dealings and one with strong ideas of right and wrong. Having been a county officer for several years his candidacy is meeting wirh encouragement from the boys all along the line and if successful in landing the plum the Red River Valley and the state of Minnesota will have a strong exponent of the public's interests as a member of the commission."

State Senator H. J. Miller, editor of the Rock County Herald, has announced himself as a candidate for congress to represent the second district, and it is easy to see where there will be "something doing" in that part of the state before the votes are counted. Congressman McCleary has had the job so long that it is second nature for him to go after it, and it is a sure thing that he wont let go until he has to, while Bro. Miller has been a resident of that district for over a quarter of a century, and is personally acquainted with a greater portion of people, so that when he goes after the office in earnest it can easily be imagined that he will have excellent backing. Congressman McCleary is an able man, but he has been there so long that in order to break the dull monotony of the case it would be well to name a successor and where there is timber of the known ability of Senator Miller there need be no apprehension that the representation of the district will suffer.

SENATOR NELSON'S RECORD.

Some time ago the Herald expressed the belief that the record of Senator Nelson during his first term in the United States senate, measured by accomplished results, has never been surpassed in point of practical usefulness by that of any other senator in the entire history of the nation. Substantial basis for this belief was given in summary published at that time of the important measures passed by his efforts, says the Luverne Herald.

But even this splendid record has been surpassed by Senator Nelson during the first half of his present term. During the last session alone, aside from the vast amount of work which can not be specified, he secured the passage of seven important bills for the benefit of Alaska, besides several measures of particular benefit to Minnesota and the west, including the opening for settlement of the famous Red Lake Reservation, the granting of 20,000 acres to Minnesota for forestay purposes, an act validating certain entries for the benefit of actual settlers and the adoption of an amendment to the river and harbor bill providing that the dredge work on the great lakes shall be done under contract by the lowest experienced bidder.

Senator Nelson spends no time in making a show of what he is doing. Unlike the member of congress from this district who accomplishes nothing and devotes his whole time to the work of writing personal letters to his constituents for the purpose of making them think that he is serving their interests, Senator Nelson works and does things. He is a power in the National legislature and by the force of his great ability and the earnestness and efficiency of zealious and persistent work, he has come to be recognized as one of the most useful and most influential men in the United States senate.

Now that E. J. Herringer, of Ada, has announced himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination of railroad and warehouse commissioner, the Republicans of the Ninth district should have no trouble in uniting on a candidate. Mr. Herringer represents the exact type of man that Minnesota Republicans want, and never for an instant should they think of running another in his stead. Fearless, aggressive and of known ability, it can easily be seen where he is the ideal candidate, and his years of service as auditor of Norman county have given him the opportunity to see and realize what the state needs on its railroad and warehouse commission. Red Lake will stand with Norman for Herringer, first and last, and every other county in the Valley could do no better than follow suit.

John Wolstencroft, editor of the Jackson County Times, at Heron Lake, is being groomed for the race for nomination to a place on the state railroad and warehouse commission and if he should decide to get into the game would make a formidable candidate. If the people of Minnesota only knew Jack as he really is, he would receive their unanimous support, as there never was a better friend of the people at large, nor one who would fight harder for their interests. In a recent discus. over a loading platform at his home town, Jack has come out with flying colors on top of the elevator trust, and has made a great many friends among the people of that district for his straightforward stand. With Woolstencroft from the Second and Herringer from the Ninth, Minnesota could bank on having at least two members of her railroad and warehouse commission who would not crawl before the trusts and corporations, and who would see that the people got justice in every case.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

In the next Congress the Senate will almost certainly be Republican. So large is the present party majority that nothing short of an upheaval of the widest character could endanger it says. the Chicago Record Herald.

In the lower house, however, conditions are less stable, the present Republican majority being but 34 in a membership of 386. Democratic leaders are in consequence expressing their hopes of capturing the House, and some of them who are exceptionally optimistic are said to hope for victory here even if the presidential election goes against them.

However, if precedent counts for anything in our federal elections, these optimists are deceiving themselves. Should a Democratic President be electcd a Democratic House could confidently be expected. But short of that contingency precedent gives no prospect of it at all.

Since the Republican party gained power under President Lincoln there have been twenty-two congresses, and the majority in the lower house has changed six times from one party to the other. Never yet have the "outs" gained the lower house in a presidential year without at the same time gaining the presidency, and only once has a President been elected by a party that did not at the same time elect the majority of the representatives. This one exception is really no exception at all, for it occured at the time of the Hayes-Tilden election. Hayes, after securing all the electors he claimed, had a majority of only one vote in the electoral college, while the Democratic majority in Congress was but nine.

Of the six changes in the complexion of Congress four have occurred in off years and two at presidential elections. The lower house became Democratic in the last half of Grant's second term. It became Republican with Garfield and changed to Democratic two years later. It became Republican with Harrison and changed to Democratic in the middle of his term. Finally it became Republican in the middle of Cleveland's second term and has remained Republican ever since.

The indications from the "off year" 1902 are no more helpful to Democratic prospects than is the longer glance backward. In the Fifty seventh Congress the Republican majority over all was 37. This has been reduced in the present Congress to 34, but that is too trifling to be of importance as an indication either way.

K. P's. Plan Entertainment.

HELPED BY RAIN.

Crop Bulletins Show Bright Prospects for the Valley.

Much has been said lately concerning the poor outlook for grain in the Red river valley but little of this is shown in the report of the Red River Farm Journal, which follows:

Wheat fields through the valley were brightened 50 per cent this week by the gentle showers which swept the entire Minnesota side of the valley and a great deal of the North Dakota soil as far north as Winnipeg. The showers were of an exceedingly warm and invigorating nature and the effect upon the standing crop and sprouted seeds below the surface of the ground was almost magical. Fields of wheat brightened with the fall of warm moisture and the growth was phenomenal.

The rains, however, were of such a gentle character and came in such small showers that seeding operations were resumed without delay. Friday by the farmers of the valley and barring the benefit which their fields experienced, there were no indications of rain.

Between Crookston and Red Lake Falls the growing grain is exceedingly thrifty and the crop of vegetables and small garden truck in that direction will be large, as also will be the hay crop if present favorable conditions continue. A large amount of tame hay, millet and timothy has been put in this spring by the farmers and the total crop of dried grasses, according to present prospects, will be larger than for some years. The meadows in the marshy districts have dried sufficiently for rapid growth and men and teams will be able, unless heavy rains set in during haying, to get upon the marshes and cut the commodity.

NEED NOT HAVE RIGHTS.

Homesteaders Who Have Proved up May Take Reservation Lands.

Homesteaders who are not at present exercising their homestead rights are not barred from taking lands at the opening of the Red Lake reservation according to section 3 of the proclamation of the secretary of the interior.

It is not the intention of the government to bar anyone from getting a piece of the reservation land, but as it is to be sold under the homestead laws to prevent speculators from buying it up, a settler must reside on the land, which he could not do if holding land under the homestead laws somewhere else. If he has proved up that is done away.

Several papers have erroneously stated that a person must have reserved his homestead rights in order to file on the reservation lands, thus confusing many who wished to homestead some of it.

Farmers throughout the country are hoping and praying that the heavens above will open and cast down upon the growing grain a little water. The band, also, loses a valued member, and Red Lake Falls is unfortunate indeed to lose such timber as he is. But what we lose East Grand Forks gains, and the Gazette can heartily commend him to the graces of the people of that town, and trusts that he may meet with success galore in his new field.

The details of the ball game on the home grounds last Sunday, between the teams of Thief River Falls and this city are too horrible to tell about. With one or two exceptions the Red Lake Falls team played decidedly "punk" and lost the game on the rankest kind of errors. The score was 6 to 7 in favor of Thief River Falls, but had the home boys played their usual game would have resulted differently. 'Nuff said.

Mrs. Paul Benjaminson, wife of a prominent farmer of Emardville township, died at her home there Tuesday, after an illness covering a period of several months. Mr. Benjaminson had been absent in Canada, but was called home a couple of weeks ago when his wife's illness took a sudden turn for the worse, and was at her bedside when she died. The funeral will be held from the Emardville church tomorrow at one o'clock. The family will have the sympathy of the community.

Joe Smith, the Crookston insurance man, called here Tuesday, and remained until the following day.

Hon. Marcus Johnson came up from St. Paul Tuesday, and has spent the week looking over his interests here.

Sam E. Hunt has been on the retired list since last Friday with a severe case of the grippe, but is able to be out again at present.

Miss Dora Marchand closed her school out east last Friday, and Monday of this week entered upon her duties as book-keeper at the Big Store.

Mrs. Wm. Murphy and son came down from Thief River Falls Sunday and spent the first few days of the week with Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kaufer.

Master Sylvester and Miss Rose Helm went to Thief River Falls yesterday, for a few days' visit with friends.

The teachers of the various grades in the city schools will leave Saturday for their respective homes, to spend their season of rest among relatives and acquaintances.

Ed. A. Aubni, Lars G. Netteland and P. O. Haglund were callers here Monday consulting their attorneys in regard to the appeal to the Supreme Court of the famous ditch No. 21 case.

The members of the Knights of Pythias are requested to meet at the Presbyterian church parlors Sunday evening at 7:45, to attend the Memorial service at the church that evening in a body.

At the meeting of the school board last Saturday evening, four more teachers were elected for the fall and winter term, which completes the corps of instructors for next year's work. The ones elected were: Miss Henrietta Hennemuth, primary; Miss Pauline Neiland, 2nd and 3rd grades; Miss Allee Coughlan, of St. Cloud, 5th and 6th grades; Miss Eliza Trudo, of Detroit, 7th and 8th grades.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes:—For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times, I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Maun, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recomend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to enquiries regarding my case. A. L. Reichert.

Tears stood in the judge's eyes. "It is so," he said solemnly. "He speaks the truth. I didn't mean to tell it today, but somehow"— He paused. "The hounds!" he cried. "They deserve it. My daughter saw them crossing the fields in the night—saw them climb the fence, a big crowd of them. She and the lady who is visiting us saw them—saw them plainly. The lady saw them several times clear as day by the flashes of lightning. The scoundrels were coming this way. They must have been dragging him with them then. He couldn't have had a show for his life among them. Do what you like. Maybe they've got him at the Crossroads. If there's a chance of it, dead or alive, bring him back!"

A voice rang out above the clamor that followed the judge's speech.

"'Bring him back!' God could, maybe, but he won't. Who's travelin' my way? I go west!" Hartley Bowlder had ridden his sorrel right up the embankment, and the horse stood between the rails.

There was an angry roar from the crowd. The prosecutor pleaded and threatened unheeded, and, as for the deputy sheriff, he declared his intention of taking with him all who wished to go as his posse. Eph Watts succeeded in making himself heard above the tumult.

"The square!" he shouted. "Start from the square. We want everybody. We'll need them. And we want every one in Corlow to be implicated in this posse."

"They will be!" shouted a farmer. "Don't you worry about that."

"We want to get into some sort of shape!" cried Eph.

"Shape!" repeated Hartley Bowlder scornfully.

There was a hiss and clang and rattle behind him, and a steam whistle shrieked. The crowd divided, and Hartley's sorrel scrambled down just in time as the westbound accommodation rushed by on its way to Rouen. From the rear platform leaned the sheriff, Horner, waving his hands frantically as he flew by, but no one understood or cared what he said or in the general excitement even wondered why he was going away. When the train had dwindled to a dot and disappeared and the noise of its rush grew faint the courthouse bell was heard ringing, and the mob was rushing pellmell into the village to form on the square. The judge stood alone on the embankment.

"That settles it," he said aloud, gloomily watching the last figures. He took off his hat and pushed back the thick white hair from his forehead. "Nothing to do but wait. Might as well go home for that. Blast it!" he exclaimed impatiently. "I don't want to go there. It's too hard on the little girl. If she hadn't come till next week she'd never have known John Harkless."

CHAPTER IX.

ALL morning horsemen had been galloping through Six Crossroads, sometimes singly, oftener in company. At 1 o'clock the last posse passed through on its return to the county seat, and after that there was a long, complete silence, while the miry corners were undisturbed by a single hoof beat. No unkempt colt nickered from his musty stall. The sparse young corn that used to nod and chuckle greenly stood rigid in the fields. Up the Plattville pike despairingly cackled one old hen, with her wabbling, sailor run, smit with a superstitious horror of nothing. She hid herself in the shadow underneath a rickety barn and was still.

Only on the Wimby farm were there signs of life. The old lady who had sent Harkless' roses sat by the window all morning and wiped her eyes, watching the horsemen ride by. Sometimes they would hail her and tell her there was nothing yet. About 2 o'clock her husband rattled up in a buckboard and got out the shotgun of the late and more authentic Mr. Wimby. This he carefully cleaned and oiled in spite of its hammerless and quite useless condition, sitting meanwhile by the window opposite his wife and often looking up from his work to shake his weak fist at his neighbors' domiciles and croak decrepit curses and denunciations.

But the Crossroads was ready. It knew what was coming now. Frightened, desperate, sullen, it was ready.

The afternoon wore on, and lengthening shadows fell upon a peaceful—one would have said a sleeping—country. The sun dried pike, already dusty, stretched its serene length between green borders flecked with purple and yellow and white weed flowers, and the tree shadows were not shade, but warm blue and lavender glows in the general pervasion of still, bright light; the sky curving its deep, unburnished, penetrable blue over all, with no single drift of fleece upon it to be reflected in the creek that wound along past willow and sycamore, dimpled but unmurmuring. A woodpecker's telegraphy broke the quiet like a volley of pistol shots.

But far eastward on the pike there slowly developed a soft white haze. It grew denser and larger and gradually rolled nearer. Dimly behind it could be discerned a darker, moving nucleus that extended far back upon the road.

A heavy tremor began to stir the air: faint, manifold sounds, a waxing, increasing, multitudinous rumor.

The pike ascended a long, slight slope leading west up to the Crossroads. From a thicket of ironweed at the foot of this slope was thrust the visage of an undersized girl of fourteen. Her fierce eyes examined the approaching cloud of dust intently. A redness rose under the burnt yellow skin and colored the wizened cheeks.

They were coming.

She stepped quickly out of the tangle and darted up the road. She ran with the speed of a fleet little terrier, not opening her lips, not calling out, but holding her two thin hands high above her head: that was all. But Birnam wood was come to Dunsinane at last, and the messenger sped. Out of the weeds in the corner of the snake fence, in the upper part of the rise, silently lifted the heads of men whose sallowness became a sickish white as the child flew by.

The mob was carefully organized. They had taken their time and had prepared everything deliberately, knowing that nothing could stop them. No one had any thought of concealment; it was all as open as the light of day, all done in the broad sunshine. Nothing had been determined as to what was to be done at the Crossroads more definite than that the place was to be wiped out. That was comprehensive enough; the details were quite certain to occur. They were all on foot, marching in fairly regular ranks. In front walked Mr. Watts, the man Harkless had abhorred in a public spirit and befriended in private. Today he was a hero and a leader, marching to avenge his professional oppressor and personal brother. Cool, unruffled and to outward vision unarmed, marching the miles in his brown frock coat and generous linen, he led the way. On one side of him were the two Bowlders, on the other was Lige Willetts, Mr. Watts preserving peace between the young men with perfect tact and sang froid.

They kept good order and a similitude of quiet for so many except for to the rear, where old Wilkerson was bringing up the tail of the procession, dragging a wretched yellow dog by a rope fastened around the poor cur's protesting neck, the knot carefully arranged under his right ear. In spite of every command and protest Wilkerson had marched the whole way uproariously singing "John Brown's Body."

The sun was in the west when they came in sight of the Crossroads, and the cabins on the low slope stood out angularly against the radiance beyond. As they beheld the hated settlement the heretofore orderly ranks showed a disposition to desert from the steady advance and rush the shanties. Willetts, the Bowlders, Parker, Ross Schofield and a dozen others did, in fact, break away and set a sharp pace up the slope.

Watts tried to call them back. "What's the use your gettin' killed?" he shouted.

"Why not?" answered Lige, and, like the others, was increasing his speed when old "Wimby" rose up suddenly from the roadside ahead of them and motioned them frantically to go back. "They're laid out along the fence waitin' fer ye," he warned them. "Git out the road. Come by the fields. Fer the Lord's sake, spread!" Then as suddenly as he had appeared he dropped down into the weeds again. Lige and those with him paused, and the whole body came to a halt while the leaders consulted. There was a sound of metallic clicking and a thin rattle of steel. From far to the rear came the voice of old Wilkerson:

"John Brown's body lies a-moldering in
the ground,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in
the ground."

A few near him as they stood waiting began to take up the burden of the song, singing it in slow time like a dirge. Then those farther away took it up. It spread, reached the leaders. They, too, began to sing, taking off their hats as they joined in, and soon the whole concourse, solemn, earnest, uncovered, was singing—a thunderous requiem for John Harkless.

The sun was swinging lower, and the edges of the world were embroidered with gold, while that deep volume of sound shook the air, the song of a stern, savage, just cause—sung perhaps as some of the ancestors of these men sang with Hampden before the bristling walls of a hostile city. It had iron and steel in it. The men lying on their guns in the ambuscade along the fence heard the dirge rise and grow to its mighty fullness, and they shivered. One of them, posted nearest the advance, had his rifle carefully leveled at Lige Willetts, a fair target in the road. When he heard the singing he turned to the man next behind him and laughed harshly, "I reckon we'll see a big jamboree other side Jordan tonight, huh?"

The huge murmur of the chorus expanded and gathered in rhythmic strength and swelled to power and rolled and thundered across the plain.

"John Brown's body lies a-moldering in
the ground,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in
the ground,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in
the ground,
His soul goes marching on!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!

LIVER TROUBLES

"I find Thedford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Thedford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims as many victims as consumption. A 25-cent package of Thedford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

"I used Thedford's Black-Draught for liver and kidney complaints and found nothing to excel it."—WILLIAM COFFMAN, Marblehead, Ill.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

Attention Farmers.

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months?

Go south where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser, you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter.

Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh-forming and fat-forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world.

More money can be made and with less labor in general farming, fruit and berry growing and truck gardening along our road in the South than in any other section of the Union.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets Better Than a Doctor's Prescriptions.

Mr. J. W. Turner, of Trubart, Va., says that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done him more good than anything he could get from the doctor. If any physician in this country was able to compound a medicine that would produce such gratifying results in cases of stomach trouble, biliousness or constipation, his whole time would be used in preparing this one medicine. CURES CATARRH

"Hyomei the Most Wonderful Cure for Catarrh Ever Discovered," says A. L. Reichert.

Do not try to cure catarrh by taking drugs into the stomach; it cannot be cured in that manner. The only way in which this too common disease can be cured is through a direct application that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.

Hyomei is the only known method of treatment that accomplishes this. It is the simplest, most pleasant, and the only absolute cure for catarrh that has ever been discovered.

Thousands of unsolicited testimonials have been received from the most prominent men and women in the country who have been cured by this remarkable remedy. Ministers, bankers, lawyers, even eminent physicians have given strong testimonials as to the remarkable powers of Hyomei to cure catarrh.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, consisting of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect a cure in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c. It is not alone the best (it might be called the only) method of curing catarrh, but it is also the most economical.

A. L. Reichert has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh, that he will for a limited time, sell this medicine under his personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchasers can say that it did not help them.

Guests of the fashionable Berkeley hotel at Minneapolis were routed out by fire one day last week. A. H. Sherman, an invalid, was rescued with some difficulty and it is feared the shock and exposure may result seriously.

Mrs. G. Gesce, living south of Le Sueur Center, was accidentally shot by the hired man on the place, who was shooting at a cat. The charge from the gun went through a building and lodged in her hip. She is in a critical condition.

Lighting a fire with kerosene is not an unnecessary exposure to obvious risk of injury or obvious danger, provided the person has good reason to believe that there is no fire in the stove, according to a decision of the state supreme court.

An interurban car bound from Minneapolis for St. Paul was struck by a train at a railroad crossing. The car was hurled completely from the tracks and turned over. Andrew Jackson of Roscoe, S. D., was killed and several other passengers were injured.

Miss Eloise Rausse of St. Paul, who became insane at Chicago while undergoing the ordeal of the so called "sunworshipping fast," is dead in the state hospital for the insane at Elgin, Ill. Dr. Frank S. Whitman, superintendent of the hospital, says that death was due to acute mania, induced by starving.

H. D. Howell is dead at Aitkin as a result of a quarrel with L. W. Daniels, who, it is charged, struck him a blow behind the ear, felling him, to the ground, where his head came in contact with the pavement and resulted in injuries to which his death was ascribed. The quarrel was a continuation of a dispute between the children of the two men.

Dull times on the Mesaba iron range, due to the lake strike, seem likely to cause a movement of population into the homestead section of St. Louis county. The latest development is the plan of certain Finns of Eveleth to form a co-operative society to take up land in the Pelican lake region. Their plan is to get a tract of land where sixteen quarter sections can be homesteaded.

The Iowa and Minnesota Cereal company of Mason City, Ia., has concluded the purchase of a line of twenty-two elevators in Southern Minnesota and Northern Iowa, making it one of the largest grain companies in its territory. After floating about the bay at Duluth for two weeks the body of Axel Leonard, a bartender, was fished out of a slip Thursday night. Leonard was discharged from his brother's employ on account of drink and shortly afterward began buying and selling notes and mortgages. Approximately $900 in gilt edge notes were found in his pockets. Death is believed to have been accidental.

The case of Russell Sage, assignee for the Hastings and Dakota Railroad company vs. Theodore A. Maxwell has been docketed in the supreme court of the United States. The case grows out of a dispute over title to the land within the indemnity limits of the Hastings and Dakota railway in Minnesota, of which it is claimed that there should originally have been 922,182 acres. Maxwell claimed under a homestead entry and his contention was sustained by the Minnesota state supreme court. This is a test case.

MAY SLAY THEIR CAPTIVES.

Moroccan Bandits Threaten Lives of American and His Companion.

Washington, May 31.—Mr. Gummere, the United States consul at Tangier, in a cablegram received at the state department, says that threats against the lives of Raisuli's captives, Perdicaris and Varley, have been made unless the bandits' demands are granted.

A dispatch from Admiral Jewell, commanding the European squadron, announces the departure for Tangier of the cruisers Olympia, Baltimore and Cleveland.

The cruiser Brooklyn, with Admiral Chadwick on board, has arrived at Tangier.

GORMAN IS FAVORED

BUT MARYLAND DEMOCRATS DO NOT INSTRUCT DELEGATES AT HIS REQUEST.

Baltimore, May 27.—The Democratic state convention of Maryland Thursday adopted a platform and elected delegates to the national convention. United States Senator Gorman was greeted with applause at every turn. The platform adopted admittedly embodies Mr. Gorman's opinion of what the national platform should be, he being a member of the resolutions committee. It is confined to national issues and endorses the line of action followed by the Democratic steering committee during the past session of congress. It calls for moderate tariff revision, independence for the Filipinos, economy in expenditures and full investigation of alleged crookedness in the postoffice and other government departments, and adversely criticises the present administration.

While the delegation to St. Louis was not instructed, except to vote as a unit, it is admitted that this course was followed at the request of Senator Gorman, the convention being plainly in the humor to instruct for him.

TYNER IS ACQUITTED.

Verdict of Not Guilty in Postal Conspiracy Case.

Washington, May 25.—Within twenty-two minutes of the retirement of the jury in the case of James N. Tyner and Harrison J. Barrett, tried on the charge of conspiracy in connection with their duties as law officers of the postoffice department, a verdict of not guilty was returned.

The throng which filled the courtroom throughout the arguments to the jury hardly had time to leave the building before the jury was back and the foreman announced that a verdict had been reached. General Tyner, expecting a longer wait, had been wheeled from the room and his nephew and codefendant hastened to give him the notice which caused him to return. General Tyner was wheeled in and faced the jury and when the verdict was returned he broke down completely. Several of the jurors wept with him and all of them shook hands with him.

Field Meet at the Washington School.

Last Friday afternoon the field meet at the Washington school took place. The contestants were boys of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of that school and were divided into teams as follows. The team known as the "Whites" consisted of Walter Garceau, Thomas Payment, Alphonse Guerin, Thomas Majeres, Rudolph Olsen, Carl Buse and Preston Hall, while the "Blues," the opposing team, consisted of John Rodgers, Robert Zaiser, Fred Schmitz, Marcus Marshall, Wilcia Proper, George Tandberg and Theo. Tandberg. The remainder of the school was divided into opposing sides for the purpose of effective rooting. Yells were practiced, colors and banners obtained, and when the time arrived excitement was high. The entire school was dismissed soon after roll call and the teams prepared themselves for the meet.

The following was the order of events, with the places they carried:

1—Shot Put—Robert Zaiser, 25 ft; Preston Hall, 24 ft; John Rodgers, 22 ft. 11 in.

2—Standing High Jump—Carl Buse, 2 ft. 8 in; Marcus Marshall, 2 ft. 7 in; Preston Hall, 2 ft. 7 in.

3—Running High Jump—Alphonse Guerin, 3 ft. 7 in; Robert Zaiser, 3 ft. 6 in; Theodore Tandberg, 3 ft. 5 in.

4—Standing Broad Jump—Robbert Zaiser, 6 ft. 8½ in; Preston Hall, 6 ft. 8 in; John Rodgers, 6 ft. 8 in.

5—Running Broad Jump—Alphonse Guerin, 14 ft; John Rodgers, 13 ft. 1 in; Marcus Marshall, 12 ft. 6 in.

6—Fifty Yard Hurdle Race—Marcus Marshall, 8 sec; Carl Buse, 8¼ sec; John Rodgers, 8½ sec.

7—Standing Hop-Step-and-Jump—John Rodgers, 19 ft. 2 in; Carl Buse, 18 ft. 8 in; Preston Hall, 18 ft. 7 in.

8—Running Hop-Step-and-Jump—Alphonse Guerin, 29 ft. 1 in; John Rodgers, 28 ft. 8 in; Thomas Majeres, 27 ft. 5 in.

9—Fifty Yard Dash—John Rodgers, 7 sec; Marcus Marshall, 8¼ sec; Alphonse Guerin, 8½ sec.

10—Hundred Yard Dash—John Rodgers, 16 sec; Marcus Marshall, 17 sec; Carl Buse, 19 sec.

In the contest first place was given three points, second place two points, and third place one point. In the totals the "Whites" had 25 points and the "Blues" 35 points, giving the "Blues" the best of it by 10 points. A number of outsiders were present and a great deal of interest was shown, especially on the part of the Washington scholars, who say that the Red Lake Falls High School wont be defendin the future as it is at present along atheletic lines?—Contributed.

Notice to the Public.

It appears that during the past month some complaint has been made by subscribers to the Red Lake Falls band, that there has not been a sufficient number of open air concerts given during the present season, and several have declined to pay their contributions on account of this fact. I desire at this time to offer in explanation a few facts that the people no doubt overlook in connection with the matter. Within the band there is kept up by voluntary work an orchestra of some twelve pieces, and never has one cent been charged the public for services rendered for a public good by this organization. To keep up an orchestra of this sort requires a large amount of extra work, which has of necessity taken some of the time formerly devoted to band rehersals. In view of the fact that the orchestra is a public institution, and considering the large number of events they have gratuitously taken part in this season, it seems that complaint on the work done by the band is unjust. The band appreciates the efforts of the people to support it, but feels modestly that it has justly earned the support, and today is ready to stand in competition with any like amateur organization in Minnesota. This should be and we honestly believe is, a source of satisfaction to the residents of Red Lake Falls, and from the standpoint of loyalty to our city and her her institutions it ill becomes any one to criticize what has been done and withdraw their support at this time. The band is striving to help Red Lake Falls, but without the support in the future that has been accorded in the past, cannot succeed in keeping the organization at its present state. Consider this gentlemen, and ask yourselves if the work has not been such as to warrant a continuance of your endorsment.

L. P. BERTHON,
Mgr. of Band.

GREAT MUSICAL EVENT

Fifteen Piece Concert Orchestra Will Entertain the Public.—New Departure to Be Introduced.

Preparations for the concert by the Red Lake Falls band orchestra are rapidly coming to a state of completion and the signs would indicate that the general public has "something coming."

A concert orchestra of fifteen pieces is being drilled by Prof. Onstad, and in addition thereto will be introduced something decidedly new and novel, namely,—a mixed chorus of twenty-five voices, in grand cantata, with full orchestra accompaniment.

An undertaking of this magnitude means a great deal more than the people realize, and The Gazette hazards the statement that there is not another city of this size in Minnesota that is fortunate in having a director equal to the emergency. Prof. Onstad certainly deserves a wonderful amount of praise for the remarkable things he has accomplished in Red Lake Falls, and The Gazette fully believes that the people are and will be with him to the last minute.

The concert that will be given at the Metropolitan Friday evening of next week, will be equal if not superior to that put on by any of the large travelling organizations, and the public should accord it a record-breaking attendance. Every member of the orchestra has labored faithfully with Prof. Onstad to arrive at a state of efficiency not usually equalled, and it can easily be imagined that the only thing that can amply repay them for their efforts is a packed house next Friday night.

The following is the program:

PART ONE.

1. The German American March .... Kretschmar
2. Overture .... Schlepegrill
"The Golden Sceptre"
3. Baritone Solo .... Selected
J. B. Armstrong.
4. Patrol of the Guardsman .... Losey

PART TWO.

5, Cantata .... Gounod
"Gallia"
Synopsis: a.—Introduction chorus, "Solitary Lies the City." b.—Soprano Solo and Chorus, "Zion's Ways do Languish." c.—Soprano Solo and Chorus. "Jerusalem—O turn Thee to the Lord."

PART THREE.

6. Overture .... Boildieu
"The Calife of Bagdad"
7. Male Chorus .... Kjeburf
"Last Night"
8. Overture .... Tobani
"A Sure Thing"
9. March .... Unrath
"King Karl"

Don't forget the date—Friday evening, June 17.

Prices, 15, 25 and 35 cents.

OPEN AIR CONCERT.

LOSES HER CLAIM HOME.

Miss Catherine Costello Loses Valuable Property.

The following from the Itasca County Record will be sad news to the many Red Lake Falls friends of the young lady mentioned therein:

The sympathy of the public is with Miss Catherine Costello who recently lost her claim in 61-25 through a decision of the general land office. Miss Costello, who was formerly a teacher in Red Lake Falls schools, took the claim but it is alleged that she neglected it more than was warrantable so that when she offered proof the claim was referred to a special agent whe reported the entry for cancellation. Miss Costello, however, undaunted by the report, made an effort to have her entry hold and stayed on the land, living there almost constantly since that time, and the blow of losing the land after enduring that last year's hardships, must indeed be a hard one."

Miss Costello's claim is said to have been a very valuable one, and the contest for it was raged with persistence, with the result as above stated. Miss Costello has spent a great deal of time and money since taking up her claim there, and her loss is surely deeply regretted by her friends.

A SWELL AFFAIR.

Junior Banquet Proves to Be Very Elaborate and Delightful.

The class of '05 entertained the Seniors, alumini, teachers and orchestra at a decidedly swell banquet last Saturday evening, and those thae were fortunate enough to be presented were treated to an entertainment fit for the Kings.

The Metropolitan opera house was used as a banquet hall, and the decorations were supberb. In the center of the room the banquet table was artistically arranged, and decorated with a profusion of flowers, while around the auditorium were settees, chairs and cosy corners. The local orchestra occupied a niche in the pretty room and discoursed sweet music during the gathering of the guests.

The early part of the evening was devoted to the reception of the invited guests, and they were loyally received by the hosts. At about ten o'clock the party sat down to the banquet and partook of an elegant repast. The menu was served in courses and between each delivered a toast by chosen members of the different classes. The toast features were received with great appreciation by those present, and until a late hour the feasting and merry-making continued, and with reluctance did the party break up.

Of the many pleasant affairs of class week, the Junior banquet was easily among the most enjoyable and the elaborate entertainment offered by the Juniors to their advanced classmates will ever be a bright spot in the recollections of the happy school days.

COUNTY WINS CASE

Supreme Court Upholds Decision of the Lower Court in the Meehan Tax Case.—Grady's Good Work.

County Attorney Grady received official notice last Friday morning of thefindings of the Supreme Court in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. P. & J. Meehan, and the news contained therein was pleasing to those who have watched the fight made, and means the gain of nearly $1100 for Red Lake county.

Nearly every resident of the county is familiar with the status of the case, and will remember that in the summer of 1900 an assessor in making his rounds listed some thirteen million feet of logs in the Red Lake river belonging to Patrick and James Meehan. The Meehans denied the ownership of the logs and refused to pay the taxes, and judgment was entered against them accordingly. This judgment was appealed to the District Court and after a hard fought legal battle, Judge Watts decided that the logs were the property of the Meehan's and were assessable as such.

Not satisfied with the ruling of Judge Watts, the Meehans secured the services of Messrs. Davis, Kellogg, & Severance, of St. Paul, one of the foremost law firms of the state, and appealed the case to the Supreme Court, and the brief they presented was one of great strength and possibilities.

Undaunted by this move, County Attorney Grady jumped into the fight, and prepared his brief in the case, making a strong and forcible argument for the county's rights, and showing up the attempt at tax-dodging in its true light, and naturally he feels pleased at the decision of the higher court sustaining the lower court's ruling, and the contention of the county.

Mr. Grady is deserving of a great deal of praise for the excellent fight he made in this case, and certainly deserves the thanks of the people of Red Lake county. To go up against talent of the recognized ability of the attorneys for the Meehans required that the county's brief be be prepared with careful consideration and deep thought, and that he won his case over the "big guns" is evidence that Mr. Grady did all of this and more.

The original amount was something between eight and nine hundred dollars, but with the added penalties, etc., the county's cash box will be enriched something like the sum of $1100.

The Gazette heartily congratulates County Attorney Grady on this excellent showing, and trusts that success may continue to crown his efforts in his chosen profession.

TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL.

To the teachers of Red Lake County:

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Polk counties will convene at the high school building in the City of Red Lake Falls at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, July 5.

It is earnestly desired that all teachers and those expecting to teach will be in attendance the first day and continue throughout the term. Arrangements have been made for instruction in all the common branches and a class in the first grade subjects will be organized if desired by the students, Instructions will also be given along several special lines of school work which in itself will more than repay you for your attendance. You will bear in mind that Red Lake County will soon have a surplus of teachers and those who show a certificate of attendance at this school will certainly be given the preference in the selection of teachers for the coming year. In other words if you expect to teach—COME.

A program and full information with regard to the work will be mailed you from this office in a few days. Professors McIntyre of Crookston and Yeager of Fosston will have the conduct of the school assisted by Miss Lydia Fletcher, of this city, in model school and pedagogic work.

RUSSIANS BEATEN BACK

JAPS INFLICT SEVERE REVERSE UPON A SUPERIOR FORCE OF THE ENEMY.

TWO HUNDRED OF THE CZAR'S MEN KILLED AND TWICE AS MANY WOUNDED.

RUSSIAN GUNBOAT GILIAK TORPEDOED AND DESTROYED AT PORT ARTHUR.

London, June 6.—The Daily Telegraph's Tientsin correspondent wires: Four thousand Russians belonging to General Stalkenberg's brigade on May 31 attacked 1,500 Japanese occupying a position five miles south of Wafangtien. The Russians were repulsed, losing 200 killed and 400 wounded. The Japanese lost more than 100 killed.

Tokio, June 6.—The destroyer flotilla engaged in watching Port Arthur from the eastward reports that at 7:40 p. m. on June 4 a Russian gunboat of the Giliak type was seen to explode and sink near Chentaoshan.

The vessel, with another gunboat, a destroyer and other steamers, was evidently engaged clearing the vicinity of mines. When the explosion occurred the others hurried back into Port Arthur.

Vice Admiral Togo expresses the opinion that the explosion was caused by a Japanese torpedo. The name of the gunboat destroyed is unknown, but it had been seen before on several occasions by the Japanese acting as guardship at the mouth of the harbor.

RUSSIAN LOSS HEAVY

GENERAL KURDKI'S FORCES DEFEAT SIX HUNDRED COSSACKS IN BATTLE.

Tokio, June 6.—Japanese and Russian forces located north of Pulentier, who were in a series of brushes during the early part of last week, had another encounter on Friday, June 3, near Chuchiatien. On that day the Japanese cavalry men met the Russians at noon. The Russians numbered 2,000 men, and were composed of infantry, detachments of cavalry and artillery. They were pressing the Japanese cavalry when the Japanese assembled their entire force and engaged the enemy. The Russians drew off gradually and at half past 5 in the afternoon they retired to Telishu. The Japanese suffered four men killed and four men wounded in this fighting.

A report has been received here from General Kuroki saying that on Friday last a detachment was dispatched from Aiyangcheng (Aiyangpienmen?) to the northeast of Fengwangcheng to make a reconnaissance toward Chaimatsi (Simatsi, thirty-five miles north of Fengwangcheng). This detachment encountered 600 Cossacks and after a brisk engagement the Russians retreated. General Kuroki reports that the Russian loss was heavy. The Japanese suffered one man killed and three wounded.

JAP LOSS VERY HEAVY

TOTAL CASUALTIES IN BATTLE AT NANSHAN HILL OVER FOUR THOUSAND.

Tokio, June 4.—The total of the Japanese casualties at the battle of Nanshan hill on May 26 is 4,304. They are divided as follows:

Thirty-one officers, including one major and five sergeant majors, and 713 noncommissioned officers and men killed; 100 officers, including one colonel, one major and twelve sergeant majors, and 3,160 noncommissioned officers and men wounded.

JAP WARSHIPS SUNK

THREE OF THEM REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED BY PORT ARTHUR FLEET.

Paris, June 7.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Matin says that a naval officer repeats the story already in circulation at Liaoyang that the Russian squadron at Port Arthur has made a sortie and sunk two Japanese torpedo boats and a battleship of a type.

AROUND PORT ARTHUR.

Heavy Firing Occurred All Day Monday.

Chefoo, June 7.—The correspondent of the Associated Press at Tongchow cables that there was firing at Port Arthur Monday night, beginning at 11:30 o'clock and continuing for several hours. A junk arriving during the night from Dalny reports that there was heavy firing all day Monday in the vicinity of Port Arthur. When the junk left Dalny Monday morning all was quiet there. The arrivals on the junk deny the story of the sinking of the Japanese ship off Talienwan.

TO INVESTIGATE OFFICIALS.

Special Assistant Attorney General Going to Alaska.

Washington, June 2. — President Roosevelt has appointed James S. Young, United States district attorney at Pittsburg, a special assistant attorney general to investigate charges against a number of federal officers in Alaska. These charges were discussed and final instructions given Mr. Young at a conference at the White House, at which Attorney General Knox was present.

The principal investigation will be into matters affecting Judge M. C. Brown of the First division, Judge James Wickersham of the Third division and John G. Brady, the governor of the territory.

Mr. Young expects to go to Alaska at once and anticipates that two months will be consumed in the work. He will report to the president on his return.

IN EXCESS OF $50,000.

Amount of Cash Embezzled by New Haven Bank Teller.

New Haven, Conn., June 3.—The approximate amount of cash embezzled by Douglas M. Smith, teller of the National Tradesmen's bank, is slightly in excess of $50,000, according to a statement by President William T. Fields.

In explaining the methods by which Smith took the money Mr. Fields said that he kept back a part of the deposits of customers having large accounts and increased the figures on his daily cash balance sheet. The reason that discrepancies did not quickly appear was that Smith did not touch small accounts.

BRYAN MEN CONTROL

NEBRASKA DEMOCRATS EMBODY HIS VIEWS IN THE PLATFORM ADOPTED.

Omaha, June 2.—The Nebraska Democratic state convention Wednesday unanimously selected W. J. Bryan to head the Nebraska delegation to the national gathering at St. Louis and adopted a platform which reaffirms the Kansas City platform of 1900 and places before the public Mr. Bryan's views of what should be embodied in the platform of the coming national convention.

The platform reaffirms faith in the principles enunciated in the Kansas City platform; criticises President Roosevelt's administration; says the Democracy of Jefferson and Jackson is the only relief from the plutocracy now dominating the country; denounces militarism, colonialism and imperialism; favors Filipino independence; tariff for revenue only; income tax; eight-hour day of labor; generous pensions; Isthmian canal without violating treaty obligations.

TROOPS DISPERSE RIOTERS.

Quickly Restore Order Among Strikers at Ironton, O.

Ironton, O., June 2.—At the governor's order, troops came here Wednesday and with little effort dispersed rioters at the furnaces of the Hanging Rock iron company. The trouble was due to an attempt to supply the places of strikers with nonunion men, many of the latter being colored. For some days both sides have been heavily armed. There have been several collisions and many shots were fired, Albert Sperry being seriously hurt. Superintendent Jeffries of the Hamilton furnace was also shot, but not badly hurt. Perfect order now prevails.

Young Hearing Postponed.

New York, June 6.—The coroner's inquest into the cause of the death of Frank T. Young, the bookmaker shot while riding in a cab with Mrs. Nan Patterson Saturday, was to be held during the day, but was postponed until Friday and Mrs. Patterson's bail was fixed at $5,000. Mrs. Patterson remained in the coroner's office while her friends sought security for the bond.

RIOT AND BLOODSHED

REIGN OF TERROR IN THE CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT DUE TO LABOR TROUBLES.

INFERNAL MACHINE SET OFF AT INDEPENDENCE AND THIRTEEN MEN KILLED.

RIOTING FOLLOWS THE ASSASSINATION AND WHOLESALE ARRESTS ARE MADE.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 7.—Thirteen men were killed by the explosion of an infernal machine at the railroad station in Independence Monday, and seven others were seriously injured. Eleven men were killed outright, and two died later from their wounds. All the killed and injured, with the exception of two men from the Deadwood mine, were nonunion miners employed on the night shift of the Findley mine.

The men had quit work at 2 a. m. and were waiting to board a suburban train on the Florence and Cripple Creek railroad and return to their homes in Cripple Creek and Victor. Just after the engineer of the approaching train blew his whistle as a signal to the miners, according to custom, a terrific explosion occurred underneath the station platform, on and near which twenty-six men were gathered. The platform was blown into splinters, the station was wrecked and a hole twenty feet in circumference and about as many feet in depth was torn in the ground.

Fragments Hurled Through Space.

Fragments of bodies were hurled through space for several hundred feet and later were picked up still quivering. Some of the bodies dropped into the pit made by the explosion, but heads, hands, ears, legs, arms and trunks were strewn about on all sides. Pieces of flesh were found on buildings 500 feet away and blood stained everything within a radius of fifty feet. The force of the explosion was felt throughout the camp and the crash awakened everybody.

The infernal machine with which the diabolical work was done consisted of a quantity of dynamite, estimated at 100 to 300 pounds, a loaded revolver and a long, slender steel wire attached to the trigger. The revolver was fastened so that the pulling of the trigger would not draw it away. The wire ran from under the station to the cribbing of the Delmonico property, about four hundred feet away, where its end was fastened to a rung of a chair. The dynamite was placed close to the muzzle of the revolver, which was discharged by pulling the wire when the engineer blew his whistle. The ball from the revolver exploded the dynamite.

REIGN OF TERROR ON

RIOTING FOLLOWS ASSASSINATION OF NONUNION MINERS IN COLORADO.

Denver, June 7.—A reign of terror brought on by a diabolical dynamiting plot, followed by rioting and an assault upon the militia, exists in the Cripple Creek mining district. Armed men throng the streets and conflicts are of hourly occurrence. Militiamen are marching hither and thither, making arrests by wholesale. A number of union miners have been placed in the military bullpen and others are being gathered in at frequent intervals. City and county officials have been compelled to resign their offices because of their reputed sympathy. As near as can be estimated fifteen are dead and a score or more injured as a result of the events leading up to the conditions above described.

Beginning with Monday morning when an infernal machine, set under the station platform at Findley, on the line of the Florence and Cripple Creek railroad, was touched off and a number of nonunion men who were waiting for a train were killed and others horribly mangled, events followed thick and fast. They culminated in a riot at a mass meeting where bullets flew and at least one was killed and a number injured.

Militia and Miners Fight.

Later as a company of militia was marching past union headquarters pursuing their search for union miners, they were fired upon, according to reports, from armed men concealed in union hall. The soldiers stormed the building and from last accounts at least four unionists were wounded. The remainder fled precipitately, blood streaming from the wounds of the injured. The soldiers who were unhurt pursued and arrested a number of the fleeing men and continued far into the night to scour the country in search of men supposed to have been

Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
His soul goes marching on!"

A gun spat fire from the higher ground, and Willetts dropped where he stood, but was up again in a second, with a red line across his forehead where the ball had grazed his temple. The mob spread out like a fan, the men climbing the fence and beginning the advance through the fields, thus closing on the ambuscade from both sides. Mr. Watts, wading through the high grass in the field north of the road, perceived the barrel of a gun shining from the fence some distance in front of him and the same second, although no weapon was seen in his hand, discharged a revolver at the clump of grass and weeds behind the gun. Instantly ten or twelve men leaped from their hiding places along the fences of both fields and, firing hurriedly and harmlessly into the scattered ranks of the oncoming mob, broke for the shelter of the houses, where their fellows were posted. Taken on the flanks and from the rear, there was but one thing for them to do to keep from being hemmed in and shot or captured. (They excessively preferred being shot.) With a wild, high, joyous yell, sounding like the bay of young hounds breaking into view of their quarry, the Plattville men followed.

The most eastward of the debilitated edifices of Six Crossroads was the saloon. It bore the painted legends, on the west wall, "Last Chance;" on the east wall, "First Chance." Next to this and separated by two or three acres of weedy vacancy from the corners, where the population centered thickest, stood—if one may so predicate of a building which leaned in seven directions—the house of Mr. Robert Skillett, the proprietor of the saloon. Both buildings were shut up as tight as their state of repair permitted. As they were farthest to the east, they formed the nearest shelter, and to them the Crossroaders bent their flight. They stopped not here, but disappeared behind Skillett's shanty, putting it between them and their pursuers, whose guns were beginning to speak. The fugitives had a good start, and, being the picked runners of the Crossroads, they crossed the open, weedy acres in safety and made for their homes. Every house had become a fort, and the defenders would have to be fought and torn out one by one. As the guns sounded, a woman in a shanty near the forge began to scream and kept on screaming.

On came the farmers and the men of Plattville. They took the saloon at a run, battered down the crazy doors with a fence rail and swarmed inside like busy insects, making the place hum like a hive, but with the hotter industries of destruction. It was empty of life as a tomb, but they beat and tore and battered and broke and hammered and shattered like madmen; they reduced the tawdry interior to a mere chaos and came pouring forth laden with trophies of ruin, and then there was a charry smell in the air, and a slender feather of smoke floated up from a second story window.

At the same time Watts led an assault on the adjoining house, an assault which came to a sudden pause, for from cracks in the front wall a squirrel rifle and a shotgun snapped and banged, and the crowd fell back in disorder. Homer Tibbs had a hat blown away, full of buckshot holes, while Mr. Watts solicitously examined a small aperture in the skirts of his brown coat. The house commanded the road, and the rush of the mob into the village was checked, but only for the instant.

They were coming.

A rickety woodshed which formed a portion of the Skillett mansion closely joined the "Last Chance" side of the family place of business. Scarcely had the guns of the defenders sounded when, with a loud shout, Lige Willetts leaped from an upper window on that side of the burning saloon and landed on the woodshed and, immediately climbing the roof of the mansion itself, applied a brand to the dry, time worn clapboards. Ross Schofield dropped on the woodshed close behind him, his arm lovingly infoldi a gallon jug of whisky, which he emptied (not without evident regret) upon the clapboards as Lige fired them. Flames burst forth almost instantly, and the smoke, uniting with that now rolling out of every window of the saloon, went up to heaven in a cumbrous, gray column.

As the flames began to spread there was a rapid fusillade from the rear of the house, and a hundred men and more, who had kept on through the fields to the north, assailed it from behind. Their shots passed clear through the flimsy partitions, and there was a screaming like beasts' howls from within. The front door was thrown open, and a lean, fierce eyed girl, with a case knife in her hand, ran out in the face of the mob. At sound of the shots in the rear they had begun to advance on the house a second time, and Hartley Bowlder was the nearest man to the girl. With awful words and shrieking inconceivably she made straight at Hartley and attacked him with the knife. She struck at him again and again, and in her anguish of hate and fear she was so extraordinary a spectacle that she gained for her companions the seconds they needed to escape from the house. As she hurled herself alone at the oncoming torrent they sped from the door unnoticed, sprang over the fence and reached the open lots to the west before they were seen by Willetts from the roof.

"Don't let 'em fool you!" he shouted. "Look to your left! There they go! Don't let 'em get away!"

The Crossroaders were running across the field. They were Bob Skillett and his younger brother, and Mr. Skillett was badly damaged. He seemed to be holding his jaw on his face with both hands. The girl turned and sped after them. She was over the fence almost as soon as they were, and the three ran in single file, the girl last. She was either magnificently sacrificial and fearless or she cunningly calculated that the regulators would take no chances of killing a woman-child, for she kept between their guns and her two companions, trying to cover and shield the latter with her frail body.

"Shoot, Lige," called Watts. "If we fire from here we'll hit the girl. Shoot!"

Willetts and Ross Schofield were still standing on the roof at the edge out of the smoke, and both fired at the same time. The fugitives did not turn. They kept on running, and they had nearly reached the other side of the field when suddenly, without any premonitory gesture, the elder Skillett dropped flat on his face. The Crossroaders stood by each other that day, for four or five men ran out of the nearest shanty into the open, lifted the prostrate figure from the ground and began to carry it back with them. But Skillett was alive. His curses were heard above all other sounds. Lige and Schofield fired again, and one of the rescuers staggered. Nevertheless as the two men slid down from the roof the hardened Crossroaders were seen to break into a run, and at that, with another yell, fiercer, wilder, more joyous than the first, the Plattville men followed.

The yell rang loudly in the ears of old Wilkerson, who had remained back in the road, and at the same instant he heard another shout behind him. He had not shared in the attack; but, greatly preoccupied with his own histrionic affairs, was proceeding alone up the pike, except for the unhappy yellow mongrel still dragged along by the rope, and alternating, as was his natural wont, from one fence to the other, crouching behind every bush to fire an imaginary rifle at the dog and then springing out with triumphant bellowings to fall prone upon the terrified animal. It was after one of these victories that a shout of warning was raised behind him, and Mr. Wilkerson, by grace of the god Bacchus, rolling out of the way in time to save his life, saw a horse dash by him, a big, black horse whose polished flanks were dripping with lather. Warren Smith was the rider. He was waving a slip of yellow paper high in the air.

He rode up the slope and drew rein beyond the burning buildings just ahead of those foremost in the pursuit. He threw his horse across the road to oppose their progress, rose in his stirrups and waved the paper over his head. "Stop!" he roared. "Give me one minute! Stop!" He had a grand voice, and he was known in many parts of the state for the great bass roar with which he startled his juries. To be heard at a distance most men lift the pitch of their voice. Smith lowered his an octave or two, and the result was like an earthquake playing an organ in a catacomb.

"Stop!" he thundered. "Stop!"

In answer one of the flying Crossroaders turned and sent a bullet whistling close to him. The lawyer paused long enough to bow deeply in satirical response; then, flourishing the paper, he roared again: "Stop! A mistake! I have news! Stop, I say! Horner has got them!"

To make himself heard over that tempestuous advance was a feat; for him, moreover, whose counsels had so lately been derided, to interest the pursuers at such a moment enough to make them listen—to find the word—was a greater, and by the word and by gestures at once vehemently imperious and imploring to stop them was a still greater. But he did it. He had come at just the moment before the moment that would have been too late. They all heard him. They all knew, too, that he was not trying to save the Crossroads as a matter of duty, because he had given that up before the mob left Plattville. Indeed, it was a question if at the last he had not tacitly approved, and no one feared indictments for the day's work. It would do no harm to listen to what he had to say. The work could wait. It would "keep" for five minutes. They began to gather around him, excited, flushed, perspiring and smelling of smoke. Hartley Bowlder, won by Lige's desperation and intrepidity, was helping the latter tie up his head. No one else was hurt.

"What is it?" they clamored impatiently. "Speak quick!" There was another harmless shot from a fugitive, and then the Crossroaders, divining that the diversion was in their favor, secured themselves in their decrepit fastnesses and held their fire. Meanwhile the flames crackled cheerfully in Plattville ears. No matter what the prosecutor had to say, at least the Skillett saloon and homestead were gone, and Bob Skillett and one other would be sick enough to be good for awhile.

"Listen!" cried Warren Smith, and, rising in his stirrups again, read the missive in his hand, a Western Union telegraph form. "Warren Smith, Plattville," was the direction.

> Found both shell men. Police familiar with both, and both wanted here. One arrested at noon in secondhand clothes store wearing Harkless' hat; also trying to dispose torn full dress coat known to have been worn by Harkless last night. Stain on lining believed blood. Second man found later at freight yards in empty lumber car left Plattville 1 p. m., badly hurt, shot and bruised. Supposed Harkless made hard fight. Hurt man taken to hospital unconscious. Will die. Other man refuses to talk so far. Check any movement Crossroads. This clears Skillett, etc. Come over on 9:15 accommodation.

The telegram was signed by Horner, the sheriff, and by Barrett, the superintendent of police at Rouen.

"It's all a mistake, boys," the lawyer said as he handed the paper to Watts and Parker for inspection. "The ladies at the judge's were mistaken, that's all, and this proves it. It's easy enough to understand. They were frightened by the storm, and watching a fence a quarter of a mile away by flashes of lightning any one would have been confused and imagined all the horrors on earth. I don't deny but what I believed it for awhile, and I don't deny but the Crossroads is pretty tough, but you've done a good deal here already today, and we're saved in time from a mistake that would have turned out mighty bad. This settles it. Horner got a wire to go soon as they got track of the first man. That was when we saw him on the Rouen accommodation."

A slightly cracked voice, yet a huskily tuneful one, was lifted quaveringly on the air from the roadside, where an old man and a yellow dog sat in the dust together, the latter reprieved at the last moment, his surprised head rakishly garnished with a dusty wreath of dog fennel daisies.

"John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the ground, While we go marching on."

Three-quarters of an hour later the inhabitants of the Crossroads, saved, they knew not how; guilty, knowing nothing of the fantastic pendulum of opinion which, swung by the events of the day, had marked the fatal moment of guilt now on others, now on them who deserved it—these natives and refugees, conscious of atrocity, dumfounded by a miracle, thinking the world gone mad, hovered together in a dark, ragged mass at the crossing corners, while the skeleton of the rotting buggy in the slough rose behind them against the face of the west. They peered with stupefied eyes through the smoky twilight.

From afar, faintly through the gloaming, came mournfully to their ears the many voiced refrain, fainter, fainter:

"John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the ground,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the ground,
John Brown's body lies—mold— • • •
• • • • we go march • • • on."

CHAPTER X.

AT the city hospital in Rouen that night a stout young man introduced himself to Barrett, superintendent of police; Warren Smith and Horner, sheriff of Carlow. He spoke in a low voice. "My name is Meredith," he said. "Mr. Harkless was an old and—and—" He paused for a moment. The Plattville men nodded solemnly. "An old and dear friend of mine," he went on, with some difficulty, and Warren Smith took him silently by the hand.

"You can come in and see this man, the Teller, with us if you like, Mr. Meredith," said the superintendent. "Your friend made it very hot for him before the two of 'em got away with him. He's so shot and hacked up his mother wouldn't know him if she wanted to. At least that's what they say out here. We haven't seen him. He's called Jerry the Teller, and one of my sergeants found him in the freight yard. Knew it was the Teller, because he was stowed away in one of the empty cars that came from Plattville last night. And Slattery—that's his running mate, the one we caught with the coat and hat—owned up that they beat their way on that freight. Looks like Slattery—let the Teller do all the fighting. He ain't scratched. We've been at Slattery pretty hard, but he won't open his head, and we hope to get something out of this one. He's delirious, but they say he'll come to before he dies. Do you want to go in with us?"

"Yes," said Meredith simply, and a young surgeon presently appeared and led them down a wide corridor and up a narrow hall, and they entered a small, quiet ward.

There was a pungent smell of chemicals in the room. The light was low, and the dimness was imbued with a thick, confused murmur, incoherent whisperings that came from a cot in the corner. It was the only cot in use in the ward, and Meredith was conscious of a terror that made him dread to look at it, to go near it. Beside it a nurse sat silent, and upon it feebly tossed the racked body of him whom Barrett had called Jerry the Teller.

The head was a shapeless bundle, so swathed it was with bandages and cloths, and what part of the face was visible was discolored and pigmented with drugs. Stretched under the white sheet the man looked immensely tall—as Horner saw with vague misgiving—and he lay in an odd, inhuman fashion, as though he had been all broken to pieces. His attempts to move were constantly soothed by the nurse, and he as constantly continued such attempts, and one hand, though torn and bandaged, was not to be restrained from a wandering, restless movement that Meredith felt to be pathetic. He had entered the room with a flare of hate for the thug whom he had come to see die and who had struck down the old friend whose nearness he had never known until it was too late. But at first sight of the broken figure he felt all animosity fall away from him. Only awe remained and a growing traitorous pity as he watched the long white fingers of the Teller pick at the coverlet. The man was muttering rapid fragments of words and syllables.

"Somehow I feel a sense of wrong, Gay," Meredith whispered to the surgeon, whom he knew. "I feel as if I had done the fellow to death myself, as if it were all out of gear. I know now how Henry felt over the great Guisard. How tall he looks! That doesn't seem to me like a thug's hand."

The surgeon nodded. "Of course if there's a mistake to be made you can count on Barrett and his sergeants to make it. I doubt if this is their man. When they found him, what clothes he wore were torn and stained, but they had been good once, especially the linen."

Barrett bent over the recumbent figure. "See here, Jerry," he said. "I want to talk to you a little. Rouse up, will you? I want to talk to you as a friend."

The incoherent muttering continued.

"See here, Jerry!" repeated Barrett more sharply. "Jerry! Rouse up, will you? We don't want any fooling, understand that, Jerry!" He dropped his

C. L. DORNER, Chairman.
THOS. GERMO Secretary.

It would be recognizing a deserving resident if the ninth district would go into the state convention solid for E. J. Herringer, of Ada, for railroad and warehouse commissioner, and would mean his easy nomination. Red Lake county will do her part, neighbors, and admonishes you to get in line.

The Democratic county convention will be held at the court house here, Saturday. Red Lake county sends eleven delegates to Duluth who will help name twenty-two delegates to the National convention at St. Louis. Jonh Morgan, of Thief River Falls, Nat Cempbell, of Crookston, and several other prominent Democrats of this section want to represent the Ninth district at St. Louis, and there will likely be a hot time on for the honor.

Congrsesman Halvor Steenerson is to be adopted into the White Earth band of Chippewa Indians at the 36th anniversary celebration of the tribe to be held at White Earth June 14 and 15th, says the Thief River Press. The big white cheif is greatly beloved by the red men of the band and as a marked token of their affection he has been invited to address the assembly and to be initiated into fellowship and enjoy all of the privileges of a full fledged brave. One emolument pertaining to the honor will be a section of fine land, such a tract being granted to any one admitted as a blood brother of the Chippewas.

Several of the valley papers have expressed themselves as unfavorable to E. J. Herringer, of Ada, for railroad and warehouse commissioner, claiming that he used to be a Populist. Well, what of that? No one will deny that there was lots of good timber in the Populist party that the Republican party should be proud to acquire, and anyone to meet Mr. Herringer could see that he had more ability in his little finger than in the whole make-up of some of the fellows who have held state offices in Minnesota before now. If the Republican party wants to go on record as trying to put the best fitted men in the places, The Gazette fails to see where it can justly refuse to name Mr. Herringer.

There is little if any doubt that Samuel Gibeau, the present incumbent of the office of Register of Deeds of Red Lake county, will make a fight to be re-elected to his present position after having held the place for three consecutive terms, says the Thief River Falls Press. Sam has made as good an official as the county ever had, this nobody will deny, but the office is a fat one and it would be a good idea to pass it around in order that some one else may rake in a few shekels on their own deal. K. J. Weeks is out after the republican nomination and will undoubtedly land the plum. With these two able campaigners out for blood it requires no wizard to truly predict a hot and interesting contest.

ARTESIAN WELLS NUMEROUS.

Another Pleasing Feature of the Valley Elucidated Upon.

Crookston Journal: "The Red River Valley has reason to be proud of the remarkable supply of pure artesian water which lies a short distance below the surface of the ground and which only awaits the beckoning hand of man and his drill to spring to the surface in a gushing gurgling well of the purest crystal water obtainable upon the face of the earth." Such were the words of State Engineer George A. Ralph to a Journal representative recently. Mr. Ralph is an authority upon all matters of a hydraulic or engineering contract and his deductions in regard to the Red River Valley artesian water supply will be interesting to the entire valley.

According to Mr. Ralph there are upwards of thirty-five flowing artesian wells in the city of Crookston alone, while in the entire county of Polk some 250 wells provide spouts of pure clear water the entire year round. Water is obtained at varying depth of from 50 to 250 feet and has a pressure sufficient to bring it a few feet above the surface of the ground.

At Beltrami and vicinity wells are obtained at the unusually shallow depth of thirty feet and the water is unusually clear and pure. From Beltrami east as far as Fertile the artesian zone extends and large wells dot the prairies at frequent intervals. After reaching the ridge country out east however the streak of water dissappears and is not obtainable except at excessive depths.

From Crookston northward the water is very easily obtained. No purer water is obtained in any section of the country than that found in the Red River Valley artesian zone, but outside of the regularly shaped zone extending a hundred miles north and south and forty miles east and west, the waters obtained from deep wells are exceedingly salty and possessed of other mineral substances which do not add to their value for domestic use.

Band Concert.

The band accompanying Eiler's Rip Van Winkle company gave a concert on Main street at noon, and the numbers were each accorded hearty applause. This is the company's second visit to White Hall, and the band this season seems to be even stronger than last season. The baritone soloist certainly has few equals.

Tonight Rip Van Winkle will be presented under canvass. The tent is located on the spacious grounds back of Wyatt's livery barn. The company makes a specialty of this play, and will present it to-night as only thoroughly trained artists can. A large number of books on the play have been given away by Harry Winn which have been read, arousing great interest in Rip Van Winkle, and a large crowd will attend the performance tonight. There will be another band concert at 7 p. m.

A MODERN FLOURING MILL.

The Crookston Journal contains the following write-up of an institution that is financied by several Red Lake Falls capitalists, which will be pleasant reading to the people here:

"Among the many enterprises which bear testimony to the faith men have in Crookston, is that of the new and modern mill of the Crookston Milling Co. This large and modernly equipped building stands at the corner of Main and Fourth streets just north of the business center of the city. It is accesable to farmers from all directions over the best of roads and is reached by the Great Northern railway system by a spur track. The building itself is four stories in height and covers a large area of ground and adds very materially to the business like appearance of the city.

"The Crookston Milling Co. was organized last spring after the mill belonging to Dwight M. Baldwin burned. The company at once purchased the H. V. Malm mill and the site of their present mill and begun the erection on it of an up-to-date mill. The work was under the direction of George McConnell, head miller of the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. Mr. McConnell is an experienced miller, one of the acknowledged experts in his profession in the northwest. In every way he sought to make the mill a model. Nothing but the very best machinery was installed and the entire building is adapted to the accomodation of the machinery in such a manner that the best possible results may be obtained. No expense was spared to make the entire plant one of the very best in the northwest. As and ideal flour mill, it is conceded by experts who have visited it to be a model.

"The mill plant properly divides itself into three departments, the mill proper, the elevator and the feed mill. In addition to these there is a large elevator on the Great Northern siding just north of the other buildings. The mill proper is four stories and an attic in height. The basement or "ground floor" includes a packing room, the shipping, storage department, the power room and office. The second floor is the grinding floor, the third is devoted to purifying and the fourth to shifters and scourers.

"On entering the building from the south, the door opening into the office is on the left while the right is the packing room, where four flour and two feed packers are at work. Everything is modern and clean and the finished product is being put into bags for shipment. To the left of this is the large flour, or storage and shipping room. This department is large and light and well adapted to the handling of the finished product either into cars or the farmers wagons. It will hold many tons of flour and feed and is well supplied with the various kinds of flour and feed turned out by the mill. To the right of the packing room is located the power room. The machinery in the mill is all driven by two large sized motors which are supplied with electricity from the power house of the Crookston Water, Power and Light Co.

"The second or grinding floor, is equipped with a full line of the Willford Moline Roller mills. The machinery is of a standard make and it is here that the rollers crush the berry and prepare it for the futher processes which take place on the floors above. Here are also located steamers which prepare the grain for the crushing between the swiftly revolving rollers. Here as well as elsewhere in the building the arrangement of the machinery over the place allotted to it is most excellent and gives the operators a chance to perform their duties without inconvenience or danger to life or limb.

"On the third or purifying floor is where the purifying of the product is accomplished. It is equipped with a full line of the best purifiers and a Sturdivant fan used for roll suction. It also contains a full line of the famous Niagara Dust collectors. The machinery on this floor is very interesting to the layman who is at once filled with curiosity to know to what use the queer and awkward machines may be put. He is mystified as well as astonished when the miller explains to him the principle of each machine and the part it plays in making "Cremo" the patent of the Crookston Milling Co. On the fourth floor are found the plan-shifters and scouring machine. In connection with this floor is the attic where even the novice pauses to admire the splendid untility of room and the convenience on every hand which the architect of the mill so skilfully arranged. From the cupalo of this floor one can get a splendid panoramic view of the city of Crookston which is worth a visit to the mill to see."

TO KILL CUTWORMS.

The State Entomologist Issues a Most Timely Circular.

F. L. Washburn, the state entomologist, has issued a timely circular pointing out the sucessful methods of exterminating cutworms in gardens. The following is a summary of the methods:

Small gardens have been attacked with great injury by the cutworms this spring. These so-called worms are the larvae of the night flying moths. The cutworms are particularly bad on land which was in sod the season previous to being used for garden purposes.

When a plant is found injured in the morning, the culprit is almost sure to be located about an inch from the plant and under the soil. Taking advantage of the tendency of the worm to hide just as morning comes on, it may be trapped by putting thin pieces of board or cabbage leaves on the ground at frequent intervals. The worms are pretty sure to be found hiding under them in the morning. The plants may be protected by by placing a collar around the base extended two and one-half inches below the surface. Care should be taken that the collar has no openings around the sides. Old tomato cans make a very good collar. Before putting on the collar, care should be taken to ascertain whether any worms are close to the plant.

By taking two or three spoonfuls of paris green to one gallon of water, a very good poison may be obtained. To apply this poison take bundles of clover and dipping them in the water, place them in the vicinity where the plants are most likely to be attacked. The poison is slow to act and therefore results must not be expected immediately.

DAIRY NOTES.

From the Ada Index.

Bad water is often responsible for bitter milk.

The old cow is the latest one to take a hand in the color discussion.

A man who abuses his dumb animals will not make a loving husband.

Don't stop on the when you buy a dairy cow if you see one that suits you.

The slang phrase "as good as the wheat" has lost its force in the dairying districts.

The water is the only place to keep your milk and cream the year round, try it and see.

Always be sure to cool the new skimming before bringing it together with the cold cream.

Soak your tubs well for water is cheaper than it is to let the brine run off on the way to market, for it is a total loss.

It pays to keep your ice box filled with ice so that the mean temperature is all the same. And you will use ice to do the same work.

A dairyman who buys a cream separator and delivers his cream to the factory once or twice a week, and has a few cans spoil on his hands, is practicing poor economy.

Do not feed the young calf too much of either creamery skim milk, or skim milk from the hand separator. They are both free, or should be, from butterfat, and should fed with care.

The task which a man likes is half accomplished. This is perhaps the reason why some buttermakers can do their work in the creamery with half the energy expended that their neighbors employ.

No man can afford to keep poor cows, especially the poor man. If a rich man wants to waste his money in poor cows, it is not so bad, but the poor man must know better, or he cannot expect much profit.

When a buttermaker is compelled to reject a can of bad flavored or sour milk there is no occasion for making excuses, generating ill feeling or anything of the kind. Let the buttermaker know he is right, stand firm and willing to instruct the patron how to better care for the milk and there need be no trouble.

The fourth annual commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls High School were held at the Metropolitan opera house last Friday evening, and one of the largest Red Lake Falls audiences that ever assembled together was present to be entertained by the program arranged for them by the class of 1904.

The opera house was very prettily decorated with the class colors—bottle green and white—and the main floor of the auditoriam was reserved for the relatives and friends of the graduates. Along the sides of the balcony were seated the classes of '06 and '07, amid decorations of their class colors, and each lustily cheered their elder classmates, and made great claims for the prowess of their own particular class. The Junior class officiated as ushers and general managers of the crowd that was to be handled.

The exercises commenced by the school board, professor and teachers, Rev. Knox and the class of '04 marching to their seats on the stage amid enthusiastic applause, and the program proper started with the rendition of an "Andante Religiosa" by the Red Lake Falls band orchestra.

Rev. Knox delivered the invocation after which followed the first speaker and salutatorian of the class who had for his subject, under the general head of "Minnesota Before Statehood" the pleasing assignment "The Romance of the Explorers." Before commencing his essay, Mr. Johnson gave a neat talk to the citizens, shool board and teachers, and in turn thanked each and all in the name of the class for the opportunities that had been presented to them, and hoped that the future conduct of the members of the class would be such as to cause all to feel glad for what had been offered along educational lines. In his essay he touched on the early history of Minnesota, and gave a brief but able summary of the many stirring events that led up to the establishment of Minnesota as a state, and of the hardships endured by those who took the prominent parts.

He was followed by

who had for a subject "The Minnesota Red Men." Miss Cyr handled her subject in a forceful and eloquent manner, and her story of the "Red" brother was interesting and instructive. Following her came with the assignment for a subject of "The Three Big Waters," and the masterly manner in which she handled the matter showed a thorough conversance with the general typography of the great North Star State. Following Miss Hennemuth's essay Miss Ginn Finseth delighted the audience with several beautiful vocal selections, which were met with a hearty response by the assemblage.

Under the general head of "Creating the State,"

VERNE M. HEALY

told of the "Life of the Early Settlers," and his tribute to the men who left the home ties to combat danger and hardship on the prairies of Minnesota was listened to with marked interest by the audience, and many points were brought to light to remind us what we owe to those who by self-denial to a great extent made it possible for Minnesota to occupy her present enviable position among the states of the nation. Under the same general head told of "Minnesota During the Civil War," and in an interesting discourse summed up what the forebears had done toward saving the Nation. In her essay she touched upon the great Indian uprising in Minnesota while the soldiers were away fighting for their country, and of the gallant part played by those who stayed at home to provide for the loved ones.

WILLIAM O. HUNT

followed with a talk, under the general head, on "Her Constitution, and the People Who Made It," and dealt liberally with the economic and political history of Minnesota, showing that a close study had been made of his subject, and throwing light on facts that the majority of the people had never stopped to consider. The work of forming the constitution was not boy's play, and Mr. Hunt clearly showed where brains predominated in the selection of what was the best for the people at large.

The orchestra rendered the difficult selection, "The Golden Sceptre" in a pleasing manner, after which came the subject "Minnesota's Varied Resources."

ROSE D. CYR

was the first to speak upon that subject, and took "Bread and Butter" as a topic. Miss Cyr dealt forcibly upon the rapid advancement of Minnesota as a producer of bread and butter for the world, and her talk inspired the audience with a feeling of pride that they were residents of the greatest wheat producing valley in the nation. The speaker landed the advance of the dairy industry, and presented neat arguments in support of her contentions that the creamery is the solution of the problem of successful farming.

OLE H. GJERBERG.

was next with an entertaining talk on the "Woods and Turning Wheels," and told his hearers many facts about the lumber industry, railroad interests, and other important factors in the state's development, showing a thorough and comprehensive knowledge of his subject.

M. CLARE ALLISON

took the subject "What Comes From the Ground," and did her full share towards helping her classmates prove the many good and grand points of the North Star State. She told of the place Minnesota had won in the flour and butter making industries, and predicted in eloquent terms a continuance of the success that our great commonwealth has attained.

The male quintette, composed of band members, then rendered the pleasing selection, "Legends" and had to respond to several encores.

"What the Future May Hold," was the final general head, and in a pleasing effort told what it should hold "For the Economic and Industrial Life of the State." She spoke of the enviable position Minnesota had attained in the race for supremacy along these lines, and predicted freely that the quality of "get up and get" that possessed the people would be the means of easily sustaining the present place, and forging further to the front.

The last talk by a class member was made when Valedictorian took the center of the stage and spoke briefly and pointedly as to what the future held "For Minnesota's Social and Political Prestige and Power." He cited where Minnesota had able representation in the National Congress and paid tribute to the excellent records made by her legislators, ending his essay with a prediction for greater achievements in the future than had been acquired in the past. Mr. Ittner, as valedictorian, bid farewell to school life for the class, and took occasion to add his thanks to those who had opened the way for greater advancement and higher education.

After the selection, "The Feast of Roses," by the orchestra, Prof. Whiteley presented the diplomas to the class, and in a neat speech gave them some sound advice, and expressed a hope that their lives would be full of marked successes. In bidding the people farewell, he hoped that his successor would be given the excellent support that had been accorded him, and expressed a wish that the schools, people and institutions of Red Lake Falls would "live long and prosper."

The entertainment as a whole was one of the most successful and delightfully pleasing affairs that the people have ever had the opportunity of attending and the class of '04 acquitted itself admirably, to say the least.

The Gazette hopes, with a legion of earnest friends, that every event in the lives of these eleven bright young people, will pass off as auspiciously and successfully as did the exercises of last Friday evening.

Same Thing Here.

Warren Register: The "White Mahatna" drew a fair-sized crowd Monday night, in spite of the thunder's roar and the lightning's flash, but even fair weather would be powerless to bring out a corporal's guard in case of a return engagement of this "attraction."

Gilbert Westphal came up from Minneapolis last Thursday and was the guest of friends here for several days. Gilbert will read law in his brother's office at Minneapolis during his summer vacation.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes:—For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times, I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it affected same almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recommend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to enquiries regarding my case. A. L. Reichart.

hand on the man's shoulder and shook him slightly.

The Teller uttered a short, gasping cry.

"Let me," said Gay and swiftly interposed. Bending over the cot, he said in a pleasant voice: "It's all right, old man; it's all right. Slattery wants to know what you did with that man down at Plattville when you got through with him. He can't remember, and he thinks there was money left on him. Slattery's head was hurt. He can't remember. He'll go shares with you when he gets it. Slattery's going to stand by you if he can get the money."

The Teller only tried to move his free hand to the shoulder Barrett had shaken.

"Slattery wants to know," repeated the young surgeon, gently moving the hand back upon the sheet. "He'll divvy up when he gets it. He'll stand by you, old man."

"Would you please not mind," whispered the Teller faintly—"would you please not mind if you took care not to brush against my shoulder again?"

The surgeon drew back, with an exclamation, but the Teller's whisper gathered strength, and they heard him murmuring oddly to himself. Meredith moved forward, with a startled gesture. "What's that?" he said.

"Seems to be trying to sing, or something," said Barrett, bending over to listen.

The Teller swung his arm heavily over the side of the cot, the fingers never ceasing their painful twitching. The surgeon leaned down and gently moved the cloths so that the white, scarred lips were free. They moved steadily. They seemed to be framing the semblance of an old ballad that Meredith knew. The whisper grew more distinct. It became a rich but broken voice, and they heard it singing like the sound of some far, halting minstrelsy:

"Wave willows—murmur waters—golden sunbeams smile,
Earthly music—cannot waken—lovely—
Annie Lisle."

Meredith gave an exclamation.

The bandaged hand waved jauntily over the Teller's head. "Ah, men," he said, almost clearly, and tried to lift himself on his arm. "I tell you it's a grand eleven we have this year! There will be little left of anything that stands against them. It's our championship. Did you see Jim Romley ride over his man this afternoon?"

As the voice grew clearer the sheriff stepped forward, but Tom Meredith, with a loud cry of grief, threw himself on his knees beside the cot and seized the wandering fingers in his own. "John!" he cried. "John, is it you?"

The voice went on rapidly, not heeding him, "Ah, you needn't howl! Well, laugh away, you Indians! If it hadn't been for this ankle—but it seems to be my chest that's hurt—and side—not that it matters, you know. The sophomore's just as good or better. It's only my egotism. Yes, it must be the side—and chest—and head—all over, I believe. I'll try again next year—next year I'll make it a daily. Helen said, not that I should call you Helen—I mean Miss—Miss—Fishee—no, Sherwood—but I've always thought Helen was the prettiest name in the world—you'll forgive me?—and please tell Parker there's no more copy and won't be—I wouldn't grind out another stick to save his immortal—she said—ah, I never made a good trade—no—unless—they can't come seven miles—but I'll finish you, Skillett, first; I know you! I know nearly all of you. Now let's sing 'Annie Lisle'"— He lifted his hand as if to beat the time for a chorus.

"Oh, John, John!" cried Tom Meredith, and sobbed outright. "My boy, my boy—old friend!" The cry of the classmate was like that of a mother, for it was his old idol and hero who lay helpless and broken before him.

Two pairs of carriage lamps sparkled in front of the hospital in the earliest of the small hours, these subjoined to two deep hooded phaetons, from each of which quickly descended a gentleman with a beard, an air of eminence and a small, ominous black box, and the air of eminence was justified by the haste with which Meredith had sent for them and by their wide repute. They arrived almost simultaneously and hastily shook hands as they made their way to the ward down the long hall and up the narrow corridor. They had a short conversation with the surgeon and a word with the nurse, then turned the others out of the room by a practiced innuendo of manner. They stayed a long time in the room without opening the door.

Meredith went out on the steps and breathed the cool night air. A slender taint of drugs hung everywhere about the building, and the almost imperceptible permeation sickened him. It was deadly, he thought. To him it was imbued with a hideous portent of suffering. The lights in the little ward were turned up, and they seemed to shine from a chamber of horrors, while he waited as a brother might have waited outside the Inquisition, if indeed a brother would have been allowed to wait outside the Inquisition.

Alas, he had found John Harkless. He had lost track of him as men sometimes do lose track of their best beloved, but it had always been a comfort to know that Harkless was somewhere, a comfort without which he could hardly have got along. Like others, he had been waiting for John to turn up—on top, of course—he had such ability, ability for anything, and people would always care for him and believe in him so that he would be shoved ahead no matter how much he hung back himself; but Meredith had not expected him to turn up in Indiana.

He remembered now hearing a man who had spent the day in Plattville on business speak of him: "They've got a young fellow down there who'll be governor in a few years. He's a sort of dictator. Runs the party all over that part of the state to suit his own sweet will just by sheer personality. And there isn't a man in the district who wouldn't cheerfully lie down in the mud to let him pass over dry. It's that young Harkless, you know. Owns the Herald, the paper that downed McCune and smashed those imitation 'White Caps' in Carlow county." He had been struck by the coincidence of the name, but he had not dreamed that the Carlow Harkless was his friend until Helen's telegram had reached him that evening.

He shivered. His name was spoken from within, and Horner came out on the steps with the two eminent surgeons, and the latter favored him with a few words which he did not understand. He did understand, however, what Horner told him. Somehow the look of the sheriff's Sunday coat, wrinkling forlornly from his broad, bent shoulders, was both touching and solemn. He said simply: "He's conscious and not out of his head. They're gone in to git his antemortem statement." And they re-entered the ward.

Harkless' eyes were bandaged. The lawyer was speaking to him, and as Horner went awkwardly toward the cot Warren said something indicative of the sheriff's presence, and the hand on the sheet made a formless motion which Horner understood, and he took the pale fingers in his own very gently and then set them back. Smith turned toward Meredith, but the latter made a gesture which forbade the attorney to speak to him and went to a corner and sat down, with his head in his hands.

"John, is it you?"

A sleepy young man had been brought in, and he opened a notebook and shook a stylographic pen so that the ink might flow freely. The lawyer, briefly and with unlegal agitation, administered an oath, and then there was silence.

"Now, Mr. Harklese, if you please," said Barrett insinuatingly, "if you feel like telling us as much as you can about it."

He answered in a low, rather indistinct voice very deliberately, pausing before almost every word. It was easy work for the sleepy stenographer.

"I understand. I don't want to go off my head again before I finish. If it were only for myself I should tell you nothing, because if I am to leave I should like it better if no one were punished. But that's a bad community over there. They are everlastingly worrying our people. They've always been a bother to us, and it's time it was stopped for good. I don't believe very much in punishment, but you can't do a great deal of reforming with the Crossroaders unless you catch them young, before they're weaned. They wean them on whisky, you know. I realize you needn't have sworn me for me to tell you this."

Horner and Smith had started at the mention of the Crossroads, but they subdued their ejaculations, while Mr. Barrett looked as if he had known it, of course. The room was still, save for the dim voice and the soft transcribings of the stylographic pen.

"I left Judge Briscoe's and went west on the pike to a big tree. It rained, and I stepped under the tree for shelter. There was a man on the other side of the fence—Bob Skillett. He was carrying his gown and hood—I suppose it was that—on his arm. Then I saw two others a little farther east in the middle of the road. I think they had followed me from the Briscoes' or near there. They had their foolish regalia on, as all the others had. There was plenty of lightning to see. The two in the road were simply standing there in the rain looking at me through the eyeholes in their masks. I knew there were others—plenty—but I thought they were coming from behind me—the west.

"I wanted to get home—the courthouse yard was good enough for me—so I started east toward town. I passed the two gentlemen, and one fell down as I went by him, but the other fired a shot as a signal, and I got his hood off his face for it. I stopped long enough, and it was Force Johnson. I know him well. Then I ran, and they followed. A little ahead of me I saw six or eight of them spread across the road. I knew I'd have a time getting through, so I jumped the fence to cut across the fields. I lit in a swarm of them. It had rained them just where I jumped. I set my back to the fence, but one of the fellows in the road leaned over and smashed my head in, rather—with the butt of a gun, I believe. I came out from the fence, and they made a little circle around me. No one said anything. I saw they had ropes and saplings, and I didn't want that exactly, so I went

Mr. J. W. Turner, of Truhart, Va., says that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done him more good than anything he could get from the doctor. If any physician in this country was able to compound a medicine that would produce such gratifying results in cases of stomach trouble, biliousness or constipation, his whole time would be used in preparing this one medicine. CURES CATARRH

'Hyomei the Most Wonderful Cure for Catarrh Ever Discovered," says A. L. Reichert.

Do not try to cure catarrh by taking drugs into the stomach; it cannot be cured in that manner. The only way in which this too common disease can be cured is through a direct application that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.

Hyomei is the only known method of treatment that accomplishes this. It is the simplest, most pleasant, and the only absolute cure for catarrh that has ever been discovered.

Thousands of unsolicited testimonials have been received from the most prominent men and women in the country who have been cured by this remarkable remedy. Ministers, bankers, lawyers, even eminent physicians have given strong testimonials as to the remarkable powers of Hyomei to cure catarrh.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, consisting of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect a cure in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c. It is not alone the best (it might be called the only) method of curing catarrh, but it is also the most economical.

A. L. Reichert has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh, that he will for a limited time, sell this medicine under his personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchasers can say that it did not help them.

Several local newspapers have been telling how the large Clearwater drive has gone by Red Lake Falls, and enlarged stories have been told as to its size, etc. The news gatherers made a decidedly poor guess that time, however, unless it is possible that the drive sneaked by in the night, and was only observed by an eagle-eyed reporter. The big Clearwater drive is nearing Red Lake Falls but it is some fifty miles or so up river yet, so if one rear has already passed it must have been the ghost of the real thing.

CROSSES MANY SWAMPS.

Roadbed of New Thief River Extension Will Be Soft.

Civil engineers returning from the north Thief River Falls country last evening brought with them reports of the condition of the new Great Northern extension right of way which would indicate that the line will have to be changed before successful grading can be accomplished, says the Crookston Journal.

The entire line as surveyed according to the reports brought down is a mass of water and swamp which will double and treble the cost of railroad construction ordinairly met with. The line was surveyed in the winter time and when the ground was frozen but inasmuch as the Great Northern engineers have been over the ground annually for three or four years it seems strange that no defects in the roadbed were discovered before the right of way purchasing agent began his labors and concluded deals for the purchase of the entire line.

Men and teams are in the country ready to begin work and whether or not the line will be changed despite the purchase of the right of way is not known. Railroad building experts however declare that the line across the swamps cannot be made a successful roadbed without a tremendous expenditure of labor. It is possible that the line will be changed so as to strike Pelan.

OPENING SALE MONDAY

Long Delayed Opening of The Red Lake Indian Reservation Is at Hand At Last.--Many People There.

At Thief River Falls next Monday will occur the long-delayed and many times promised opening of the Red Lake Indian reservation in Red Lake county, and as a result eleven townships of excellent agricultural land will be offered for sale to the highest bidders.

U. S. Land Commissioner Richards, of Washington, will arrive at Thief River Falls the latter part of the week, and assisted by the officials of the Crookston land office will personally conduct the sale.

The sale will commence Monday, June 20, and according to the schedule issued will terminate July 14, and to dispose of the land in that time an average of 36 quarter sections will be offered daily.

In order to facilitate matters, circulars have been issued from the general land office, giving the exact date on which every piece of land will be sold, so that by examining the schedule of sales the homeseeker will be enabled to determine the exact date upon which his particular quarter will be offered for sale, and until that date he will not need to worry that someone else will snap up his choice. The system is a good one and will undoubtedly meet with popular favor as it will bring into Thief River on the days specified only those who want the particular parcels of land which are listed for that day, and large jams and heavy crushings will be avoided at the sale.

The banks at Thief River Falls have arranged to supply plenty of cash to take up the drafts, etc., as the U. S. government will accept nothing but cash for the amount offered.

The crowds present so far have been rather disappointing, but it is stated that the last few days have witnessed quite a rush to Thief River Falls, and it is confidently expected that by Monday the crowd will be large enough to make the sale successful from every standpoint.

The opening of the reservation should mark a new era for Red Lake county, as a great many actual settlers will no doubt be secured, and with their addition we can look forward to Red Lake county striding still further to the front.

SOO TOWN LOCATED.

Given Out That Townsite Has Been Bought.

It has been announced from headquarters that the Soo line has purchased land for a townsite on the southeast of Section 9, Emardville, of E. Schyedrup, and will at once make a plat and put the property on the market.

The announcement comes as a sort of surprise, as it was generally supposed that the company would select a townsite north of and on the Clearwater river.

The new townsite will be under the management of Julius Pleth, of St. Hilaire, and several people have already commenced getting in shape to build. Messrs. Brown & Buskirk, of this city, have been hauling out lumber and it is their intention to open up a saloon there. Erick Iverson, formerly of Garnes, [illegible] for a saloon license, and [illegible] stated further that still another party would put in a saloon.

Julius Pleth will immediately erect a bank building and land office, and others have expressed an inclination to locate there, so that the new town will be well established by the time the road gets through there.

The people of the eastern part of the county are pleased at the new state of things, and look to see a first-class market at the new Emardville town. It certainly will have the right men behind it, and will get there with both feet if such a thing is possible.

EARLY MORNING WEDDING.

H. N. Johnson and Miss Delia Toupin Suprise Their Friends.

At six o'clock this morning, at the home of the bride's parents in this city, the Rev. Father Fayolle said the words that united for life H. N. Johnson and Miss Delia Toupin, A. R. Johnson and Miss Olive Vian acting as best man and bridesmaid, respectively. The bride was dressed in crepe de cgyne, shirred, and trimmed with bands of dotted net; the bridesmaid in white voile, and the groom and groomsmen in the conventional black. The bridal party left immediately by team for Grand Forks, and from there they will go to Chatfield, Mr. Johnson's home, and other points for a honeymoon trip of a couple of weeks.

The news of the wedding came as a great surprise to the people here, as it was generally thought that they were not to be married until the 22nd inst., and that date had been announced unanthoritively as the wedding day. When one one of Mr. Johnson's friends here was married recently it was through his instrumentation that everyone between here and Minneapolis took occasion to congratulate the bridal couple, and revenge deep and dreadful had been sworn, but the decidedly smooth move of this morning done away nicely with any of the usual wedding jokes, and the laugh is apparently on the fellows who were laying for Johnson.

The contracting parties are too well and favorably known to need any commendation from The Gazette. The bride has resided here since girlhood and is held in high esteem by a large circle of friends, and comes from one of Red Lake Falls' oldest and most highly respected families. The groom was employed here for a year and a half as manager of the Robertson Lumber company, and was a leader in social circles.

The Gazette takes great pleasure in congratulating the happy couple and trusts that their married life may be full of happiness and contentment.

ST. MARY'S IS BLESSED.

Impressive Ceremonies Attended By Large Crowd.

At St. Marys church last Sunday the Rt. Rev. Abbot Peter Engel, Ph. D., president of St. John's University, conducted the solemn and beautifully impressive service of blessing St. Mary's church, a large number of people attending.

Immediately after the ceremonies high mass was said and the Rev. Engel delivered the sermon.

Besides the Abbot, Rev. Father Ansgar was assisted by Rev. Fathers Raymond and James, professors at St. John's, and Father Charles, of Thief River Falls.

In the evening Abbot Engel again addressed the congregation, and his hearers were delighted with the brillance of the discourse.

St. Mary's church people have accomplished a great deal during the past year, and the untiring efforts of their pastor, Father Ansgar, have been instrumental in doing a great deal of good to the church and the city.

TURN THE EAGLE LOOSE

Red Lake Falls Will Do Things Up Brown On Nation's Birthday Anniversary —Enthusiastic Meeting.

A mass meeting for the purpose of considering the advisability of celebrating July 4th in style never equalled, was held at the city hall Monday evening and a good-sized crowd turned out to express their opinions.

The meeting was rather tame at the start, but later in the evening devolved into one of the most enthusiastic gatherings that has ever been held in Red Lake Falls. The spirit of the evening was heartily gone into by every one present, and it seemed to be the unanimous opinion of all those at the meeting that the time was at hand for Red Lake Falls to give her customers and friends the time of their lives, and with this end in view the gathering was brought to order by S. L. Lewis, who acted as chairman in the absence of Mayor Duffy, who was unexpectedly called out of town at the last moment.

Several speeches were made, and on motion a committee of five was named to go among the business people and solicit contributions. This committee consisted of Messrs. John A. Duffy, Ralph E. Wyer, Joseph H. Paradis, H. H. Zaiser, and C. N. Bourdon.

A committee consisting of W. A. McIntyre, S. E. Hunt, S. L. Lewis, H. J. Kaufer and Dr. N. M. Watson was then named, and these gentlemen will have complete charge of the arrangements. They will appoint the sub-committees and supervise the whole affair, and will see that the celebration of 1904 will be one that the people will long remember.

The finance committee started out Tuesday morning and met with great success in their work of soliciting funds, and the people of any city never responded more liberally than did our citizens on this occasion.

No arrangements have yet been announced, but it is easy to predict a rousing celebration. Plenty of money is at hand, and with the excellent personel of the executive committee there is no reason why Red Lake Falls will not easily eclipse all efforts that ever have been attempted in this section of the state. One feature that will be arranged for that cannot help but draw the crowd, will be the magnificient display of fireworks in the evening. It is intended that this shall be something grander than has ever been attempted by a city of this size in the state.

Plan now on coming to help Red Lake Falls celebrate the glorious Fourth, and you can rest assured that you will be given the best time of your life.

Tell your neighbore and tell them to tell their neighbors, for we're anxious to have every citizen of the county help us do the thing up brown.

Watch for further elaborate particulars and announcements.

A Hot Ball Game.

Red Lake Falls fans had the opportunity of witnessing a hot base ball contest on the local grounds last Sunday, and while at several stages of the game it strongly resembled a mix-up of Kilkenny cats, nevertheless the contest was interesting and exciting. The Crookston team drove over in the morning, end assisted by several of Manager Lycan's Northern Leaguers were going to wallop the ground with the Red Lake Falls boys, but a half a team went againt them and beat them at every turn of the road, although they lost the game on a few bad errors in the first inning. The playing of both teams was good throughout the game and it took ten innings to decide the score. Crookston attempted a number of her usual dirty dodges, and sustained their well-earned rep. as unfair players. The town of Crooks may have a few honest sportsmen, but they have never sent them up here to contest with the Red Lake Falls boys.

The battery work of Red Lake Falls was better than that of Crookston, and all of our boys outplayed the salaried men of the other side.

The final score was 7 to 6 in favor of the "Crooks"—truly named.

RUSSIANS IN A TRAP

LOSE EIGHT HUNDRED IN BATTLE WITH JAPANESE SOUTH OF NEWCHWANG.

Latter Make a False Retreat, the Czar's Troops Hotly Following, Only to Be Caught in an Ambuscade as the Result of a Flank Movement on the Part of the Japanese—Russians Forced to Abandon Yinkow.

Newchwang, June 14.—Information has been received here through heretofore reliable channels that part of the Japanese force left at Pulanlien to checkmate the Russian southward movement to relieve Port Arthur was attacked southeast of Shuognmso Saturday. After slight fighting the Japanese made a false retreat, the Russians hotly following them, when the Japanese made a flank movement, catching the Russians in a trap. The Russian losses are placed at 800 men. They then fell back on Kaichou and began to retreat along the Baimatgu-Tsaichou road.

About 2,000 Russian infantry from Kaichou passed through Newchwang during the morning, accompanied by a large supply and hospital train. Several carts contained bandaged men. The troops appeared to be fagged out and showed every indication of a long, forced march. The officers refused to furnish any information, but a noncommissioned officer told a correspondent of the Associated Press that all the troops were retreating from Tsaichou. Before he could say anything further he was reprimanded by a captain. Stragglers are closely watched by noncommissioned officers to prevent them from talking.

DRIVE OUT RUSSIANS

JAPANESE WARSHIPS BOMBARD EARTHWORKS AND FORCE RUSSIANS OUT.

Tokio, June 14.—Successful bombardment by Japanese vessels of extensive earthworks thrown up by the Russians in the neighborhood of Yinkow was reported last night. The bombardment drove 3,000 Russians from points along the line of temporary defenses toward the city of Yinkow and at last became so furious that the Russians abandoned the city.

It was directed first toward the Kaiping end of the line, but as the Russians retreated the Japanese line of attack was extended so the czar's troops were pursued for miles along the route by shells from the Japanese ships. A heavy return was made to the Japanese fire by the Russians, who had twenty guns, but the batteries of the enemy were silenced one by one and in many instances the Russians retired so rapidly they were unable to take their cannon with them.

An attempt was made by the Russians to rally, and brief reply to the bombardment was made from Yinkow itself, but the Japanese fire increased in severity, and a few hours after the Russians were in full retreat.

OF STRATEGIC VALUE

TOWNS OF SAIMATSZA AND SIU-YEN, RECENTLY OCCUPIED BY JAPANESE.

Tokio, June 11.—The town of Siu-yen, now occupied by the Japanese army, is of great strategical importance, being situated about forty miles east by south of Kaiping and forty-five miles southeast of Haicheng.

Saimatsza is also an important point, as it controls the roads to Liaoyang and Mukden. By following this route the Maotienling pass, a strongly fortified and almost impregnable Russian stronghold, will be avoided on the advance of the Japanese army northward.

BLOCKADING NEWCHWANG.

Japs Keeping a Strict Watch Over That City's Harbor.

London, June 13.—The Times' Chefoo correspondent, telegraphing under date of June 12, says:

"I have just returned from Newchwang, where the Japanese have established a strict blockade. I was twice stopped and searched.

"There was fighting on June 8 on the coast twenty miles south of Newchwang.

"General Kuropatkin is receiving four or five troop trains daily.

"Japanese reinforcements are arriving for the attack on Port Arthur."

KILLED AT NANSHAN HILL.

Russians Left Over Seven Hundred Dead on the Field.

Tokio, June 13.—The military commission assigned to bury the Russian dead in the battle of Nanshan hill at Kinchou, May 26, presented its final report Saturday.

It was found that 10 Russian officers and 664 men who fell in the battle had been carefully buried and thirty men were buried by the outposts, making the total number of killed left behind by the Russians 704.

Second Jap Loan a Success.

New York, June 13.—The first day's subscription to the second domestic loan aggregated $46,000,000, says a Times dispatch from Tokio, in Tokio, Osaka and Yokohama alone, the emperor again subscribing $10,000,000. The total issue is $50,000,000.

Brother of Late President Found Dead in a Chair.

Somerset, Pa., June 13.—Abner McKinley, brother of the late president, was found dead in a chair in his home at 8 a. m. His death came without warning to his family. His colored servant, who slept in his room, was up with him at 2 o'clock and it is not known at what time Mr. McKinley got up again, as he did not waken his servant. Mrs. McKinley walked into his room at 8 o'clock and found him sitting in a chair, cold and apparently dead. A physician was summoned, who said death had probably occurred two or three hours before.

Mr. McKinley's death was due to Brights' disease, which developed shortly after the death of his distinguished brother three years ago.

The chamber appointed thirty-three deputies to make a full investigation.

UNIONISTS DEPORTED

SCORES OF MINERS PUT ABOARD SPECIAL TRAIN AND SENT OUT OF COLORADO.

Men Marched to the Station Between Heavy Lines of Military and Taken to the Kansas State Line—Relatives of the Deported Unionists Gather at the Station but Are Not Allowed a Final Farewell.

Victor, Colo., June 11.—Acting under the orders of Adjutant General Sherman Bell of the state national guard a special train was made up shortly after noon Friday in the Short Line yards at Victor for the deportation of seventy-six union miners. The train was composed of a combination baggage car and two day coaches. Almost immediately the work of loading the men began. They were marched to the train between heavy lines of military and deputies. A crowd of fully 1,000 people had collected to see the men placed on board. Among the spectators were wives and sisters, fathers and mothers of the deported men and the scenes were very affecting. Mothers, sisters and sweethearts cried goodbye and tried to push through the lines for a parting handshake. Most of the women had been allowed to see their relatives at Armory hall before the men were marched out.

Mayor Harris of Colorado Springs had been apprised of the decision to deport the men and immediately took steps to see that none of them landed in Colorado Springs. Under his instructions a large force of officers and deputy sheriffs met the special train at 6:10 p. m. for that purpose. No attempt was made, however, to unload the men there, arrangements having previously been made to send them to the Kansas state line, over the Santa Fe, because of protests made against taking them to Pueblo or Denver and leaving them there.

The train stopped long enough at Colorado Springs to give the soldiers time to eat. The deported men had rations of beans and bread on board.

Syracuse, Kan., June 11.—Seventy-six deported Victor (Colo.) miners, sent out from their state on a special train in charge of half a hundred Colorado militiamen, were literally dumped into Kansas during the day and left destitute upon the prairie. With a parting volley, fired into the air, the militiamen deserted their charges and returned west. Later the unfortunate miners were turned back to Colorado by an armed Kansas sheriff and forty deputies.

MINES ARE RESUMING.

Cripple Creek Plants Reopen After a Week's Idleness.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 13.—Practically all the large mines in this district which closed down a week ago after the explosion at Independence are again working. The Portland mine has not yet been reopened and the company has not announced its plans. This is the only large mine in the district in which union miners have been employed during the ten months since the beginning of the strike. It has been conducted on the "open shop" plan and nearly half the force of 400 men laid off when General Sherman M. Bell ordered the mines shut down were nonunion miners. General Bell declares that no members of the Western Federation of Miners will be permitted to remain in the camp and that the Portland company consequently will be forced to fall in line with the policy of the other mine owners who organized to fight the miners' federation.

About 125 men are in the bullpen at the present time. A list for deportation has been made out to be presented to General Bell. The total number who will be sent out will be between fifty and seventy-five, if the list which has been prepared is not amended by General Bell.

The destination of the new party to be deported is not officially announced and will not be until the train is well outside the district. It is understood, however, that the men will be taken either to New Mexico or Utah.

in to them. I got a good many masks off before it was over, and I can swear to quite a number besides those I told you."

He named the men slowly and carefully. Then he went on: "I think they gave up the notion of whipping. We all got into a bunch, and they couldn't get clear to shoot without hitting some of their own, and there was a lot of gouging and kicking. One fellow nearly got my left eye, and I tried to tear him apart, and he screamed a good deal. Once or twice I thought I might get away, but somebody hammered me over the head and face again, and I got dizzy, and then they all jumped away from me suddenly, and Bob Skillett stepped up and—and shot me. He waited for a flurry of lightning, and I was slow tumbling down. Some one else fired a shotgun, I think, I can't be sure, about the same time from the side. I tried to get up, but I couldn't, and then they got together for a consultation. The man I had hurt—I didn't recognize him—came and looked at me. He was nursing himself all over and groaned, and I laughed, I think; at any rate my arm was lying stretched out on the grass, and he stamped his heel into my hand, and after a little of that I quit feeling.

"I'm not quite clear about what happened afterward. They went away—not far, I think. There's an old shed, a cattle shelter, near there, and I think the storm drove them under it to wait for a slack. It seemed a long time. Sometimes I was conscious, sometimes I wasn't. I thought I might be drowned, but I suppose the rain was good for me. Then I remember being in motion, being dragged and carried a long way. They carried me up a steep, short slope and set me down near the top. I knew that was the railroad embankment, and I thought they meant to lay me across the track, but it didn't occur to them—they are not familiar with melodrama—and a long time after that I felt and heard a great banging and rattling under me and all about me, and it came to me that they had disposed of me by hoisting me into an empty freight car. The odd part of it was that the car wasn't empty, for there were two men already in it, and I knew them by what they said to me.

"They were the two shell men that cheated Hartley Bowlder, and they weren't vindictive. They even seemed to be trying to help me a little, though perhaps they were only stealing my clothes, and maybe they thought for them to do anything unpleasant would be superfluous. I could see that they thought I was done for and that they had been hiding in the car when I was put there. I asked them to try to call the trainmen for me, but they wouldn't listen or else I couldn't make myself understood. That's all. The rest is a blur. I haven't known anything more until those surgeons were here. Please tell me how long ago it happened. I shall not die, I think. There are a good many things I want to know about." He moved restlessly, and the nurse soothed him.

Meredith rose and left the room with a noiseless step. He went out to the stars again and looked to them to check the storm of rage and sorrow that buffeted his bosom. He understood lynching, now the thing was home to him, and his feeling was no inspiration of a fear lest the law miscarry. It was the itch to get his own hand on the rope. Horner came out presently and whispered a long, broad, profound curse upon the men of the Crossroads, and Meredith's gratitude to him was keen. Barrett went away soon after, and Meredith had a strange, unreasonable desire to kick Barrett, possibly for his sergeant's sake. Warren Smith sat in the ward with the nurse and Gay, and the room was very quiet. It was a long vigil. They were only waiting.

At 5 o'clock he was still alive—just that, Smith came out to say. Meredith sent a telegram to Helen which would give Plattville the news that Harkless was found and was not yet gone from them. Horner left for the station to catch a train. There were things for him to do in Carlow. At noon Meredith sent a second telegram to Helen as barren of detail as the first. He was alive; was a little improved. But this telegram did not reach her, for she was on the way to Rouen, and half of the population of Carlow—at least so it seemed to the unhappy conductor of the accommodation—was with her.

They seemed to feel that they could camp in the hospital halls and corridors, and they were an incalculable worry to the authorities. More came on every train, and nearly all brought flowers and jelly and chickens for preparing broth, and they insisted that the two latter delicacies be fed to the patient at once. They were still in ignorance of the truth about the Crossroads and spent the day (it was Sunday) partly in getting in the way of the attendants and partly in planning an assault upon the Rouen jail for the purpose of lynching Slattery in case Harkless' condition did not improve at once. Those who had heard his statement kept close mouths until the story appeared in full in the Rouen papers on Monday morning. But by that time every member of the Crossroads White Caps was lodged in the Rouen jail with Slattery. Horner and a heavily armed posse rode over to the muddy corners on Sunday night, and the sheriff discovered that he might have taken the Skilletts and Johnsons single handed and unarmed. Their nerve was gone. They were shaken and afraid, and, to employ a figure somewhat inappropriate to their sullen, glad surrender, they fell upon his neck in their relief at finding the law touching them. They had no wish to hear "John Brown's Body" again. They wanted to get inside of a strong jail and to throw themselves on the mercy of the court as soon as possible. And those whom Harkless had not recognized made no delay in giving themselves up. They did not wish to remain in Six Crossroads. Bob Skillett, Force Johnson and one or two others needed the care of a physician badly, and one man was suffering from a severely wrenched back. Horner had a train stopped at a crossing so that his prisoners need not be taken through Plattville, and he brought them all safely to Rouen.

It took nearly a week to persuade the people of Plattville that it was better for them to go home, and it was only the confidence inspired by the manner of the two eminent surgeons (they lay in wait at all hours to interview these gentlemen) that did persuade them to return—this and the promise of two daily bulletins.

As many of them said on their return, Plattville didn't "feel like the same place," and a strange thing had happened—for the first time in five years the Carlow County Herald missed fire altogether. Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday passed. Mr. Fisbee only sat staring out of the dingy office windows with Parker in a demented silence. There was no Herald; there was no one to get it out.

In the Rouen hospital John Harkless feebly moved on his bed of pain. His constant delusion was that the universe was a vast, white heated brass bell and he a point at the center of it, listening, listening for years, to the brazen hum it gave off and burning in hot waves of sound.

Finally he came to what he would have considered a lucid interval had it not appeared that Helen Sherwood was whispering to Tom Meredith at the foot of his bed. This he knew to be a fictitious presentation of his fever, for was she not by this time away and away for foreign lands? And also Tom Meredith was a slim young thing and not a middle aged youth with an undeniable stomach and a baldish head who by the preposterous necromancy of fever assumed a grotesque likeness of his old friend. He waved his hand to the figures, and they vanished like figments of a dream; but, all the same, the vision had been realistic enough for the lady to look exquisitely pretty. No one could help wishing to stay in a world which contained as charming a picture as that.

But the next night Meredith waited near his bedside, haggard and disheveled. Harkless had been lying in a long stupor. Suddenly he spoke, quite loudly, and the young surgeon, Gay, who leaned over him, remembered the words and the tone all his life.

"Away—and away—across the waters," said John Harkless. "She was here—once—in June."

"What is it, John?" whispered Meredith huskily. "You're feeling easier, aren't you?"

And John smiled a little, as if, for the moment, he saw and knew his old friend again.

That same night a friend of Rodney McCune's sent a telegram from Rouen: "He is dying. His paper is dead. Your name goes before convention in September."

CHAPTER XI.

MR. ROSS SCHOFIELD was engaged in decorating the battered chairs in the Herald editorial room with blue satin ribbon, the purchase of which at the Dry Goods Emporium had been directed by a sudden inspiration of his superior, Mr. Parker of the composing force. It was Ross' intention to garnish each chair with an elaborately tied bow, but as he was no sailor and understood only the intricacies of a hard knot he confined himself to that species of ornamentation, leaving, however, very long ends of ribbon hanging down after the manner of the pendants of rosettes. Mr. Schofield was alone at his labor, his two confreres having betaken themselves to the station to meet the train from Rouen.

It was a wet, gray day. The wide country lay dripping under formless wraps of thin mist, and the warm, drizzling rain blackened the weather beaten shingles of the station, made clear reflecting puddles on the unevenly worn planks of the platform and dampened the packing cases too thoroughly for occupation by the station lounger. The bus driver, Mr. Bennett, and the proprietors of two attendant "cut unders" and three or four other worthies whom business or the lack of it called to that locality availed themselves of the shelter of the waiting room, but the gentlemen of the Herald were too agitated to be confined save by the limits of the horizon.

They had reached the station half an hour before train time and consumed the interval in pacing the platform under a big cotton umbrella, addressing each other only in monosyllables. Those in the waiting room gossiped eagerly and for the thousandth time about the late events and particularly about the tremendous news of Fisbee. Judd Bennett looked out through the rainy doorway at the latter with reverence and a fine pride of townsmanship. He declared it to be his belief that Fisbee and Parker were waiting for her now.

For all Carlow knew why Fisbee had gone to meet the strange lady at the station when she had come to visit the Briscoes, why he had come with her to the lecture, why he had taken supper at the Briscoes' three times and dinner twice when she was there. Fisbee had told the story to Parker on a melancholy afternoon as they sat together in the Herald office, and Parker had told the town. It was simple enough indeed, and Fisbee's past was a mystery no longer. It might have been revealed years before had there been anything in particular to reveal and if it had ever occurred to Fisbee to talk of himself and his affairs. Things had a habit of not occurring to Fisbee.

Mr. Parker, very nervous himself, felt his companion's elbow trembling against his own as the great engine, reeking in the mist and sending great clouds of white vapor up to the sky, swooped down the track, rushed by them and came to a standstill beyond the platform. Fisbee and the foreman made haste to the nearest vestibule and were gazing blankly at its barred approaches when they heard a silvery laugh behind them and an exclamation.

"Upstairs and downstairs and in my lady's chamber! Just behind you, dear!"

Turning quickly, the foreman beheld a blushing and smiling little vision, a vision with light brown hair, a vision enveloped in a light brown rain cloak and with brown gloves from which the handles of a big brown traveling bag were let fall as the vision disappeared under the cotton umbrella, while the smitten Judd Bennett reeled gasping against the station.

"Dearest," the girl cried to the old man, "you should have been looking for me between the devil and the deep sea, the parlor car and the smoker! I've given up cigars, and I've begun to study economy, so I didn't come on either!"

The drizzle and mist blew in under the top of the "cut under" as they drove rapidly into town, and bright little drops sparkled on the fair hair above the new editor's forehead and on the long lashes above the new editor's cheeks. She shook these transient gems off lightly as she paused in the doorway of the office at the top of the rickety stairway.

Mr. Schofield had just added the last touch to his decorations and managed to slide into his coat as the party came up the stairs, and now, perspiring, proud, embarrassed, he assumed an attitude at once deprecatory of his endeavors and paintedly expectant of commendations for the results. (He was a modest youth and conscious. After his first sight of her as she stood in the doorway it was several days before he could lift his distressed eyes under the new editor's glance or, indeed, dare to avail himself of more than a hasty and fluttering stare at her when her back was turned.) As she entered the room he sidled along the wall and laughed sheepishly at nothing.

Every chair in the room was ornamented with one of his blue rosettes, tied carefully and firmly to the middle slat of each chair back. There had been several yards of ribbon left over, and there was a hard knot of glassy satin on each of the inkstands and on the doorknobs. A blue band passing around the stovepipe lent it an antique rakishness suggestive of the charioteer, and a number of streamers suspended from a hook in the ceiling encouraged a supposition that the employees of the Herald were contemplating the intricate festivities of May day. It needed no ghost to infer that these garnitures had not embellished the editorial chamber during Mr. Harkless' activity, but, on the contrary, had been put in place that very morning. Mr. Fisbee had not known of the decorations, and as his eye fell upon them a faint look of pain passed over his brow. But the girl examined the room with a dancing eye, and there were both tears and laughter in her heart.

"How beautiful!" she cried. "How beautiful!" She crossed the room and gave her hand to Ross. "It is Mr. Schofield, isn't it? The ribbons are delightful. I didn't know Mr. Harkless' room was so pretty."

Ross looked out of the window and laughed as he took her hand, which he shook with a long up and down motion, but he was set at better ease by her apparent unconsciousness of the fact that the decorations were for her. "Oh, it ain't much, I reckon," he replied, and continued to look out of the window and laugh.

She went to the desk and removed her gloves and laid her rain cloak over a chair near by. "Is this Mr. Harkless' chair?" she asked, and, Fisbee answering that it was, she looked gravely at it for a moment, passed her hand gently over the back of it and then, throwing the rain cloak over another chair, said cheerily:

"Do you know, I think the first thing for us to do will be to dust everything very carefully?"

"You remember, I was confident she would know precisely where to begin," was Fisbee's earnest whisper in the willing ear of the long foreman. "Not an instant's indecision, was there?"

"No, siree," replied the other, and as he went down to the pressroom to hunt for a feather duster which he thought might be found there he collared Bud Tipworthy, the devil, who, not admitted to the conclave of his superiors,

Judge William Watts, of Crookston, will be a candidate before the people for re-election this year, but The Gazette can't see where he will have to exert any effort to be elected. There isn't a Judicial district in Minnesota with more competent jurisists on the bench than the Fourteenth, and the people will see that they are retained there by handsome majorities.

The total appropriation of the last Congress, not including the Panama canal deal, is placed at $800,000,000 more than $50,000,000 more than the previous session. The chief increase is in naval and military expenses. It is nice to be an American citizen and to feel that you are a world power, but this nation has a billious headache coming if it don't sober up before long, says the Big Fork Compass.

The primary election laws have been so changed that town clerks that live beyond fifteen miles of the county seat are not required to appear in person for their books, blanks and election supplies. The county auditor is authorized by the change to express or send by mail all supplies needed by clerks who live more than 15 miles from the city and judges of election also, who are beyond the 15 mile limit, many send the returns in a similar manner.

"Some women take less care in selecting a husband than a dog fancier does in choosing a litter of pups," declared a prominent judge recently as he was about to grant a divorce. "If I had my way, "he continued, as he jabbed his pen viciously into the ink well, "I would change the laws so that people would exhibit more prudence about rushing into matrimony. It is my experience that most of the divorce cases grow out of marriages where the parties haven't had time to get acquainted with each other."

Mr. "Dooley," who is acredited with lots of funny sayings, gets off this bit of quaint philosophy: "Opporchunity knocks at ivery man's dure wanst. On some men's dures it hammers till it breaks down th' dure an' thin it goes in an' wakes him up if he's asleep, and aftherward it wurrks f'r him as a night watchman. On other men's dures it knocks and runs away, an' on th' dures iv some men it knocks an' whin they come out it hits thim over the head wid an ax. But iverywan has an opporchunity."

The Democratic State Convention to select delegates to the National convention to be held at St. Louis, July 6th, will be held at Duluth on June 22nd. The official call for the convention announces that the convention will be called to order at 11 a. m., but the hour has been changed to 2:30 p. m. The railroads have made the following rates to the convention: 1. A fare of one rate plus fifty cents from any point in Minnesota and return. 2. A rate of one fare plus fifty cents from any point in southern Minnesota to St. Paul and return and a rate of $3.00 from St. Paul, Minneapolis or Stillwater to Duluth and return. The Duluth Commercial club will make all arrangements to look after the delegates and visitors to that city at the time of the convention.

This beautiful Decoration day tribute is found in the LeSeuer News: "Sometimes in passing along the street I meet a man who, in the left lapel of his coat, wears a little, plain, modest, unassuming bronze button. The coat is often old and rusty; the face above seamed and furrowed by the toil and suffering of adverse years; perhaps beside it hangs an empty sleeve, and below it stumps a wooden peg. But when I meet the man who wears that button, I doff my hat and stand uncovered in his presence—yea! to me the very dust his weary feet have pressed is holy ground; for I know that man, in the dark hour of the nation's peril, bared his breast to the hell of battle to keep the flag of our country in the Union sky."

Several of the Valley papers have been "fearing that Congressman Steenerson has made a serious mistake" in naming his brother as postmaster at Crookston, but the stalwart Congressman isn't worrying a bit over their harpings. It was the wish of the majority of the patrons of the Crookston office, outside of the one ring that are laying in wait to get Congressman Steenerson's scalp, that Elias Steenerson be given the place, and the act of the Congressman in emphatically setting down on the ring of would-be dictators of Polk county should strengthen him with the people at large. The time should be past when a few guns at Crookston are allowed to dictate to the representative of the Ninth District, and The Gazette is pleased to note that Mr. Steenerson has taken the intiatory in "showing them."

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes:—For the past five yeers I have suffered with Asthme almost constantly. I wae so nervous at timee, I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are elweys subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr Mann, a local druggist, called my ettention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical es I hed tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle end the cure it effected seems almost mireculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recomend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be gled to reply to enquiries regarding my case. A. L. Reichert.

BARRED FROM THE LANDS.

Commissioner Richards Sent Out Letters Telling Who May Not File.

The general land office is sending out one of the largest maps ever prepared at the department. It is a reproduction of the Red Lake Indian reservation covering eleven townships and it is to be used by the auctioneer who will begin selling Red Lake lands on June 20. Each tract of 160 acres is brought out in relief for the benefit of all bidders who may attend the sale. The map will require good-sized building to permit its being properly shown. In addition 5,000 small maps are being prepared for the use of bidders to check off as lands are disposed of.

Commissioner Richards has issued the following additional circular stating that the following persons are not qualified to make homestead entry in Red Lake ceded lands:

First—Any person who has made a homestead entry after Feb. 20, 1904, and is not entitled to make another entry under the act of April 28, 1904.

Second—A married woman, unless she has been deserted or abandoned by her husband.

Third—One not a citizen of the United States and who has not declared his intention to become such.

Fourth—Any one under 21 years of age, not the head of the family unless he served in the army or navy of the United States for not less than fourteen days during actual war.

Sixth—One who has acquired title to, or is now claiming under any of the agricultural public land laws, in pursuance of settlement or entries made since Aug. 30, 1890, an amount of land which, with tract now sought to be entered, will exceed in aggregate 320 acres.

WILL CASE DECIDED.

Judge Tarrant Finds That Miss Peterson Was Not Rapp's Wife.

The final hearing in the Rapp will contest case, in which Miss Bertha Peterson, of Thief River Falls, claimed to be the common-law wife of the late Chas. G. Rapp, of St. Hilaire, and contested the will left by him, was held before Judge Tarrant last Wednesday afternoon, but the decision was not rendered until late Thursday.

Judge Tarrant refused to grant the petition of the contestant, and his findings of fact were as follows:

That no ceremony of marriage wer ever performed whereby said petitioner was married to Chas. G. Rapp, deceased.

That common-law marriages do not exist in and are prohibited by the laws of the state of California.

That said petitioner is not the widow and was not the wife of said Chas. G. Rapp.

The conclusions of law are that "the petitioner is not entitled to participate in his estate; that her petition is and the same is hereby denied, and the same is hereby ordered."

Messrs. and Mesdames J. B. Armstrong and J.J.A. Duffy spent last Sunday at Maple Lake.

Miss Anna Esing, Chicago's favorite singer, 12 years of age, will appear as a special feature with Eilers Big Rip Van Winkle company, June 23, under canvass.

Joseph McCaffery arrived here from St. Paul Tuesday, and has again entered the employ of Ed. L. Healy Land company as stenographer. Joe has a great big circle of friends here that are more than pleased to have him with us again, and the girls are just simply tickled to death.

The marriage of Dr. J. E. Argue and Miss Elizabeth Hunt is announced for Wednesday, June 29, and the many friends of the young people are already showering them with congratulations and well-wishes. The contracting parties are probably as favorably known as any young people in Red Lake county, and are held in high esteem by the people. Dr. Argue is one of Red Lake Falls' successful dentists, and by the practice of excellent traits has built up a lucrative business and extensive friendship. The bride is the eldest daughter of a family that were pioneers in this section, and has always been considered one of Red Lake Falls' most accomplished and respected daughters. The Gazette is pleased to be able to chronicle the approaching union of a couple as worthy in every way, and knows that their lives will be filled with happiness if the well wishes of a large number of friends will make it so.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Sheriff Dan Linnihan spent a couple of days at up-river points this week.

W. A. Schreiter was a visitor at Thief River Falls over Monday night.

J. M. and Zatique Bray spent Tuesday night with relatives at Crookston.

Paste this in your hat in several places. Red Lake Falls will celebrate July 4.

Charles Olson was in from Poplar River township yesterday on a business mission.

And while you are talking about it just mention that Red Lake Falls will celebrate the Fourth.

Mrs. A. L. Reichert left Tuesday for a visit of a month or two at her parents' home in Mayville, Wisconsin.

Miss Flora Carter, the nightingale whistler, will appear between acts with Eiler's Rip Van Winkle company, under canvass, June 23rd.

Harry B. Healy visited Maple Lake Sunday. (Note—This local will be left intact for the next several weeks, and a prize is offered for the solution of the problem.)

Mrs. John E. King and children leave this week for a visit at Adrian, this state, and her old home at Laketon, Indiana. They will be absent about six weeks.

Several car loads of bridge timbers for use on the new Soo line out east were unloaded at the Great Northern depot here this week, and will be hauled out by team.

First communion will be held at St. Joseph's church on Sunday the 26th inst., at which time a class of 64 young people will take their first step towards becoming confirmed Christians. The services will be conducted by Rev. Father Fayolle, at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, June 26.

The Red Lake Falls band of twenty-eight pieces, in full uniform, will be one of the Fourth of July features at the celebration here. This should prove as great a drawing card as anything, for a concert like the one that will be given on that day will be worth coming a long way to hear.

Henry W. Anderson returned Tuesday morning from a visit of a week with his parents at St. Paul. It had been rumored about town that H. W. would bring back one who would share his joys and sorrows for life, but the rumor proved unfounded, greatly to the gratification of the Red Lake Falls lassies.

Try The Big Store for your Shoes. The St. Cecilia for women at $3.50 has no equal anywhere—they have the style that appeals to the good dressers. Our Saranac at $2.50 is easily worth $3.00. Other stores would sell it for that, but we make a specialty of that Shoe. Budd's Children Shoes are the best by test.

Joe Benoit this week purchased a gasoline engine of Joseph Helm, and will use it to run his carding mill. The gasoline engine is fast coming into use as a cheap and handy power, and the day is not far distant when practically every farmer will have one to do the bulk of his work. Mr. Helm has disposed of quite a number during the past year.

Tom Green and wife left yesterday for North Dakota, to spend a greater share of the summer. Mrs. Green went to Grand Forks to attend the commencement exercises at the University, while Tom went to Lakota to do a stroke of business for a week or more. Mrs. Green will later go to her home at Forest River, and they will probably not return here before fall.

Rev. Father Fayolle informs The Gazette that the commencement exercises of St. Joseph's school will be held sometime the latter part of the month, the date to be announced later. Quite a large class will be given diplomas, and Father Fayolle will deliver a brief address. The exercises will not be public, only the parents and family of the scholars being invited.

Alex A. Bergeron was in from Lambert yesterday and found time to call at The Gazette office. Mr. Bergeron and family will leave within the next couple of weeks for Illinois, where they will spend a greater share of the summer visiting relatives and enjoying a vacation. Mr. Bergeron will also visit the World's Fair at St. Louis before returning. His son will have charge of the farm during his absence.

Congressman Steenerson has recommended Arthur Laniel, of Poplar River township, for postmaster at Brooks, P. O., in place of Cyrille Lusier, resigned. There was quite a lively scramble for the place, Mrs. H. L. Preuo, of the same town, being also an aspirant. The office at the present time is not very important, but it is expected that when the Soo reaches there that there will be a much larger business done and the salary will naturally be more of an object. Mr. Laniel is the town clerk Poplar River and is a popular young man of that section.

Miss Etta Zaiser was at St. Hilaire Tuesday.

Mrs. J. B. O'Brien, of St. Hilaire, spent several days of this week the guest of Miss Ellen Brady.

Mankato Commercial College, Mankato, Minn., will help you to make money. Write for catalogue.

Governor Van Sant has offered a reward of $250 for the murderer of J. C. Sullivan, who disappeared from Blackduck about a year ago. No clue has ever been discovered as to what became of him, but the theory that he met foul play has been generally credited.

A state bank is being organized at Winger, in eastern Polk county on the Soo line, with Gilbert A. Brattland as cashier. With him will be associated a number of bankers from Norman county. They expect to open up for business as soon as organization is completed.

Frank Jellers left Monday for Pipestone where he will represent the Red Lake Falls fire department at the state firemen's tournament, held there this week. He will also attend the Grand Lodge of the Maccabees at St. Paul before returning. Mrs Jellers accompanied him as far as Fergus Falls, at which place she will visit relatives several weeks.

Phil A. Kaufer, formerly publisher of The Gazette, but now of Tacoma, Washington, writes friends here that he expects to visit this section of the world on business matters sometime in July. Prosperity has shone on Mr. Kaufer during his residence here, but there are a great many who believe that he has always regretted leaving the best town in the country.

Manager Berthon, of the band organization, this week ordered the trousers and remaining coats and caps for the band, and it is expected that the appearance on the Fourth of July will be marked by the members coming out in full uniform. The trousers are black, with a black braid down the side, and are made to match the coats, and it is safe to say that there isn't a band in the state whose uniforms are prettier or make a neater appearance that those of the Red Lake Falls organization.

When people deal with these large catalog houses in Chicago and other cities they not only pay more for the goods but as a rule get an inferior article. The home merchant should always be patronized. He invariably carries a complete stock in his line and if there is anything he has not got he can get it and will be glad to do so. There are many reasons why the home merchant should be favored. Those catalog houses do not help to build up your town or pay towards the expense of building sidewalks or any other improvements. This practice of "dealing in the dark" should be discouraged.

The residents of that peaceful summer resort, Maple Lake, have something to talk about this week, at least, and one could no doubt hear a fish story of any magnitude if he cared to listen to the conversation there a few hours. It appears that the lovers of angling for finny monsters have had deucedly hard luck so far this season, and a catch of a couple of inch-long perch has been heralded as a wonderful accomplishment, so that the natives have given up attempts to catch any fish. When Harry Healy arrived there last Sunday, however, he and a friend rowed off down the lake for a few hours fish, and when they returned the denizens of the lake shore were suprised and dumfounded to see them bring in a string of some twenty nice pike. The story is told and retold there this week, but a gentle bird whispers softly so that the Maple Lakers wont hear it that if pike had not been so plentiful in the Clearwater and Red Lake here this season the remarkable catch would not have occured. The joke is surely on the lakeites.

The Busy Store sells Ladies vests at 4c.

Don't forget the grand concert at the Metropolitan tomorrow evening.

H. N. Johnson came in from Park River Saturday evening and remained until yesterday morning with friends here.

The Busy Store received a new line of white goods, veiling and slippers for confirmation on which special inducements are offered. Choice lawns as cheap as 8c per yard.

Miss Olga Wetzel left last Friday evening for her home at Sauk Rapids, to spend the summer vacation. Miss Wetzel will not return here this fall, but has many friends who will hope that she may ever be successful.

Mrs. W. P. O'Brien will go to Crookston Saturday to visit with relatives over Sunday. She will be accompanied home by Miss Marie O'Brien, of Belvidere, Ill., a sister of Mr. O'Brien's, who will visit here several weeks.

Red Lake Falls furnished a large quota of Maple Lake visitors last Sunday. The resort was formally opened that day and a large number of people were there. The weather was a little too cool for real enjoyment, but they all report a good time nevertheless.

The Big Store is daily receiving the latest novelties of the season. New Girdle belts, Waist Sets, Crush Kid Belts, the swellest line of Embroidered Collars, Cross Stitch and Roumanian styles, "Peggy from Paris" Bags, etc. Go to headquarters for the latest.

Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Knox went to Thief River Falls yesterday to attend the meeting of the Adams Presbytery, at which time the Rev. Nicoll will be ordained and installed as pastor of the Presbyterian church of that city. They will remain the guests of friends there until tomorrow.

Joseph Salley has commenced the erection of a coal shed near the Great Northern depot, and will be ready to supply coal of any kind to the people within a few days. Mr. Salley handled a great deal of coal from cars last season, and built up such a good trade that he thought the easiest way would be to erect a shed and keep a full supply at all times.

The local orchestra is planing an outing of a week at Maple Lake sometime during the next month, and if everything turns out as planned they will certainly have a good time. It is their intention to rent a cottage and live like princes of the realm, while with their instruments they would bring delight to the hearts of the Lakeites. The trip holds out prospects of a highly enjoyable time, and the friends of the boys hope they will be able to make it.

Dr. N. M. Watson will leave this afternoon for Chicago, where as an alternate to the National Republican convention from the Ninth district, he will witness the nomination for president of that grandest American and patriot—Theodore Roosevelt. Red Lake Falls has reason to feel highly flattered at having a representative in that great gathering, and it is safe to assert that a more able or enthusiastic citizen could not have been found to do the honors

That Red Lake Falls dealers reach out after business and get it is evidenced by the sale of six lawn swings from the Helm Machinery emporium to St. John's University in Stearns county. During his visit here last week, Abbot Engel became greatly impressed with these swings, and Mr. Helm convinced him easily that his prices were right, with the result that the Abbot ordered half a dozen sent to the college. The sale was a splendid ad for Mr. Helm and also for Red Lake Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Mizen expect to leave about the 25th of the present month for a pleasure trip of several weeks, and look forward to their journey with pleasant anticipation. They will first visit the World's Fair at St. Louis, and from their they will go to Toledo, Ohio, to spend some time with Mr. Mizen's parents. From Toledo they will return to Duluth via the great lakes, and back home by rail. The trip will be one that should be immensely enjoyable, and the friends of the couple will hope that they will appreciate it to its fullest measure.

Good prints can be had at the Busy Store for one week, at 4½c per yard.

Mothers! Red School House shoes have quality, appearance and economy. Make the childrens feet glad by trying on a pair.—Garceau & Zaiser.

The open air concert by the local band organization last Friday evening, was listened to by a large number of people, and pronounced first-class by those who heard it.

S. C. Nauman contemplates a trip to the World's Fair at St. Louis in July. He will also visit his girl in Illnois while away, his home town being only 85 miles from St. Louis.

The concert at the Metropolitan opera house tomorrow (Friday) evening, should draw a crowd of gigantic proportions, and it is an assured fact that they will be royally entertained.

Peter Miller arrived here last Friday for a visit with his parents and friends, after an absence of over a year at various points in Minnesota. Pete looks well and says that he has been prosperous, but still thinks that Red Lake Falls is the only town worth living in.

St. Hilaire Spectator: P. G. Paradis has decided to move away from here this summer and make his future home on his farm in Yakima, Washington. He has rented his saloon premises to Mike Anderson and John Maakrud, who have made an application for license and will carry on the business for the ensuing year.

Diligent practice has been under way this week for the grand concert for the benefit of St. Mary's church, which will be given at the Metropolitan opera house Tuesday evening of next week, and the public is looking forward to a grand entertainment. The complete program will be found on another page of today's paper.

Alex Peppin left last Friday for Bemidji, and the next day enlisted in the regular army, through a recruting office in that city. He was assigned to a regiment, and left for the west early this week. Alex is an exemplary young man, and will make a first-class defender of the great and glorious stars and stripes.

Auditor E. J. Herringer, of Ada, will accompany Dr. Watson to Chicago this week, to attend the National Republican convention to be held there next week. Mr. Herringer is an alternate-at large to the convention, and these two handsome and dignified looking gentlemen will certainly fittingly represent the greatest section of the grandest state in the most glorious country of the world.

Crookston Journal: The little son of Mrs. J. Gendron met with a painful accident yesterday. The little fellow, while playing with some other children, was struck on the head with an old rake. Mrs. Gendron was in to consult Dr. Burtelson and it is hoped no serious results will follow. Mrs. Gendron is visiting her mother in the country before going to her home in Grand Rapids, Minn, where the doctor is now located

G. H. Baker, secretary of the state board of barber examiners, will soon begin an extensive tour of the state to detrimine how closely the law is being observed outside of the large cities. It is understood that in the southern and south-western parts of the state the law is being freely violated, and that many unlicensed barbers are working regularly. The state board had a meeting recently and determined to send its secretary out to investigate matters.

Thief River Press: Wiley Tindolph considers himself in a measure avenged on his Red Lake Falls friends for the slurs they have recently cast upon his sound and discriminating judgment in matters feminine. Tuesday H. H. Zaiser, the county seat merchant, came up here and was introduced by Mr. Tindolph to a number of people. Later upon pretext of meeting him at the First National Bank on business, Wiley inveigled the young man into waiting there the greater portion of his time between trains in anticipation of his (Tindolph's) return, the hypnotic influence of a certain pair of bright eyes causing the hours to fly so rapidly that Mr. Zaiser did not realize the passing of the minutes and barely broke away in time to catch his train home.

An Editor to Wed.

Anthony Lafreniere, the bright young editor of the Itasca County Record, will be married next Wednesday at Redwood Falls, to Miss Rose Schumacher, one of the talented young ladies of that city. The couple will probably visit this city in a couple of weeks, and will certainly receive the hearty congratulations of many friends. Mr. Lafreniere was raised in Red Lake Falls, and is known as one of her best young men, while his bride-to-be is a popular young lady of Redwood Falls, and is said to be in every way worthy of the young man with whom she will mate. The Gazette extends congratulations.

A Pretty Party.

In answer to neat invitations twenty-five girls and ladies assembled at the pretty home of Mrs. Emma F. Marshall last Tuesday afternoon to attend a parcel shower given in honor of Miss Elizabeth Hunt. The invitation requested that each one bring a bit of advice on how to raise a husband, and the choice bits of unique philosophy presented proved to be highly interesting, and will be a source of delight to the recipient as an after year remembrance of a pleasing event. The parcels presented to the bride-to-be were beautiful and costly.

The pretty parlors at the Marshall home were daintly decorated, and one of the most pleasing features of the afternoon was the showering of the bride with napkins and and towels on her entrance to the parlors.

Refreshments were served the guests, and a guessing contest was one of the entertaining features, Mrs. J. J. Padden winning the prize as the most skillful guesser.

The guest of honor was the recipient of many well wishes from the assembled party, and all pronounced the afternoon's entertainment as grand.

was whistling on the rainy stairway.

"You hustle and find that dustbrush we used to have, Bud," said Parker. And presently as they rummaged in the nooks and crannies about the machinery he melted to his small assistant. "The paper is saved, Buddie—saved by an angel in light brown. You can tell it by the look of her."

"Gee!" said Bud.

Mr. Schofield had come, blushing, to join them. "Say, Cale, did you notice the color of her eyes?"

"Yes. They're gray."

"I thought so, too, show day and at Kedge Halloway's lecture. But say, Cale, they're kind of changeable. When she come in upstairs with you and Fisbee they were jest as blue—near matched the color of our ribbons."

"Gee!" repeated Mr. Tipworthy.

When the editorial chamber had been made so neat that it almost glowed, though it could never be expected to shine as did Fisbee and Caleb Parker and Ross Schofield that morning, the lady took her seat at the desk and looked over the few items the gentlemen had already compiled for her perusal. Mr. Parker explained many technicalities peculiar to the Carlow Herald, translated some phrases of the printing room and enabled her to grasp the amount of matter needed to fill an issue.

When Parker finished the three incompetents sat watching the little figure with the expression of hopeful and trusting terriers. She knit her brow for a second, but she did not betray an instant's indecision.

"I think we should have regular market reports," she announced earnestly. "I am sure Mr. Harkless would approve. Don't you think he would?" She turned to Parker.

"Market reports!" Mr. Fisbee exclaimed. "I should never have thought of market reports, nor do I imagine would either of my—my associates. A woman to conceive the idea of market reports!"

The editor blushed. "Why, who would, dear, if not a woman or a speculator, and I'm not a speculator, and neither are you, and that's the reason you didn't think of them. So, Mr. Parker, as there is so much pressure, and if you don't mind continuing to act as reporter as well as compositor until after tomorrow, and if it isn't too wet—you must have an umbrella—would it be too much bother if you went around to all the shops—stores, I mean—to all the grocers and the butchers and the leather place we passed, the tannery, and if there's one of those places where they bring cattle, would it be too much to ask you to stop there—and at the flour mill, if it isn't too far, and at the dry goods store—and you must take a blank book and a sharpened pencil, and will you price everything, please, and jot down how much things are?"

Orders received, the impetuous Parker was departing on the instant when she stopped him with a little cry, "But you haven't any umbrella!" And she forced her own, a slender wand, upon him. It bore a cunningly wrought handle, and its fabric was of glistening silk. The foreman, unable to decline it, thanked her awkwardly, and as she turned to speak to Fisbee he bolted out of the door and ran down the steps without unfolding the umbrella, and then as he made for Mr. Martin's emporium he buttoned it securely under his long Prince Albert, determined that not a drop of water should touch and ruin so delicate a thing. Thus he carried it, triumphantly dry, through the course of his reportings of that day.

When he had gone the editor laid her hand on Fisbee's arm. "Dear," she said, "do you think you'd take cold if you went over to the hotel and made a note of all the arrivals for the last week and the departures too? I noticed that Mr. Harkless always filled two or three—sticks, isn't it?—with them and things about them, and somehow it 'read' very nicely. You must ask the landlord all about them, and if there aren't any, we can take up the same amount of space lamenting the dull times, just as he used to. You see, I've read the Herald faithfully. Isn't it a good thing I always subscribed for it?" She patted Fisbee's cheek with her soft hand and laughed gayly into his mild, vague old eyes. "It won't be this scramble to 'fill up' much longer. I have plans, gentlemen, and before long we will print news; and we must buy 'plate matter' instead of patent insides; and I had a talk with the Associated Press people in Rouen, but that's for afterwhile. And I went to the hospital this morning before I left. They wouldn't let me see him again, but they told me all about him, and he's better, and I got Tom to go to the jail, and he saw some of those beasts, and I can do a column of description besides an editorial about them, and I will be fierce enough to suit Carlow, you may believe that. And I've been talking to Senator Burns—that is, listening to Senator Burns, which is much stupider—and I think I can do an article on national politics. I'm not very well up on local issues yet, and I"— She broke off suddenly. "There, I think we can get out tomorrow's number without any trouble. By the time you get back from the hotel, father, I'll have half my—my stuff written—'written up,' I mean. Take your big umbrella and go, dear, and please ask at the express office if a typewriter has come for me."

She laughed again with sheer delight, like a child, and ran to a corner and got the cotton umbrella and placed it in the old man's hand. As he reached the door she called after him, "Wait!" and went to him and knelt before him and, with the humblest, proudest grace in the world, turned up his trousers to keep them from the mud. Ross Schofield had never considered Mr. Fisbee a particularly sacred sort of person, but he did from that moment. The old man made some timid protest at the girl's action, but she answered: "The great ladies used to buckle the Chevalier Bayard's spurs for him, and you're a great deal nicer than the Chev— You haven't any rubbers! I don't believe any of you have any rubbers!" And not until both Fisbee and Mr. Schofield had promised to purchase overshoes at once and in the meantime not to step in any puddles would she let the former depart upon his errand. He crossed the square with the strangest, jauntiest step ever seen in Plattville. Solomon Tibbs had a warm argument with Miss Selina as to his identity, Miss Selina maintaining that the figure under the big umbrella—only the legs and coat tails were visible to them—was that of [illegible] an Englishman.

In the Herald office the editor turned, smiling, to the paper's remaining vassal. "Mr. Schofield, I heard some talk in Rouen of an oil company that had been formed to prospect for kerosene in Carlow county. Do you know anything about it?"

Ross, surfeited with honor, terror, and possessed by a sweet distress at finding himself tete-a-tete with the lady, looked at the wall and replied, "Oh, it's that Eph Watts' foolishness."

"Do you know if they have begun to dig for it yet?"

"Ma'am?" said Ross.

"Have they begun the diggings yet?"

"No, ma'am, I think not. They've got a contrapshun fixed up about three mile south. I don't reckon they've begun yet, hardly. They're gittin' the machinery in place. I heard Eph say they'd begin to bore—dig, I mean, ma'am; I meant to say dig"— He stopped, utterly confused and unhappy, and she understood his manly purpose and knew him for a gentleman whom she liked.

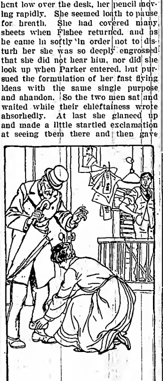
"You mustn't be too much surprised," she said, "but in spite of any ignorance about such things I mean to devote a good deal of space to [illegible] company. It may come to be of [illegible] importance to Carlow. We won't [illegible] it in tomorrow's paper beyond an item or so, but do you think you could possibly find Mr. Watts and ask him for some information as to their progress and if it would be too much trouble for him to call here tomorrow afternoon or the day after? I want him to give me an interview if he will. Tell him, please, he will very greatly oblige us."

"Oh, he'll come all right," answered her companion quickly. "I'll take Tibbs' buggy and go down there right off. Eph won't lose no time gittin' here." And with this encouraging assurance he was flying forth when he, like the others, was detained by her solicitous care. She was a born mother. He protested that in the buggy he would be perfectly sheltered. Besides, there wasn't another umbrella about the place. He liked to get wet anyway; had always loved rain. The end of it was that he went away in a sort of tremor wearing her rain cloak over his shoulders, which garment, as it covered its owner completely when she wore it, hung almost to his knees. He darted around a corner, and there, breathing deeply, tenderly removed it, then borrowing paper and cord at a neighboring store wrapped it neatly and stole back to the printing office, on the ground floor of the Herald building, and left the package in the hands of Bud Tipworthy, charging him to care for it as for his own life and not to open it, but if the lady so much as set one foot out of doors before his return to hand it to her with the message, "He borrowed another off J. Hankins."

Left alone, the lady went to the desk and stood for a time looking gravely at Harkless' chair. She touched it gently, as she had touched it once before that morning, and then she spoke to it as if he were sitting there and as she would not have spoken had he been sitting there.

"You didn't want gratitude, did you?" she whispered, with sad lips.

Soon she smiled at the blue ribbon, patted the chair gayly on the back and, seizing upon pencil and pad, dashed into her work with rare energy. She bent low over the desk, her pencil moving rapidly. She seemed loath to pause for breath. She had covered many sheets when Fisbee returned, and as he came in softly in order not to disturb her she was so deeply engrossed that she did not hear him, nor did she look up when Parker entered, but pursued the formulation of her fast flying ideas with the same single purpose and abandon. So the two men sat and waited while their chieftainess wrote absorbedly. At last she glanced up and made a little startled exclamation at seeing them there and then gave them cheery greeting. Each placed several scribbled sheets before her, and she, having first assured herself that Fisbee had bought his overshoes, and having expressed a fear that Mr. Parker had found her umbrella too small, as he looked damp (and indeed he was damp), cried praises on their notes and offered the reporters great applause.



With the humblest, proudest grace in the world.

"It is all so splendid!" she cried. "How could you do it so quickly? And in the rain too! It is just what we need. I've done most of the things I mentioned, I think, and made a draft of some plans for hereafter. Doesn't it seem to you that it would be a good notion to have a woman's page—'For Feminine Readers' or 'Of Interest to Women'—once a week?"

"A woman's page!" exclaimed Fisbee. "I could never have thought of that. Could you, Mr. Parker?"

Before that day was over system had been introduced, and the Herald was running on it, and all that warm rainy afternoon the editor and Fisbee worked in the editorial rooms. Parker and Bud and Mr. Schofield (after his return with the items and a courteous message from Ephraim Watts) bent over the forms downstairs, and Uncle Xenophon was cleaning the storeroom and scrubbing the floor. An extraordinary number of errands took the various members of the printing force up to see the editor in chief, literally to see the editor in chief. It was hard to believe that the presence had not flown, hard to keep believing without the repeated testimony of sight that the dingy room upstairs was actually the setting for their jewel, and a jewel they swore she was. The printers came down chuckling and gurgling after each interview. It was partly the thought that she belonged to the Herald, their paper. Once Ross, chuckling, looked up and caught the foreman giggling to himself.

"What in the name of common sense you laughin' at, Cale?" he asked.

"What are you laughing at?" rejoined the other.

"I dunno!"

The day wore on, wet and dreary outside, but all within the Herald's bosom was snug and busy and murmurous with the healthy thrum of life and prosperity renewed. Toward 6 o'clock, system accomplished, the new guiding spirit was deliberating on a policy, as Harkless would conceive a policy were he there, when Minnie Briscoe ran joyously up the stairs, plunged into the room waterproofed and radiant and caught her friend in her eager arms and put an end to policy for that day.

But policy and labor did not end at twilight every day. There were evenings, as in the time of Harkless, when lamps shone from the upper windows of the Herald building; for the little editor worked hard, and sometimes she worked late; she always worked early. She made some mistakes at first and one or two blunders which she took much more seriously than any one else did. But she found a remedy for all such results of her inexperience, and she developed experience. She set at her task with the energy of her youthfulness and no limit to her ambition, and she felt that Harkless had prepared the way for a wide expansion of the paper's interests, wider than he knew. She brought a fresh point of view to operate in a situation where he had fallen perhaps too much in the rut, and she watched every chance with a keen eye and looked ahead of her with clear foresight. What she waited and yearned for and dreaded was the time when a copy of the new Herald should be placed in the trembling hands of the man who lay in the Rouen hospital. Then she felt if he, unaware of her identity as he was and as he was to be kept, should place everything in her hands unreservedly, that would be a tribute to her work. And how hard she would labor to deserve it!

After a time she began to see that as his representative and editor of the Herald she had become a factor in district politics. It took her breath, but with a gasp of delight, for there was something she wanted to do.

Rodney McCune had lifted his head, and the friends of his stricken enemy felt that they and the cause that Harkless had labored for were lost without the leader, for the old ring that the Herald had beaten rallied around McCune. "The boys were in line again." Every one knew that Halloway, a dull but honest man, the most available material that Harkless had been able to find, was already beaten. If John Harkless had been "on the ground to work for him," it was said, Halloway could have received the nomination again, but as matters stood he was beaten and beaten badly, and Rodney McCune would sit in congress, for nomination meant election.

But one afternoon the Harkless forces, demoralized, broken, hopeless, woke up to find that they had a leader. There was a political conference at Judge Briscoe's. The politicians descended sadly at the gate from the omnibus that had met the afternoon train—Boswell and Keating, two gentlemen of Amo, and Bence and Shannon, two others of Gaines county, to confer with Warren Smith, Tom Martin, Briscoe and Harkless' representatives, Fisbee and the editor of the Herald. They entered the house gloomily, and the conference began in dejected monosyllables. But presently Minnie Briscoe, sitting on the porch pretending to sew, heard Helen's voice, clear, soft and trembling a little with excitement. She talked for only two or three minutes, but what she said seemed to stir up great commotion among the others. All the voices burst forth at once in exclamations, almost shouts. Then Minnie saw her father, seated near the window, rise and strike the table a great blow with his clinched fist. "Will I make the nominating speech?" he cried. "I'd walk from here to Rouen and back again to do it!"

"We'll swim out!" exclaimed Mr. Keating of Amo. "The wonderful thing is that nobody thought of this before. There are just two difficulties—Halloway and our man himself. H

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

Another New Town.

St. Hilaire Spectator: It is given out as a cold fact that another new town is to be established on the Soo line in this county, and will be located in section 1, of River Falls township. It will look for its support to the reservation, the north half of Wyandotte, east half of River Falls, the fraction east of Rocksbury and a portion of Rocksbury township. It is probable that it will be under the management of Ed. L. Healy, the Red Lake Falls real estate man, and will have a depot, elevator, a couple of stores and a creamery, which will be started instead of the skimming station which now exists there and sends its cream to the St. Hilaire creamery.

If this town be established as outlined above it will be somewhat of a detriment to St. Hilaire, as it will inevitably cut off a lot of trade from the adjoining territory which now comes here and will practically take all east of that large tract of low lying open prairie, the property of a St. Paul land company, which is located just a short distance east of here and which is now and probably always will be, unfit for farming, and which in its present condition is more of a detriment than a benefit.

Advertising That Didn't Pay.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Traveling men, whose territory cover the states of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota, frequently make the statement that with the exception of Crookston, St. Hilaire is the most widely advertised town in northern Minnesota. The writer has heard the statement made more than once, and asking the reason for it was informed that no matter where they would pick up a newspaper they would find Julius Pleth's announcement concerning the opening of the Red Lake reservation, and it is true. for there are but very few papers published in the states named that did not contain that announcement. The making and printing of Mr. Pleth's reservation maps and the advertising of them, and consequently of St. Hilaire, cost him between $2,600 and $3,000. The returns to him so far have been decidedly meagre, and at the best that can possibly result between now and the reservation opening, he figures that his net loss will be considerably over $2,000. This deplorable result was caused purely by the extreme lateness of the season and the unforseen early opening of the reservation, and also the opening of other reservations, not because the advertising was at fault. Mr. Pleth admits this himself and still firmly believes in advertising as the surest way to get business.

CELEBRATION WILL BE SOMETHING GLORIOUS

Committee Hard At Work Making Arrangements to Entertain the People In Royal Style.—Committees Appointed and Plans Formulated.—Plan To Celebrate in Red Lake Falls.

The executive committee to make arrangements for the grand celebration to be held at Red Lake Falls a week from next Monday—July 4—have been putting in some hard work since the last issue, and as a result plans are beginning to shape themselves so that a celebration that will exceed anything promised can be predicted.

The parade will be the first feature of the day's sport, and indications are that this will be immense. Messrs. Ed. L. Healy and S. M. Sivertson, the committee to arrange for floats, have reported that they have promise of about 25 floats, and with the band, civic societies, fire department, ragmuffins and calithumpians, the parade feature should be one that the people will not soon forget.

After the parade the speaking, singing and other exercises willl take place.

It is the intention of the committee to fit up the pretty Clearwater island at the foot of Main street for a picnic ground, and there will be heard the speaking and other exercises after the parade in the morning. John A. Johnson, of St. Peter, editor of the St. Peter Herald, has been engaged as orator of the day, and seats will be provided for the people so that they can listen to his oration and the music with comfort. Mr. Johnson is considered a first class speaker and the committee was fortunate in securing him.

On the island will also be provided tables for use of those who desire to bring their dinners, and this feature will certainly be appreciated by the visitors.

The afternoon will be given over to a ball game, likely between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls, after which the races and sports will be pulled off. Liberal prizes have been offered for all these events and it is a settled fact that they will all be worth witnessing.

After supper the Red Lake Falls cornet band will give a concert of an hour and a half somewhere on the street, following which will come the elegant display of fireworks. A liberal amount of money has been set aside to purchase the necessary fireworks for the display and there is every promise that this will be something that the people have not witnessed before. Dancing and other forms of amusement will also be provided for the night, so that the people can well afford to stay throughout the evening.

The committee are also attempting to arrange for a special train, which if secured will bring in a large number of people from the surrounding towns.

The work of planning the entertainment is in competent hands, and you can rest assured that you will be entertained royally if you make up your mind to celebrate in Red Lake Falls.

The following sub-committees are at work under the direction of the executive committee:

Sports—Frank Jeffers, M. A. Converse, A. L. Reichert, Arthur Mercier, J. J. Padden and F. A. Grady.

Decorations—F. F. Fletcher, George Hennings and A. G. Bjorneby, assisted by the Misses Lillian Buse, Mayme Erickson and Rose Dautremont.

Vocal Music—Sam C. Nauman.

Callithumpians and Rag-Muffins—Verne Healy, Will Hunt, Orson Doe, Ernest Toupin and Albert Lizee.

Floats—S. M. Sivertson and Ed. L. Healy.

Arrange now to help us do things up brown on this great holiday and you will never regret it.

Get your neighbor to come too, and bring his wife and family,

HEARST MEN DEFEATED

Democratic Convention at Duluth Chooses Uninstructed Delegation.—Polk County Has Balance of Power.

Duluth, Minn., June 23—In a fight which lasted until after midnight and outrivaled all of its predecessors the Hearst element of the democratic party went down in defeat tonight and the four delegates at large who will represent Minnesota at the national convention in St. Louis will not be hampered by instructions. John Lind, of Minneapolis, L. A. Rosing, of Cannon Falls, and C. D. O'Brien, of St. Paul, all Parker men, together with H. L. Buck, of Winona, a Hearst supporter, were chosen. Up to the supper hour the Hearst men had the battle won. They secured the organization through the selection of Major J. M. Bowler as chairman and things were carried with a high hand. The election of Bowler had been accomplished by sixteen votes. But afterwards the Polk county delegation, twenty strong, was seated and it gave the Parker supporters the balance of power. Charges and recriminations flew thick and fast and for a time half of the entire convention was on chairs demanding recognition. Fiery speeches favoring and opposing Hearst were made and Lind was in turn lauded and roasted. But the personality of Lind triumphed and carried with it the support of the majority.

At a critical juncture C. D. O'Brien made a conciliatory speech and a vote was taken, showing that the fight had been won. Resolutions similar to those presented by Bryan to the Nebraska convention, were adopted but all reference to Hearst was carefully edited out.

The district delegates follow:

First, Leonard E. Virtue, Owatonna; Dr. W. W. May, Rochester; Second, Frank A. Day, Fairmont; C. Taylor, Mankato; Third, H. B. Gress, Northfard; J. W. Cravan, Norwood; Fourth, R. T. O'Connor, St. Paul; J. C. Arnson, Stillwater; fifth, F. D. Larabee and James Corrigan, Minneapolis; sixth, S. Mesloy, Monticello; Z. E. Vesaly, Little Falls, seventh, D. H. Evans, Thomas O'Hair, Wheaton eight, Charles Dautremont, Duluth, R. W. Safford, Mora; ninth, Alex Thompson, Crookston, Charles A. Nye, Moorhead.

LOST AGAIN.

Hoodo Seems to Stick in Pathway of the Local Baseball Club

The home ball club went to Thief River Falls last Sunday and again crossed bats with the Thief River Indians and while apparantly the strongest team that we have had so far this season attempted to turn the trick, the result was the same as before, and the hoodoo remains unbroken.

At times in the game the pace set by the Red Lake Falls boys was fast and furious, but for some reason they couldn't keep it up, and the final result was 9 to 3 in favor of Thief River Falls.

What is the cause for the streak of hard luck that has pursued the team so far this season isn't just plain, but there is surely something amiss.

But maybe the boys are only reversing the thing this year, after all. Last year they didn't lose a game and this year didn't win one, so they have a clean record anyway without any disfiguring marks.

Constipation causes two-thirds of all sickness in the world. Why suffer when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well and keep you well? 25 cents, Tea or tablet form. W. A. Schreiter.

LANDS ARE BEING SOLD

Red Lake Indian Reservation Land Bringing Good Figures.—Big Crowd There.

With a throng of 5,000 people surrounding the school house near the city and the enthusiasm at fever heat the grand auction sale whereby the government will dispose of fourteen sections of the Red Lake Indian reservation began at nine o'clock, Monday morning, at Thief River Falls, and the loud stentorian tones of Auctioneer O'Brien could be heard for blocks away during the entire day. In all during the day's work forty-four tracts of land were offered for sale and bid in by the eager homesteaders at prices ranging from $5.25 to $18 per acre, a figure much higher than the expectations of land seekers and even the government officials themselves who have presided at many sales and have never seen such an evidence of land hunger as was exhibited.

The usual accompaniment of faro and roulette and crap game artists is on the scene and many of the hungry ones are being fleeced of their hard earned money while they await chances to invest it in the reservation land. No robberies have been committed, however, and the police service is very good. People who play the games and allow the shrewd ones to hoodwink them will be alone to blame for their loss if loss is incurred.

At the lowest calculation 5,000 strangers are in the city and the accomodations especially in the sleeping line are taxed to their utmost. Eating houses have been established at almost every nook of the city, however, and the quantity of the food is liberal and at easy prices. From now on it is plainly evident, however, that the crush of people will continue to decrease in volume and the life of those waiting the arrival of the better tracts of land upon the schedule become a great deal easier and more endurable.

As an idea of the prices the land is bringing the following are a few of the sales made Monday:

Nels K. Nelson, $7.25; Ole A. Peterson, $5.25; John Marteuson, $6.25; Lewis O. Williams, $7.45; Ole Easthouse, $8.00; Jos. Lafontaine, $5.25; Tonbjoin Skomedal, $5.40; Andrew J. Berg, $6.85; Hans O. Hagen, $6.40; Andrew G. Loftness, $8.00; Ed. Quigley, $10.65 Ole E. Nelson, $11.75; T. Aasland, $14.00; Andrew C. Hoberson, $15.55; Ole C. Hoberson, $17.20; M. T. Wald, $18.10; etc.

The highest to be paid for any land was on Tuesday morning when Andrew Stenseth bid $33.25 for lots 10, 11, 12, of section 34 and lot 13 of section 35, town 154, range 43. This piece is on the south side of the Red Lake river and joins Red Lake Rapids, which addition Mr. Stenseth is interested in. It contains 63.05 acres and is valuable on account of its being so close to town.

RUSSIANS LOST 10,000

SUSTAINED HEAVY CASUALTIES DURING PROLONGED FIGHT AT VAFANGOW.

JAPS BURY SIXTEEN HUNDRED OF THE ENEMY AFTER THE ENGAGEMENT.

TWO JAPANESE TRANSPORTS DESTROYED BY THE VLADIVOSTOK SQUADRON.

Tokio, June 20.—Further reports received here show that the blow inflicted by General Oku on the Russians in the fighting at Telissu (Vafangow) on June 15 was more severe than at first was believed. The number of Russians killed in this battle probably will exceed 2,000 and their total loss, including prisoners, is estimated at 10,000.

The Japanese losses are less than 1,000, or about one-tenth of the Russian total.

Up to June 17 General Oku had hurled 1,615 Russian dead and he reports that many more dead have been found.

Chinese who watched the fighting from the Russian side report that the Russians removed many dead men to the trains with their wounded and that they buried or cremated many corpses in the village of Hunsungkou before they retreated.

The number of prisoners and trophies taken by the Japanese is increasing. General Oku is not yet able to report the total number of prisoners.

Newchwang, June 21.—During the past forty-eight hours 3,500 wounded have passed through Taschichiao by train for Harbin from the front.

Renewed fighting took place Sunday at Kwanwentsai, between Siungyo and Kaichow. Kuropatkin is personally directing operations.

RUSSIANS DEFEATED

GENERAL STAKELBERG'S FORCE DEFEATED IN DESPERATE THREE DAYS' FIGHT.

St. Petersburg, June 17.—Czar Nicholas has received a telegram dated June 16, from General Kuropatkin, transmitting the following dispatch from Lieutenant General Baron Stakelberg, dated June 16, 1:20 a. m.:

"Yesterday I had intended to attack the enemy's right flank, but just as the troops had been assigned for the purpose and were beginning successfully to envelope the enemy's right flank, the Japanese in their turn attacked my right flank with superior forces, and I was compelled to retreat by three roads to the north.

"Our losses are heavy, but they are not completely known.

"During the engagement the Third and Fourth batteries of the First artillery brigade were literally cut to pieces by Japanese shells.

"Of sixteen guns, thirteen were rendered useless and were abandoned.

"The conduct of the troops was excellent, a large proportion of them refusing to retire until after they had been repeatedly ordered to do so."

SINK JAP TRANSPORTS

VLADIVOSTOK SQUADRON OVERHAULS TWO OF THE ENEMY'S VESSELS.

Tokio, June 17.—All doubt as to the sinking of the transports Hitachi and Sado by the Russians has been removed. Three hundred and ninety-seven survivors of the Hitachi arrived at Moji and 153 survivors of the Sado have arrived at Kokura.

Details obtainable from the survivors of the ill fated Japanese transports show that the Hitachi and the Sado met three Russian warships near Oki Island at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. The Russians fired on the Japanese ships and stopped them and soon afterward they torpedoed and sank the helpless transports.

It is reported that the transports Hitachi and Sado carried only 1,400 men. If this is true the loss in lives probably is less than 1,000.

Governor Van Sant, his staff and more than 300 members of the Minnesota Editorial association assembled at the Minnesota building at the St. Louis exposition and formally dedicated that structure to the world's fair. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of the Editorial association and were very simple in character, at the close of which Miss Minne Sota Whitney of Marshall unfurled the state flag. Miss Ada Murphy of St. Paul is the hostess.

THE COST OF VICTORY

CASUALTIES ON THE JAPANESE SIDE PLACED AT ONE THOUSAND MEN.

Tokio, June 17.—In a fight which is reported to have taken place at Telissu, on the railroad about eighty miles north of Port Arthur, the Russians lost 500 men killed, 300 taken prisoners and 14 guns. The casualties on the Japanese side are estimated at 1,000 men killed and wounded.

BACK AT VLADIVOSTOK.

Russian Cruisers Return to Port Without Sustaining Damage.

St. Petersburg, June 21.—Under date of June 20, Vice Admiral Skrydloff sent the following message to the emperor:

"The cruiser division has returned to Vladivostok without losing any men or sustaining any damage."

NEARLY ONE THOUSAND

NUMBER OF VICTIMS OF THE GENERAL SLOCUM HORROR NOT DEFINITELY KNOWN.

OVER SEVEN HUNDRED BODIES RECOVERED AND MANY ARE UNACCOUNTED FOR.

PASSING STEAMERS CHURN UP WATERS AND CORPSES ARE WASHED ASHORE.

New York, June 21.—The list of those who perished on the General Slocum is growing at an alarming rate. Bodies came to the surface off the shores of North Brother Island singly and in groups of twos and threes, until at dusk Monday ninety-three additional bodies had been recovered. Every passing steamer seemed to churn up the water to such a degree that with its wash one or more bodies would be swept on to the beach. Between the hours of 3 and 6 p. m. forty-five bodies, some of them badly mutilated, were taken ashore by the searching parties.

This brings the total number of bodies recovered up to 725 and yet there are something like 300 persons unaccounted for. A number of these are among the unidentified at the morgue and over on North Brother Island and the unrecognizable that have been buried in the Lutheran cemetery on Long Island.

STORY OF DISASTER

SCORES BURN TO DEATH ON BOAT OR DROWN IN FUTILE EFFORTS TO ESCAPE.

The General Slocum, at the time of the disaster, had on board nearly 1,600 people, mostly women and children, it being the annual excursion of St. Mark's German Lutheran Sunday school of New York city. The fire started in the lunchroom and spread rapidly, driving the passengers to the rear end of the boat. Hundreds jumped to the water and many of these drowned. Many scores were burned with the ship, while a few were taken off by tugs.

Under forced draught the burning vessel was run ashore, leaving a trail of dead and dying bodies behind. The hurricane deck fell, adding to the horror of the catastrophe. In little more than two hours after the fire started the hold of the steamer burned to the water, rested on the sand with its maw full of charred bodies. Hundreds of other bodies lay on the bench, while hospitals were crowded with injured and dying.

The first sweep of the flames cut off the escape from the hurricane deck of the Slocum, where a great many of the women and children were crowded together and soon burned away the light wooden uprights, which came down with a crash on those below.

As the fire increased the struggle to gain a point of vantage at the stern became frightful. Women and children crowded against the after rail until it gave way, and hundreds were pushed off into the river. After this there was a steady stream of persons who jumped or were thrown into the water.

At no time was there any opportunity to lower life boats or get out more than a few life preservers from under the seats, so rapidly did the flames spread.

The Slocum got within fifty feet of the northwest point of North Brother Island and there stopped in shallow water. It was just before she beached that the hurricane deck, the supports of which had burned away, fell with its load of women and children, adding to the panic and horror of those on the deck below.

CARRIED AWAY BY THE CURRENT AND DROWNED.

The point where the Slocum beached was just off the Scarlet fever ward on North Brother Island. The patients, who had been outside watching the approach of the burning steamer, were ordered indoors and the physicians on the island hastened to the assistance of those who were coming ashore through the shallow water. Many of those who leaped from the Slocum were carried away by the current, even after she was beached, and were drowned.

As the bodies of the living and the dead were taken out of the water, those alive were taken to ships on the island or sent across the river to hospitals in Manhattan. Ambulances from almost all the hospitals in New York city and every other sort of conveyance which could be found were put into service.

For hours bodies of burned and drowned persons drifted ashore on the island and between One Hundred and Thirtieth street and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street in Manhattan. Some came ashore still alive. Many of these died.

Rows of bodies were stretched along the beach, and hysterical women and frantic men went along looking at one after another, searching for relatives and friends. Women with disfigured faces, their clothing partly stripped from them, were carried to the emergency hospital crying for children who had been torn from them in the mad rush when the boat took fire.

Meanwhile, the Slocum burned to the water's edge. At 12:25 o'clock, two hours and twenty-five minutes after the fire was first discovered, she sank. It is thought there were then nearly 100 charred bodies on the decks. Just after the steamer sank the water near by was black with bodies.

LA FOLLETTE MEN DOWNED.

Republican National Committee Decides Wisconsin Contest.

Chicago, June 18.—By unanimous vote the Republican national committee decided to seat the delegates at large from Wisconsin who are members of the so-called "stalwart" faction, headed by United States Senators John C. Spooner and Joseph V. Quarles and opposed to the Republicans led by Governor Robert M. La Follette.

While the contest is partly settled so far as the national convention is concerned the dispute among the two parties of the Badger state is by no means ended, as the Wisconsin courts are to be asked to determine which of the two conventions recently held in the state was legally the party convention and entitled to have the names of its nominees for state officers placed upon the official ballot under the regular party name.

After the national committee had decided against the supporters of the governor from Wisconsin the leaders of Mr. La Follette's side announced their determination to carry the fight to the end and it is probable, in spite of the decision of the committeemen, that the dispute will again be fought out before the committee on credentials in the national convention.

WILL BE FAIRBANKS

INDIANA MAN'S NOMINATION FOR VICE-PRESIDENT ALMOST A CERTAINTY.

Chicago, June 21.—The nomination of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks for vice president was regarded as settled last night when New York decided to cast her seventy-eight votes for him. While it has seemed a foregone conclusion for some time that the Indiana senator would be Mr. Roosevelt's running mate, there have been efforts made to bring out other candidates and start a stampede of delegates for some other man. These attempts failed almost in their inception and it early became apparent that Fairbanks was the choice of most of the delegates. New York's action was more formal than that of other states and practically settled all doubt, even among those who were opposed to the Indiana man.

"We pledge ourselves to make such changes from time to time in the tariff schedules as changing conditions make necessary."

That is the language of the proposed platform as now agreed upon and it becomes more evident that no further concession will be made to those demanding a revision. It is asserted by the Republican leaders that the presidential campaign will cause enough disturbance in business without adding to it a definite promise of tariff revision by the next session of congress.

Cummins Will Continue Fight.

"The Iowa idea" was emphatically laid on the table by the Iowa delegation. It is understood, however, that Governor Cummins will advocate it on the floor of the convention in supporting the Hansbrough resolutions for tariff revision and reciprocity.

The Iowa delegation met and organized. This preliminary occupied but fifteen minutes. At its conclusion Governor Cummins took the floor and presented his "idea," concisely embodied in a set of resolutions. Discussion which lasted for an hour and a half followed, when the resolutions were laid on the table by an overwhelming vote. The details of the vote were not recorded.

The present national committee met during the morning for the last time, finished the few details left for its consideration and then adjourned for good. No national committee meetings will be held until the new organization is formed at the close of the convention. When the members met Senator Scott of West Virginia took the chair. Senator McComas of Maryland at once introduced a resolution providing that Acting Chairman Henry C. Payne be made chairman for the remaining time the committee is in existence. He paid a high tribute to Mr. Payne's ability and party services and moved the adoption of his resolution. It was adopted by a rising vote.

THE HURRICANE IN CUBA.

More Than One Hundred Persons Perished as the Result.

Santiago de Cuba, June 18.—The recent fall of fourteen inches of rain in five hours, accompanying a hurricane, has resulted in the death of more than 100 persons. The most severe loss was at the village of El Cobra, where about sixty persons were drowned. The river rose instantly, covering the lower part of the village. Bodies were carried eight miles to the bay. Thirty bodies were recovered.

Six persons were drowned at Balquiri, fourteen at El Caney and many in the surrounding country. The list is still incomplete.

One hundred and fifty houses were destroyed or damaged here and five persons lost their lives.

SENT FROM CRIPPLE CREEK.

One Hundred and Forty-four Men Deported Since June 6.

Victor, Colo., June 17.—One hundred and forty-four union miners and their sympathizers have been deported from the Cripple Creek region since June 6 and about 60 are booked for exile. There remain as prisoners in the bull pens and jails at Cripple Creek and Victor 72 men, most of whom will probably be ordered out of camp within a fortnight.

THOUSANDS OF ARMENIANS DIE.

Turks Burn Villages and Kill the Inhabitants.

London, June 16.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Constantinople says the consular reports confirm the destruction of many Armenian villages in the Sassoun district. The number of killed is estimated to exceed 3,000 persons.

wouldn't let his name be used against Kedge. Therefore we've got to work it quietly and keep it from him."

"It's not too difficult," said the speaker's colleague, Mr. Boswell. "All we've got to do is to spring it as a surprise on the convention. Some of the old crowd themselves will be swept along with us when we make our nomination, and you want to stuff your ears with cotton. You see, all we need to do is to pass the word quietly among the Halloway people and the shaky McCane people. Rod may get wind of it, but you can't fix men in this district against us when they know what we mean to do now. On the first ballot we'll give Halloway every vote he'd have got if he'd run against McCune alone. It will help him to understand how things were afterward. On the second ballot—why, we nominate. Of course it can't be helped that Halloway has to be kept in the dark, too, but he's got to be."

"There's one danger," said Warren Smith. "Kedge Halloway is honest, but I believe he's selfish enough to disturb his best friend's deathbed for his own ends. It's not unlikely that he will get nervous toward the last and be telegraphing Harkless to have himself carried on a cot to the convention to save him. That wouldn't do at all, of course. And Miss Sherwood thinks maybe there'd be less danger if we set the convention a little ahead of the day appointed. It's dangerous, because it shortens our time, but we can fix it for three days before the day we'd settled on, and that will bring it to Sept. 7."

"It's a great plan," said Mr. Bence, who was an oratorical gentleman. He thrust one hand in his breast, raised the other toward heaven and continued, "For the name of Harkless shall"—

"Wait a minute," said Keating. "I'd like to hear from the Herald about its policy, if Miss Sherwood will tell us."

"Yes, indeed," she answered. "It will be very simple. Don't you think there is only one course to pursue? We will advocate no one very energetically, but we will print as much of the truth about Mr. McCune as we can, with delicacy and honor, in this case; but as I understand it the work is almost all to be done among the delegates. We shall not mention our plan at all, and we will contrive that Mr. Harkless shall not receive his copy of the paper containing the notice of the change of date, and I think the chance of his seeing it in any Rouen paper may be avoided. That is all, I think."

"Here's to our candidate!"

"Thank you," said Keating. "That is certainly the course to follow."

Every one nodded or acquiesced in words, and Keating and Bence came over to Helen and engaged her in conversation. The others began to look about for their hats, vaguely preparing to leave.

"Wait a minute," said the judge. "There's no train due just now." And Minnie appeared in the doorway with a big pitcher of crab apple cider, rich and amber hued, sparkling, cold and redolent of the sweet smelling orchard where it was born. Behind Miss Briscoe came Mildy Upton with glasses and a fat, shaking, four storied jelly cake on a second tray. The judge passed his cigars around, and the gentlemen took them blithely, then hesitatingly held them in their fingers and glanced at the ladies, uncertain of permission.

"Let me get you some matches," Helen said quickly, and found a box on the table and handed them to Keating. Every one sat beaming, and fragrant veils of smoke soon draped the room.

"Why do you call her 'Miss Sherwood'?" Boswell whispered in Keating's ear.

"That's her name."

"Ain't she the daughter of that old fellow over there by the window? Ain't her name Fisbee?"

"No; she's his daughter, but her legal name's Sherwood. She's an adop"—

"Great Scott! I know all about that. I'd like to know if there's a man, woman or child in this part of the country that doesn't. I guess it won't be Fisbee or Sherwood either very long. She can easy get a new name, that lady. And if she took a fancy to Boswell, why, I'm a bach"—

"I expect she won't take a fancy to Boswell very early," said Keating.

"Go way," returned Mr. Boswell. "What do you want to say that for? Can't you bear for anybody to be happy a minute or two now and then?"

Warren Smith approached Helen and inquired if it would be asking too much if they petitioned her for some music, and she went to the piano and sang some darky songs for them, with a quaint suggestion of the dialect. Two or three old fashioned negro melodies of Foster, followed by some rollicking modern imitations, with the movement and spirit of a tin shop falling down a flight of stairs. Her audience listened in delight from the first. But the latter songs quite overcame them with pleasure and admiration, and before she finished every head in the room was jogging from side to side and forward and back in time to the music, while every foot shuffled the measures on the carpet.

When the gentlemen from out of town discovered that it was time to leave if they meant to catch their train Helen called to them to wait, and they gathered around her.

"Just one second," she said. And she poured all the glasses full to the brim. Then, as she stood in the center of the circle they made around her, she said:

"Before you go shan't we pledge each other to our success in this good home grown Indiana cider that leaves our heads clear and our arms strong? If you will—then"— She began to blush furiously, and her voice trembled, but she lifted the glass high over her head and cried bravely, "Here's to our candidate!"

The big men, towering over her, threw back their heads and quaffed the gentle liquor to the last drop. Then they sent up the first shout of the campaign and cheered till the rafters rang.

"My friends," said Mr. Keating as he and Boswell and the men from Gaines drove away from the brick house—"my friends, here is where I begin the warmest hustling I ever did. Now, I guess we all think this is a great plan"—

"It is a glorious idea," said Mr. Bence. "The name of Harkless"—

Keating drowned the oratory. "But that isn't all. That little girl wants it to succeed, and that settles it. He goes."

That night Mr. Parker, at work in the printing office, perceived the figure of Mr. Tipworthy beckoning him mysteriously from the pavement.

What's the matter, Buddie?"

"Listen. She's singin' over her work."

Parker stepped outside. On the pavement people had stopped to listen. They stood in the shadow, looking up with parted lips at the open, lighted windows whence came a clear, soft, reaching voice, lifted ineffably in song. Now it swelled louder unconsciously; now its volume was more slender, and it melted liquidly into the night; again it trembled and rose and dwelt in the ear, strong and pure, and bearing it you sighed with unknown longings. It was the "Angels' Serenade."

Bud Tipworthy's sister, Cynthia, was with him, and Parker saw that she turned from the window and that she was crying quietly. She put her hand on the boy's shoulder and patted it with a forlorn gesture which to the foreman's eye was as graceful as it was sad. He moved closer to Bud, and his big hand fell on Cynthia's brother's other shoulder as he realized that red hair could look pretty sometimes, and he wondered why the editor's singing made Cynthia cry, and at the same time he decided to be mighty good to Bud henceforth. The spell of night and song was on him; that and something more, for it is a strange, inexplicable fact that the most practical chief ever known to the Herald had a singularly sentimental influence over her subordinates from the moment of her arrival. Under Harkless' domination there had been no more steadfast bachelors in Carlow than Ross Schofield and Caleb Parker, and, like timorous youths in a graveyard, daring and mocking the ghosts in order to assuage their own fears, they had so gibed and jeered at the married state that there was talk of urging the minister to preach at them, but now let it be recorded that at the moment Caleb laid his hand on Bud's other shoulder his associate, Mr. Schofield, was enjoying a walk in the far end of town with a widow, and it is not to be doubted that Mr. Tipworthy's heart also was no longer in his possession, though, as it was after 8 o'clock, the damsel of his desire had probably long since retired to her couch.

For a faint light on the cause of these spells we must turn to a comment made by the invaluable Mr. Martin some time afterward. Referring to the lady to whose voice he was now listening in silence, which shows how great the enthralling of her voice was, he said, "When you saw her or heard her or managed to be around anywhere she was, why, if you couldn't git up no hope of marryin' her you wanted to marry somebody."

Mr. Lige Willetts, riding idly by, drew rein in front of the lighted windows and listened with the others. Presently he leaned from his horse and whispered to a man near him, "I know that song."

"Do you?" whispered the other.

"Yes. He and I heard her sing it the night he was shot. We stood outside Briscoe's and listened."

"So!"

"'It's a seraphic song,' he said," continued Lige.

"No!" exclaimed his friend. Then, shaking his head, he sighed, "Well, it's mighty sweet."

The song was suddenly woven into laughter in the unseen chamber, and the lights in the windows went out, and a small lady and a tall lady and a thin old man, all three laughing and talking happily, came down and drove off in the Briscoe buckboard. William Todd took his courage between his teeth and, the song ringing in his ears, made a desperate resolve to call upon Miss Bardlock that evening in spite of its being a week day, and Caleb Parker gently and stammeringly asked Cynthia if she would wait till he shut up the shop and let him walk home with her and Bud.

Soon the square was quiet as before, and there was naught but peace under the big stars of July.

That day the news had come that Harkless, after weeks of alternate improvement and relapse, hazardously lingering in the borderland of shadows, had passed the crucial point and was convalescent. His recovery was assured. But from their first word of him, from the message that he was found and was alive, none of the people of Carlow had really doubted. They are simple country people, and they know that God is good.

CHAPTER XII.

AN Indiana town may lie asleep a long while, but it always wakes up some time, and Plattville woke up in August, when the Herald became a daily. It was then that history began to be made. The Herald printed news. It had made a connection with the Associated Press, and it was sold every morning at stands in every town in that section of the state. Its circulation tripled. Two new men were brought from Rouen for the editorial and reportorial staff, and Parker talked of new presses. During the first week of the daily venture Eph Watts struck oil, and the Herald boomed the field. People swarmed into town; the hotel was crowded; strangers became no sensation whatever. A capitalist bought the whole north side of the square to erect new stores, and the Carlow bank began the construction of a new bank building of Bedford stone on the corner opposite the Herald. Then it was whispered, next affirmed, that Main street was to be asphalted. That was the end of the "old days" of Plattville.

But the man who had laid the foundation upon which the new Plattville was to be built, he who through the quiet labor of years had stamped his spirit on the people, lay sick in his friend's house and did not care.

Tom Meredith had taken him from the hospital to his own home on a quiet street in Rouen, and John was well enough of his hurts to be taken abroad sometimes in a victoria, where he reclined, gray and thin, seemingly no more than a long afternoon shadow. But for days he would lie in a lethargy that made Tom despair. The soul of the country editor was sick inside of him; he was weary and worn, and pain had left him dulled, except when he thought of returning to Plattville; then he felt physical horror. The place did not need him, nor he the place. Fisbee had found a young relative to run the Herald, who signed his typewritten business letters "H. Fisbee" in a strapping hand that suggested six feet of muscle spattering ink on its shirt sleeves.

John wondered idly where old Fisbee had raked up a relative, and he thought it probable that H. Fisbee was a Yankee cousin of the old man, but he did not care much for that or for anything except to keep away from Carlow for the rest of his life, since he was to live. And there was no longer need to go there. He was glad to know that. H. Fisbee had written him before the oil bubbled in Eph's wells that to buy stock in Mr. Watts' company might be profitable, especially as the stock was then so low that it was almost imperceptible, and Harkless had a little money he had saved. He let Meredith arrange it for him, and a few days later the stock leaped cloudward.

However, his modest riches interested him as little as did everything else. He left his bed less and less, took no more drives, and his lethargy deepened.

The only thing in which he showed interest was the congressional campaign of the district. It was far advanced before the Herald spoke of it at all, and Harkless saw that McCune had lifted his head.

One day Tom came in and found him writing on a pad on his knee.

Rouen, Sept. 2, —.

Dear Mr. Fisbee—Yours of the 1st to hand. I entirely approve all arrangements you have made. I think you understand that I wish you to regard everything as in your own hands. You are the editor of the Herald and have the sole responsibility for everything, including policy, until, after proper warning, I relieve you in person, if that ever happens, but until that time regard me as a mere spectator. I do not fear that you will make any mistakes. You have done very much better in all matters than I could have done myself. At present I have only one suggestion: I observe that your editorials concerning Halloway's renomination are something lukewarm. It is very important that he be renominated, not so much on account of assuring his return to Washington (for he is no Madison, I fear), but the fellow McCune must be beaten if we have to send him to the penitentiary on an old issue to do it. The man is corrupt to the bone. He has been bought and sold, and I am g[illegible] are in your hands, as you tell me you found them, as directed, in my desk. The papers you hold drove him out of politics once by the mere threat of publication. You should have printed them last week, as I suggested. Do so at once; the time is short. The Herald is a little paper (not so little

Not a word is heard against the retention of Judges Watts and Grindeland. Both will be re-nominated and re-elected, as they deserve to be, is a timely remark of last week's Roseau Region.

There will be 300 or more conventions held in St. Louis during the 175 days of the exposition, notably among the largest will be the National Educational association convention on June 28 and the National Democratic convention a week later, each of which expects about 30,000 in attendance.

Over 300 delegates assembled in St. Paul in answer to the invitation of Governor S. R. Van Sant to attend the Minnesota Immigration convention. They were mostly land men and were roundly praised by all of the speakers who addressed them as being public benefactors, by their enterprise and hustle. In his address the governor paid them the following tribute: "As such, I believe the real estate man is a public benefactor doing more good than all the politicians who go up and down the state."

The Prison Mirror, published and edited in the state penitentiary, has the following to say, and the writer evidently speaks from his own sad experience: "There is no more effective school for crime for boys than roaming the streets in idleness. In many cases, doubtless, parents are unable to control their children and wherever it is shown that this is the case these boys ought to be turned over to the training school, where they cannot only be protected from the dangers to which they are exposed, but taught useful occupations and the lesson of obedience to authority."

The "Office Blotter" a lively Minneapolis publication devoted to official business throughout Minnesota, has the following Red Lake county politics sandwiched in with a review of the coming campaign in Minnesota: "A hot fight is promised in Red Lake county over the register of deeds office. Samuel Gibeau, the present incumbent, is desirous of serving another term and has plenty of backing to aid him in the fight. K. J. Weeks will probably be Mr. Gibeau's strongest opponent. County Treasurer Tanberg has announced that he will again seek that office which he now holds. Mr. Tanberg is serving his third term and has a splendid record to back him."

ROOSEVELT OUR LEADER.

Next Wednesday the Republican National convention will meet in Chicago to give expression to the will of all Republicans throughout the land by nominating Theodore Roosevelt as their candidate for president of the United States. And when that will is expressed and the result is announced, every Republican in every voting precinct in the United States, Wall street alone excepted, will send up a shout of heart-felt approval and thanksgiving, writes Senator H. J. Miller in his last week's Rock County Herald.

With such a candidate for president, and with such a running mate as is certain to be chosen, the Republican party will occupy an absolutely impregnable position in the coming quadrennial contest.

With such a ticket, backed by the record of the Republican party and the present results of the magnificent acheivements under the administrations of our beloved and lamented McKinley and his equally honored and beloved successor, no argument should be needed in support of the Republican cause. Present conditions and accomplished results furnish the conclusive argument.

McKinley was indeed the "advance agent of prosperity," and the prosperity he brought is with us still and has come to stay, so long, at least, as the party of Sound Money, Protection and Reciprocity directs the policies of our government.

Every promise made by the Republican party has been abundantly fulfilled, and for nearly eight years, under Republican administration the people have enjoyed unparalleled blessings.

"Four years of Grover" left the country in the depths of despondency. Four years of McKinley brought about conditions of unprecedented prosperity which the administration of Roosevelt has continued.

During the last Democratic administration industry was paralyzed, money went into hiding, and the misery of "Hard Times" was prevalent in every section of the country.

Since the first election of McKinley "Hard Times," has become obsolete. And because they wish to continue these conditions—because the recollection of the distressing conditions which prevailed under the last Democratic administration are still painfully fresh—the people will rally to the support of Theodore Roosevelt in the coming campaign and elect him by the largest majority ever received by any presidential candidate in the history of the Nation.

But this is not the only reason why the people will support Roosevelt. They will support him because they trust and honor him—because he stands for justice and righteousness in all thing, and because he exemplifies in his own exalted charactes the highest ideals of American manhood.

It is indeed a glorious privilege to be a Republican with Theodore Roosevelt as the Republican nominee for president.

THE CLAIM OF MINNESOTA.

The formation of a Minnesota immigration organization at St. Paul this week, bringing together as it did several hundred men interested in state settlement and development, and in various subjects associated with the land question, called needed attention to neglected resources. It was pointed out that, including Indian reservation lands, Minnesota has within its area 4,000,000 acres in round figures, of government land which is now or in a few years will be open for settlement. In addition there is about 3,000,000 acres of railroad or state land, or other land which can be acquired on low and easy terms. Thus practically one-fifth of the area of Minnesota is open for settlement, says the Commercial West.

While the gross acreage of Minnesota including the water surface, is 53,350,600 acres, the farming acreage, improved and unimproved as reported by the census was in 1900 only 26,248,498 acres, or just one-half of the total. Today 1-2 the area of Minnesota is wild land, which can be bought at from the government price up to $10 an acre. Some of this land is practically worthless for any agricultural purpose, but probably ninety per cent is available for either farming or grazing, while the majority of it is good farm land.

Why, then, has not this land been taken up long before this and put to use? Largely for lack of advertising. It is true, of course, that while there was prairie land open to homesteading not very much farther west, preference was given to it. Then again there was a craze for prairie land rather than timber land, and people went right through the timbered portions of Minnesota to the prairies beyond, with no attention to the actual advantages that they passed by. But after all the chief reason is that most people act en masse. It was the thing to do to go onto the western prairies. Minnesota settled very readily until its prairie land was taken up. Since then its settlement has been steady and sure in the timber district, but not of such rapidity as in the case of the prairie sections.

It is time that attention were called to the value and availibility of these now wild lands of Minnesota. Wisconsin has had a wonderful development in this same direction. It has not had the benefit of any state organization, but there has been a sort of informal organization among the numerous large land and settlement companies, which has been assisted and fostered by the lumberman. Minnesota should not only use these means, but might, through a state organization of landowners and land agents, bring the advantages of Minnesota to the attention of the people. It should do for the state what is being done for the Northwest generally by the American Immigration association of the Northwest.

There is abundant basis for legitimate and attractive presentations of the claims of Minnesota. Stump lands, to those who do not know them, look unpromising, but in some cases they are more desirable than the richest prairie land, and always the settler of industry, intelligence and preseverance can enter upon them with less money than is required in the prairie where everything must be bought and nothing is at hand but the land itself. The population of Minnesota should increase by settlement 100 per cent within the next decade, and the beginning of that movement should be now.

Excursions to the Circus.

Special excursion rates on all lines of travel have been arranged for by the management of Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows and those who wish to go to Crookston where this great circus exhibits Wednesday, July 6, can do so at very little expense. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the show will exhibit this season, and no one should miss the opportunity to witness it. Ringling Brothers' circus has been the leading arenic exhibition of America for years, but the show has never been permitted to rest upon its reputation. Although it long ago passed the point of competition, every season sees a greater and grander show. This year's performance is entirely new, and entails the combined efforts of 375 wonderful artists in the equestrian gymnatic, equilibristic, acrobatic and aerial line, together with forty famous clowns and hundreds of lesser lights. Six hundred and fifty horses are used and a marvelous trained animal department is presented. The circus this season is greatly enlarged by the spectular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, a pantomimic presentatson of the well known ane beautiful historical narrative of the Crusaders. The vast menagerie has among hundreds of features the only living pair of giraffes, the first baby elephants successfully bred and reared in America, and the only rhinocerous in captivity. There is a gorgeous revival of the Roman hippodrome races, and many other stupendous features in this great circus. Circus day opens with a brilliant street parade, three miles in length. Don't fail to see it.

Marion Harland.

A very interesting feature of the Sunday edition of The Chicago Record Herald and one looked for by every woman reader of that paper, is the page devoted to Marion Harland. Not a word is heard against the retention of Judges Watts and Grindeland. Both will be re-nominated and re-elected, as they deserve to be..is a timely remark of last week's Roseau Region.

There will be 300 or more conventions held in St. Louis during the 175 days of the exposition, notably among the largest will be the National Educational association convention on June 28 and the National Democratic convention a week later, each of which expects about 30,000 in attendance.

Over 300 delegates assembled in St. Paul in answer to the invitation of Governor S. R. Van Sant to attend the Minnesota Immigration convention. They were mostly land men and were roundly praised by all of the speakers who addressed them as being public benefactors by their enterprise and hustle. In his address the governor paid them the following tribute: "As such, I believe the real estate man is a public benefactor doing more good than all the politicians who go up and down the state."

The Prison Mirror, published and edited in the state penitentary, has the following to say, and the writer evidently speaks from his own sad experience: "There is no more effective school for crime for boys than roaming the streets in idleness. In many cases, doubtless, parents are unable to control their children and wherever it is shown that this is the case these boys ought to be turned over to the training school, where they cannot only be protected from the dangers to which they are exposed, but taught useful occupations and the lesson of obedience to authority."

The "Office Blotter" a lively Minneapolis publication devoted to official business throughout Minnesota, has the following Red Lake county politics sandwiched in with a review of the coming campaign in Minnesota: "A hot fight is promised in Red Lake county over the register of deeds office. Samuel Gibeau, the present incumbent, is desirous of serving another term and has plenty of backing to aid him in the fight. K. J. Weeks will probably be Mr. Gibeau's strongest opponent. County Treasurer Tanberg has announced that he will again seek that office which he now holds. Mr. Tanberg is serving his third term and has a splendid record to back him."

ROOSEVELT OUR LEADER.

Next Wednesday the Republican National convention will meet in Chicago to give expression to the will of all Republicans throughout the land by nominating Theodore Roosevelt as their candidate for president of the United States. And when that will is expressed and the result is announced, every Republican in every voting precinct in the United States, Wall street alone excepted, will send up a shout of heart-felt approval and thanksgiving, writes Senator H. J. Miller in his last week's Rock County Herald.

With such a candidate for president, and with such a running mate as is certain to be chosen, the Republican party will occupy an absolutely impregnable position in the coming quadrennial contest.

With such a ticket, backed by the record of the Republican party and the present results of the magnificent acheivements under the administrations of our beloved and lamented McKinley and his equally honored and beloved successor, no argument should be needed in support of the Republican cause. Present conditions and accomplished results furnish the conclusive argument.

McKinley was indeed the "advance agent of prosperity," and the prosperity he brought is with us still and has come to stay, so long, at least, as the party of Sound Money, Protection and Reciprocity directs the policies of our government.

Every promise made by the Republican party has been abundantly fulfilled, and for nearly eight years, under Republican administration the people have enjoyed unparalleled blessings.

"Four years of Grover" left the country in the depths of despondency. Four years of McKinley brought about conditions of unprecedented prosperity which the administration of Roosevelt has continued.

During the last Democratic administration industry was paralyzed, money went into hiding, and the misery of "Hard Times" was prevalent in every section of the country.

Since the first election of McKinley "Hard Times," has become obsolete. And because they wish to continue these conditions—because the recollection of the distressing conditions which prevailed under the last Democratic administration are still painfully fresh—the people will rally to the support of Theodore Roosevelt in the coming campaign and elect him by the largest majority ever received by any presidential candidate in the history of the Nation.

But this is not the only reason why the people will support Roosevelt. They will support him because they trust and honor him—because he stands for justice and righteousness in all thing, and because he exemplifies in his own exalted charactes the highest ideals of American manhood.

It is indeed a glorious privilege to be a Republican with Theodore Roosevelt as the Republican nominee for president.

THE CLAIM OF MINNESOTA.

The formation of a Minnesota immigration organization at St. Paul this week, bringing together as it did several hundred men interested in state settlement and development, and in various subjects associated with the land question, called needed attention to neglected resources. It was pointed out that, including Indian reservation lands, Minnesota has within its area 7,000,000 acres, in round figures, of government land which is now or in a few years will be open for settlement. In addition there is about 3,000,000 acres of railroad or state land, or other land which can be acquired on low and easy terms. Thus practically one-fifth of the area of Minnesota is open for settlement, says the Commercial West.

While the gross acreage of Minnesota including the water surface, is 53,550,600 acres, the farming acreage, improved and unimproved as reported by the census was in 1900 only 26,248,498 acres, or just one-half of the total. Today 1-2 the area of Minnesota is wild land, which can be bought at from the government price up to $10 an acre. Some of this land is practically worthless for any agricultural purpose, but probably ninety per cent is available for either farming or grazing, while the majority of it is good farm land.

Why, then, has not this land been taken up long before this and put to use? Largely for lack of advertising. It is true, of course, that while there was prairie land open to homesteading not very much farther west, preference was given to it. Then again there was a craze for prairie land rather than timber land, and people went right through the timbered portions of Minnesota to the prairies beyond, with no attention to the actual advantages that they passed by. But after all the chief reason is that most people act en masse. It was the thing to do to go onto the western prairies. Minnesota settled very readily until its prairie land was taken up. Since then its settlement has been steady and sure in the timber district, but not of such rapidity as in the case of the prairie sections.

It is time that attention were called to the value and availibility of these now wild lands of Minnesota. Wisconsin has had a wonderful development in this same direction. It has not had the benefit of any state organization, but there has been a sort of informal organization among the numerous large land and settlement companies, which has been assisted and fostered by the lumberman. Minnesota should not only use these means, but might, through a state organization of landowners and land agents, bring the advantages of Minnesota to the attention of the people. It should do for the state what is being done for the Northwest generally by the American Immigration association of the Northwest.

There is abundant basis for legitimate and attractive presentations of the claims of Minnesota. Stump lands, to those who do not know them, look unpromising, but in some cases they are more desirable than the richest prairie land, and always the settler of industry, intelligence and preseverance can enter upon them with less money than is required in the prairie where everything must be bought and nothing is at hand but the land itself. The population of Minnesota should increase by settlement 100 per cent within the next decade, and the beginning of that movement should be now.

Excursions to the Circus.

Special excursion rates on all lines of travel have been arranged for by the management of Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows and those who wish to go to Crookston where this great circus exhibits Wednesday, July 6, can do so at very little expense. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the show will exhibit this season, and no one should miss the opportunity to witness it. Ringling Brothers' circus has been the leading arenic exhibition of America for years, but the show has never been permitted to rest upon its reputation. Although it long ago passed the point of competition, every season sees a greater and grander show. This year's performance is entirely new, and entails the combined efforts of 375 wonderful artists in the equestrian gymnatic, equilibristic, acrobatic and aerial line, together with forty famous clowns and hundreds of lesser lights. Six hundred and fifty horses are used and a marvelous trained animal department is presented. This circus this season is greatly enlarged by the spectular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, a pantomimic presentatson of the well known ane beautiful historical narrative of the Crusaders. The vast menagerie has among hundreds of features the only living pair of giraffes, the first baby elephants successfully bred and reared in America, and the only rhinocerous in captivity. There is a gorgeous revival of the Roman hippodromic races, and many other stupendous features in this great circus. Circus day opens with a brilliant street parade, three miles in length. Don't fall to see it.

It is laughable the way a man comes around to the newspaper office after he gets into trouble, even though he has consistently knocked that paper when he was in good standing. The Little Falls Transcript tells of a citizen who saw a woman weighed with a load of hay and wondered thereat. He saw the woman on the load when it came into town and noticed her cover up in the hay before it was weighed. He then became curious and watched the load until it drove over on a back street and saw the woman climb out. Later in the day he saw the wagon weighed after the hay had been unloaded, but the woman was not weighed with it. He did not hear who bought the hay, but thinks that the purchaser paid for about 125 pounds of woman that he did not get. The purchaser is probably better off, however, than if everything in the load had been delivered.

Carl Garmolus, the farmer near Ada who was killed in a runaway about a week ago, less than a year before his death encountered a smooth insurance agent, who by false representation had induced him to take out a life policy for $50,000. Now the company is sorry they did not let him off entirely.

A very pleasant affair of the week was the spoon shower given at the home of Miss Josephine Kaus Wednesday afternoon, in honor of Miss Elizabeth Hunt, by sixteen of her girl friends. Roses were employed as decorations throughout the room, the table being strewn with the petals, with a boquet of the flowers as a center-piece. Music, conversation and a shooting match, as a special feature, afforded entertainment. The big engines in the saw mill at Crookston broke down the first of the week, and it is expected that the mill will be shut down for a month or more. The break-down is unfortunate, coming right in the start of a sawing season, and will mean quite a loss to Crookston laborers. The accident to the Crookston mill however will secure for St. Hilaire what the people of that thriving place had been working for, but which they had given up hopes of securing for this season. The mill there will be completed this week. A day crew will be run there all season and a night force may be put on later.

ARE IN FINE CONDITION

Crop Prospects Throughout This Section Are Exceedingly Bright—Big Harvest Assured.

No better crop prospects ever existed in Red Lake county and the Red River Valley than do at the present time and a drive through the country districts in any direction will be productive of visions of luxuriant fast growing green fields such as are seldom the lot of Red River Valley people to witness. The warm winds and rains of the past few days combined with heavy night dews have urged the crop forward at such a rapid rate that the growth is almost perceptable with the naked eye. Farmers and old time agriculturists throughout the whole valley, have an intimate knowledge of agricultural affairs and are well posted upon the growth in various portions of the country and valley, express their opinion candidly by saying that the present season is the best growing one that has ever been experienced in the Red River Valley and that the favorable weather conditions are rapidly making reparation for the late spring and resultant late seeding.

The country in all directions is assuming an air of plenty and farmers are happy and contented with their lot for their anticipations for a heavy and profitable harvest are such to drive away any solemn and morose thoughts of care and worry, which naturally come to men of of all degrees and stations.

Late sown barley is doing exceptionally well because of the warm rains which have almost immediately followed the sowing of the seed. Oats and flax are looking well and the wheat in the majority of fields has stood nicely, has a firm root, which will stand the drouth of the later portion of the summer and a stalk which from appearances should bear a phenomenal crop of grain. There are fields of course with mustard and kindred pests driving out the merchantable crop but in the majority of cases the obnoxious weeds are due to carelessness upon the part of the owners, or seeders.

Without hail and with a continuance of the present favorable weather a crop of from eighteen to thirty of wheat and other grains in proportion should be harvested this fall with ease and provide work and money for countless numbers of harvesters and threshers in the fields and upon the machines during the garnering.

Both these amounts are considerably larger than last year, which is and indication that the county is prosperous.

It is laughable the way a man comes around to the newspaper office after he gets into trouble, even though he has consistently knocked that paper when he was in good standing. He saw the woman on the load when it came into town and noticed her cover up in the hay before it was weighed. He then became curious and watched the load until it drove over on a back street and saw the woman climb out. Later in the day he saw the wagon weighed after the hay had been unloaded, but the woman was not weighed with it. He did not hear who bought the hay, but thinks that the purchaser paid for about 125 pounds of woman that he did not get. The purchaser is probably better off, however, then if everything in the load had been delivered.

nowadays, after all, thanks to you), but it is an honest one, and it isn't afraid of Rod McCune and his friends. Please let me see as hearty a word as you can say for Halloway also. You can write with ginger. Please let us have some in this matter. I am, very truly yours,

JOHN HARKLESS.

When the letter was concluded, he handed it to Meredith. "Please address that, put a 'special' on it and send it, Tom. It should go at once, so as to reach him tonight."

"H. Fisbee?"

"Yes—H. Fisbee."

"I believe it does you good to write, boy," said the other as he bent over him. "You look more chirrupy than you have for several days."

"It's that beast McCune. This young Fisbee is rather queer about it. I felt stirred up as I went along." But even before the sentence was finished the favor of age and utter weariness returned, and the dark lids closed over his eyes. They opened again slowly, and he took the other's hand and looked up at him mournfully; but, as it were, his soul shone forth in dumb and eloquent thanks.

"I—I'm giving you a jolly summer, Tom," he said, with a quivering effort to smile. "Don't you think I am? I don't—I don't know what I should have—done"—

"You old Indian!" said Meredith tenderly.

Three days later Tom was rejoiced by symptoms of invigoration in his patient. A telegram came for Harkless, and Meredith, bringing it into the sick room, was surprised to find the occupant sitting straight up on his couch without the prop of pillows. He was reading the day's copy of the Herald, and his face was flushed and his brow stern.

"What's the matter, boy?"

"Mismanagement, I hope," said the other in a strange voice; "worse, perhaps. It's this young Fisbee. I can't think what's come over the fellow. I thought he was a treasure beyond dreams, and he's turning out bad. I'll swear it looks like they'd been—well, I won't say that yet, but he hasn't printed that McCune business I told you of, and he's had two days. There is less than a week before the convention, and"— He broke off, seeing the yellow envelope in Meredith's hand. "Is that a telegram for me?" His companion gave it to him. He tore it open and read the contents. They were brief and unhappy.

Can't you do something? Can't you come down? It begins to look the other way.
K. H.

"Tom, give me that pad and pencil," said the sick man. He rapidly dashed off a note to H. Fisbee.

Sept. 5, —.

H. Fisbee, Editor Carlow Herald:

Dear Sir—You have not acknowledged my letter of the 2d of September by a note (which should have reached me the following morning) or by the alteration in the tenor of my columns which I requested, or by the publication of the McCune papers which I directed. In this I hold you grossly at fault. If you have a conscientious reason for refusing to carry out my request it should have been communicated to me at once, as should the fact—if such be the case—that you are a personal (or impersonal, if you like) friend of Mr. Rodney McCune. Whatever the motive which prevents you from operating my paper as I direct, I should have been informed of it. This is a matter vital to the interests of our community, and you have hitherto shown yourself too alert in accepting my slightest suggestion for me to construe this failure as negligence.

You will receive this letter by 7 this evening by special delivery. You will print the facts concerning McCune in tomorrow morning's paper.

I am well aware of the obligations under which your extreme efficiency and your thoughtfulness in many matters have placed me. It is to you I owe my unearned profits from the transaction in oil, and it is to you I owe the Herald's extraordinary present circulation, growth of power and influence. That power is still under my direction and is an added responsibility which shall not be misapplied.

Are you sorry for McCune? I warned him long ago that the papers you hold would be published if he ever tried to return to political life, and he is deliberately counting on my physical weakness and absence. Let him rely upon it—I am not so weak as he thinks. I am sorry for him from the bottom of my heart, but the Herald is not.

You need not reply by letter. Tomorrow's issue answers for you. Until I have received a copy I withhold my judgment

JOHN HARKLESS.

Tomorrow's issue—that fateful print on which depended John Harkless' opinion of H. Fisbee's integrity—contained an editorial addressed to the delegates of the convention, warning them to act for the vital interest of the community and declaring that the opportunity to be given them in the present convention was a rare one, a singular piece of good fortune indeed. They were to have a chance to vote for a man who had won the love and respect of every person in the district—one who had suffered for his championship of righteousness; one whom even his few political enemies confessed they held in personal affection and esteem; one who had been the inspiration of a new era; one whose life had been helpfulness, whose hand had reached out to every struggler and unfortunate; a man who had met and faced danger for the sake of others; one who lived under a threat for years, and who had been almost overborne in the fulfillment of that threat, but who would live to see the sun shine on his triumph, the tribute the convention would bring him as a gift from a community that loved him. His name needed not to be told. It was on every lip that morning and in every heart.

Tom was eagerly watching his companion as he read. Harkless fell back on the pillows with a drawn face, and for a moment he laid his thin hand over his eyes in a gesture of intense pain.

"What is it?" Meredith said quickly.

"Give me the pad, please."

"What is it, boy?"

The other's teeth snapped together.

"What is it?" he cried. "What is it? It's treachery, and the worst I ever knew. Not a word of the accusation I demanded—lying praises instead! Read that editorial—there, there!" He struck the page with the back of his hand and threw the paper to Meredith. "Read that miserable lie! 'One who has won the love and respect of every person in the district!' 'One who has suffered for his championship of righteousness!' Righteousness! Save the mark!"

"What does it mean?"

"Mean! It means McCune, Rod McCune, 'who has lived under a threat for years'—my threat. I swore I would print him out of Indiana if he ever raised his head again, and he knew I could. 'Almost overborne in the fulfillment of that threat'—almost! It's a black scheme, and I see it now. This man came to Plattville and went on the Herald for nothing in the world but this. It's McCune's hand all along. He daren't name him even now, the coward! The trick lies between McCune and young Fisbee—the old man is innocent. Give me the pad. Not almost overborne. There are three good days to work in, and if Rod McCune sees congress it will be in his next incarnation."

"What is it?" he cried.

He rapidly scribbled a few lines on the pad and threw the sheets to Meredith. "Get those telegrams to the Western Union office in a rush, please. Read them first."

With wide eyes Tom read them. One was to Warren Smith:

Take possession Herald. This is your authority. Publish McCune papers, so labeled, which H. Fisbee will hand you. Beat McCune. JOHN HARKLESS.

The second was addressed to H. Fisbee:

You are relieved from the cares of editorship. You will turn over the management of the Herald to Warren Smith. You will give him the McCune papers. If you do not or if you destroy them you cannot hide where I shall not find you.
JOHN HARKLESS.

CHAPTER XIII.

VERY early in the morning a messenger boy stumbled up the front steps of Meredith's house and handed the colored servant four yellow envelopes, night messages. The man carried them upstairs, left three with his master's guest, then knocked on Meredith's door till a response assured him that the occupant was awake and slid the fourth envelope under the door. Meredith lay quite without motion for several minutes, sleepily watching the yellow rhomboid in the crevice. It was a hateful looking thing to mix itself in with a pleasant dream and insist on being read, but after a while he climbed groaningly out of bed and perused the message with heavy eyes, still half asleep. He read it twice before it penetrated.

Suppress all newspapers today. Convention meets at 11. If we succeed, a delegation will come to Rouen this afternoon. They will come. HELEN.

Tom rubbed his sticky eyelids and shook his head violently in a Spartan effort to rouse himself, but what more effectively performed the task for him were certain sounds that issued from Harkless' room across the hall. For some minutes Meredith had been dully conscious of a rustle and stir in the invalid's chamber, and he began to realize that no mere tossing upon a bed would account for a noise that reached him across a wide hall and through two closed doors of thick walnut. Suddenly he heard a quick, heavy tread, shod, in Harkless' room, and a resounding bang as some heavy object struck the floor. The doctor was not to come till evening. The servant had gone downstairs. Who in the sick man's room wore shoes? He rushed across the hall in his pajamas and threw open the unlocked door.

The bed was disarranged and vacant. Harkless, fully dressed, was standing in the middle of the floor hurling garments at a small trunk. The horrified Meredith stood for a second bleached and speechless; then he rushed upon his friend and seized him with both hands.

"Mad, by heaven! Mad!"

"Let go of me, Tom!"

"Lunatic! Lunatic!"

"Don't stop me one instant!"

Meredith tried to force him toward the bed. "No; get back to bed. You're delirious, boy!"

"Delirious nothing! I'm a well man."

"Go to bed! Go to bed!"

Harkless set him out of the way with one arm. "To bed!" he cried. "I'm going to Plattville!"

Meredith wrung his hands. "The doctor"—

"Doctor be hanged!"

"What in the name of all that's terrible is the matter, John?"

His companion flung a light overcoat, unfolded, on the overflowing, misshapen bundle of clothes that lay in the trunk, then he jumped on the lid with both feet and kicked the hasp into the lock, while a very elegantly loun-

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

KILLS BROTHER WITH AN AXE.

New Yorker Then Shoots His Niece and Attempts Suicide.

New York, June 21.—After quarreling over money matters Monday, Samuel Meringola, forty-nine years old, of Fair Ground, L. I., killed his brother, Thomas, aged fifty-two, with an axe, shot his niece, Mrs. Carman Pietra, in the thigh and arm and attempted suicide by cutting his throat.

The murder occurred at Long Swamp, near Fair Ground. After nearly decapitating his brother, Meringola went to the home of Mrs. Pietra and shot her. Meanwhile the news of the murder had reached Huntington and a posse started in search of the murderer. When he was discovered leaving the Pietra house, he opened fire on his pursuers. The shots failed to take effect and he surrendered when the posse fired on him. As the crowd was closing in, Meringola cut his throat. He may recover. Mrs. Pietra will probably die.

Bobrikoff was shot in the stomach and neck and died of his wounds twelve hours later. The attack is ascribed to Finnish patriotism. Schaumann is believed to be a member of what is known as the Finnish Patriotic party.

Are You Interested In the South?

DO YOU CARE TO KNOW OF THE MARVELOUS DEVELOPMENT NOW GOING ON IN

The Great Central South?

OF INNUMERABLE OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUNG MEN OR OLD ONES—TO GROW RICH?

Do you want to know about rich farming lands, fertile, well located on a Trunk Line Railroad, which will produce two, three or four crops from the same field each year? Land now to be had at from $3.00 to $5.00 an acre which will be worth from $30.00 to $150.00 within 10 years? About stock raising where the extreme of winter feeding is but six short weeks? Of places where truck growing and fruit raising yield enormous returns each year? Of a land where you can live out of doors every day in the year? Of opportunities for establishing profitable manufacturing industries; of rich mineral locations, and splendid business openings?

If you want to know the details of any or all of these write me. I will gladly advise you fully and truthfully.

Is the St. Louis Fair a real World's Fair?

Yes, more so than any other Exposition ever held.

Why?

Because 50 different nations (to say nothing of 44 of our own States) will be represented; because the St. Louis Fair is twice as big and cost nearly three times as much as the Columbian Exposition; because it represents the latest triumphs of civilization.

ASSESSORS NEARLY THROUGH.

Work Shows a Large Increase in Red Lake County Values.

The various assessors of the county are putting the finishing touches on their books this week and will soon have the work completed.

On Monday next the town boards of review will meet and go over the work, and the books must be returned to the auditor by July 5. On July 18 the county board meets as a board of equalization, at which time the abstract of the assessors' work will be gone over and any changes made that are deemed necessary.

The Gazette understands that the amount of property listed this year is greatly in excess of former years, and that Red Lake county will show up in good shape when the books are completed.

WILL HANDICAP THE SOO.

Great Northern Comes Smooth Game on New Road.

The Great Northern is not going to make the Soo path in the section about Thief River a bed of roses—that is, at least, where they can prevent it. Tuesday the Great Northern had 800 feet of track laid at the point where the Soo will cross that road north of town. This means that when the Soo builds across the Great Northern line that it can be forced under the state laws to put in an interlock switch, which costs several thousand dollars.

The Soo people realized that they were at a great disadvantage as they could not build a track over the Great Northern right of way as soon as the Great Northern could and made no attempt.

WILL BE PLENTIFUL.

The Opinion Is that Chickens Are Numerous this Year.

The prairie hen and her mate are these days very carefully guarding their nests which have been so well filled with eggs during the weeks gone by and the male bird tenderly administers to the wants of his better half during the tedious hatching of the little "chicks," says the Crookston Journal.

As a result the birds are not greatly in evidence upon the fields and very seldom encountered during rambles across the prairie. In a short time however the little chicks will be out of their shells and the birds again appear before the public upon expeditions for food for their little ones. According to reports and observations the number of chickens this year will be very large. The weather until the past week has been very favorable for the birds and Valley sportsmen quite generally who have investigated the matter are of the opinion that a large crop will be ready for the fall harvest during the hunting season. The lack of poaching this summer will also help increase the shooting a great deal. Not many birds were killed in the early portion of the season and as a result there will be many "broods" come off the nest in excess of the number a year ago.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes: For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times, I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recomend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to enquiries regarding my case. A, L. Reichert.

REDSKINS REBURIED.

Contractor Makes Big Money Replanting Good Indians.

Thief River Press: Joe DuChamp and his party of eight men came down from the lake on Wednesday's boat, after having taken up and re-intered the bodies of 113 Indians taken from the ceded towns to the resting places cited in the contract of removal. Of the total number, 25 were of the Catholic faith and were re-buried at the Agency. The remainder who were pagans were taken across the Beltrami line for burial. The Catholics when taken up were found to be incased in wooden coffins, but those who remained loyal to the old Indian faith were wrapped in birch bark.

Mr. DuChamp completed the work in the remarkably short time of seven days and as he receives $14.50 per corpse from the government, the total sum will count up to $1628.50 of which it is estimated $1,100 is profit.

Up the Red Lake River some 12 or 14 miles two bodies were found in a state of almost perfect preservation, they having become petrified through the action of the water in which the bodies were submerged The bodies had been buried in a sitting posture, and while the upper portions had decayed to a great extent the lower portions were almost as natural as when the death took place.

Fish Die On the Way to St. Louis.

The editors are condoling with Sam Fullerton state fish and game commissioner, over the loss of his fine exhibit of pickerel and pike. Sam arrived in St. Louis, Tuesday with a car load of fish to be placed in the Minnesota acquarium in the fish, game and forestry building. Among them were a number of splendid pike, weighing from seven to twelve pounds, and a lot of gigantic pickerel. Within an hour after the pike and pickerel were placed in tanks they were dead. The exhibition authorities had promised refrigerntered water suited to the needs of fish taken from the cold Minnesota lakes, but the water in the tank was about 75, and all except one pike promptly died. Mr. Fullerton and his assistants, as as the Minnesota commission, greatly feel the loss of these fine fish, as they would have made a great impression on all visitors to the Minnesota game exhibit. It will be impossible to replace them now. The trout and fry were saved by putting them in the refrigerated waters in the federal fisheries building.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

From Belle to Pauper.

Early risers passing by the Rue de la Chine in La Vilette, that home of misery, often met a bent, shriveled, white haired old woman carrying a basket on her back and in her hand a stick with an iron paint to it.

With the stick she searched the rubbish heaps deposited by householders for the scavengers to carry away. She prodded and scrutinized her way along the silent streets, turning over an old shoe here, a bit of rag there or cigar stump or rusty nail and tossing her treasure into her basket. The sad faced old woman took notice of no one.

But the people of the quarter and of localities more fashionable knew that "the mother of the chiffoniers," otherwise ragpickers, had seen better days.

Mme. Andre had once a "de" to her name. Her visiting cards had once borne her family crest. She had figured at the court of Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugenie and there waltzed with the best of them. In her garret in the Rue de la Chine Mme. Andre hoarded the wreck of her fortune, about £500. It was hidden in her mattress.

Returning home the other day from her customary rounds, Mme. Andre found the mattress torn open and her money gone. A few hours later her next door neighbors found her hanging by a cord dead.—Paris Correspondence.

Obeyed Instructions.

Courtney is having his annual experience with freshmen candidates for the crews. When he gives an order to a new man the new man usually obeys literally, such is the respect with which the coach is treated. This came near ruining a shell. Courtney had sent out an eight with a freshman cockswain, and, being obliged to look after another crew for a few minutes, he said to "cocks:"

"Try not to steer in a circle for a change. See that red spot down on the bank there? Well, steer straight for that." With which he turned to his other charges.

A howl from some of the oarsmen turned him around in time to see "cocks" trying to tunnel into the inlet bank with the prow of his shell.

"I thought I told you to steer straight for that red spot," remarked Courtney sarcastically when he came up in the launch.

"I—I did," gasped the cockswain. Courtney looked at the boat and then looked at the red spot. Just then the spot tossed up its horns and moved to better grazing ground. It was a red cow, and the freshman had been zealously swerving his boat around as the cow had moved up and down the pasture.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Here's a Conjecture.

A very strange incident occurred at the Central High school building in Webster, Ia., recently. Every clock in the building stopped at exactly 8 o'clock in the morning. It was the day of the eruption on the island of Java, and the time the clocks stopped was within a very few seconds of the time that the eruption occurred, which covered a village and killed several hundred people. The phenomenon is unexplained except that it was very likely due to some sympathetic electrical disturbance in the zone in which the high school building stands. Of course it may have been a very strange coincidence, and yet this explanation hardly explains it satisfactorily. The phenomenon at the high school building was first noticed on the second floor of the building. Every clock had stopped at just 8 o'clock. Investigation showed that the clocks on both the other floors had also stopped at the same hour. In the kindergarten building, just south of the high school building, all the clocks were going as usual, nothing having interfered with their movements.—Springfield (Ill.) News.

Affinity of Meteorites For Mountains.

A total of 634 meteorites was known up to 1903, of which there were 182 irons and only 74 stones in the western hemisphere and 299 stones and only 79 irons in the eastern hemisphere. The records show only the fall of 350 of these meteorites, dating back to the fifteenth century. Professor Berwerth of Vienna, despite this small number of known specimens, calculates that 900 meteorites must fall to the earth each year, not counting shooting stars that disappear in the atmosphere, and that fifty-five of these at least should come under observation. Professor Berwerth finds that meteorites have been chiefly recorded in civilized countries, but that in many instances they are more numerous in thinly settled districts and that they have an especial affinity for mountainous areas.—Philadelphia Record.

A Lake Postoffice.

In Lake Wabigoon, Ontario, at a point where the water is not very deep, a strong wooden stake has been driven into the ground. On the top a box has been securely fastened, and there you have the Lake Wabigoon postoffice. The little steamer from Rat Portage drops the mail here on its outward voyage, and a canoe goes out from the shore and collects it, depositing the outgoing mail at the same time, which is picked up by the steamer on its return trip to Rat Portage next day.

Too Free With Knives.

Sir Frederick Treves, the eminent English surgeon, recently delivered an address in which he took the view that the knife is used too hastily in many cases of appendicitis. There are opposing schools of surgery all over the world in this generation. One is rarely willing to wait and often cuts in a hurry. The other holds to the view that nature ought to have a liberal chance to do her best. In the long run the conservative surgeons may possibly come out ahead.

The line of march for the parade will be as follows: Forming near Sam Allard's residence (and all floats are requested to be there at 9:30) the parade will come down Main street to Second, up Second to Champagne, up Champagne to Fifth street, down Fifth to Main and down Main to the Clearwater island.

From noon until one o'clock will be given over to eating and resting after which the crowd will be invited to the ball park to witness the ball game between Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls which promises to be the most exciting contest of the summer.

No admission will be charged to the ball game.

PRETTY JUNE WEDDING

Dr. John E. Argue and Elizabeth Stuart Hunt Joined in Wedlock's Holy Bonds Wednesday Morning.

Wednesday morning at eight o'clock the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Hunt was the scene of a very pretty June wedding, when their eldest daughter, Elizabeth Stuart, was united in marriage to Dr. John E. Argue. About fifty guests and the immediate family were present at the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Herbert W. Knox, of the First Presbyterian church. The rooms were exquisitely decorated for the occasion. The ceremony took place in the parlor at a marriage altar improvised under a canopy of green and white, with a background of green. After all the guests were assembled and just before the ceremony the beautiful song, "O Promise Me" was charmingly rendered by the Misses Margaret Kans and Etta Zaiser. Mrs. Thomas Germo presided at the piano. As the bridal party entered the room Lohengren's bridal chorus was sung by the girl friends of the bride. Ralph Wyer and Sam E. Hunt acted as ushers. Dr. N. M. Watson was best man, and the bride's attendants were the Misses Josephine Kans and Mahel Wyer. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a charming gown of white air line cloth, over white silk, made shirred and with a point lace bertha. She carried a shower boquet of brides' roses. The bridesmaids wore white organdie gowns and carried red and white carnations. After the words had been spoken uniting the twain at the altar and while they were receiving congratulations of their friends, Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mrs. Geruo.

Following the ceremony an elegant reception was held, from nine to eleven, to which about three hundred guests were invited. A wedding breakfast was served after the reception to the bridal party and out of town guests. The presents were both numerous and beautiful. The bride belongs to one of Red Lake Falls' best families and has spent the greater portion of her life here. She is a graduate of the high school, and is a charming and accomplished young woman, a favorite in a wide circle of friends. The groom is a graduate of the Dental department of the University of Minnesota and since his graduation has practiced his profession in this city. During his residence here he has made many friends and has been prominent in both business and social circles.

Dr. and Mrs. Argue left yesterday afternoon via Crookston on an extended wedding trip. They will tour the Great Lakes, visit Chicago and friends and relatives in the southern part of the state before returning. The brides going away gown was of sage green voile with hat to match. Doctor and Mrs. Argue will reside in the Klepper cottage on the North Side, and will be at home to their friends after September first. The Gazette joins a legend of other friends in tendering congratulations to the happy couple.

The out of town guests were: Misses Mary and Clara Swisher, of Minneapolis; Miss Muble Wyer, of Excelsior; Miss Laura Hollinshead, of Duluth; Dr. Fiset, of Grand Forks; Miss Clara Lanning, of Sheldon, Iowa. Dr. and Mrs. Lanning, Mrs. W. A. Murphy, Mrs. C. C. Jackson, Mrs. Karl Hansen, and Miss Grace Meehau, of Thief River Falls; Dr. and Mrs. Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Smith, of Crookston.

ROOSEVELT-FAIRBANKS

The Republican National convention at Chicago last Thursday afternoon, nominated as standard bearers of the Republican party in the coming campaign, Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, for president, and Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, for vice-president. The convention was one of the greatest ever held, and the feeling that the grandest victory in the history of the party would occur this fall was everywhere apparent, the mention of the names of the great standard-bearers being cheered to the echo.

JAPS SINK A WARSHIP

VESSEL OF RUSSIAN PORT ARTHUR FLEET SENT TO THE BOTTOM BY THE ENEMY.

ENTIRE SQUADRON LEFT THE HARBOR IN AN EFFORT TO RUN THE BLOCKADE.

SEVERAL OF THE JAPANESE TORPEDO BOATS INJURED IN THE ENGAGEMENT.

Tokio, June 25.—Admiral Togo reports that on Thursday last, June 23, his patrol boats discovered the battleship Peresviet and seven other vessels, accompanied by nine torpedo boat destroyers, near the entrance of Port Arthur harbor. They warned him wirelessly and he immediately advanced his entire fleet except those engaged upon special duty. The admiral then discovered that the Russian fleet, which consisted of six battleships, five cruisers and fourteen destroyers, evidently planned a dash southward by sundown.

The Russians stopped outside the entrance to the harbor and after nightfall a fleet of Japanese torpedo boat destroyers resolutely attacked the Russian ships and succeeded in torpedoing and sinking a battleship of the Peresviet type and disabled the battleship Sevastopol. A cruiser of the Diana type was observed being towed into the harbor on Friday morning and it was evident she had sustained serious damage.

The Japanese ships sustained little damage. The torpedo boat destroyer Shirakumo was hit by a shell, which fell in the cabin, and had three men killed and three others wounded. The Chidori, a vessel of the same class, was hit behind the engineroom, but no casualties resulted therefrom. Torpedo boats 64 and 66 were slightly damaged.

ENGAGEMENT WAS EXPECTED.

But Russians Have No News of Port Arthur Fight.

St. Petersburg, June 25.—The admiralty has no direct news of the naval battle fought off Port Arthur June 23, but the announcement of the engagement evidently created no surprise here, the authorities having been aware that the squadron of Rear Admiral Wittsoeft was ready to put to sea at a moment's notice.

On Thursday the correspondent of the Associated Press was informed that important naval developments were anticipated. If an actual engagement occurred the admiralty cannot believe that Admiral Togo got off practically unhurt. Particular solicitude, therefore, is expressed to know whether the Russian battleship Peresviet was sunk by a mine as she was emerging from the harbor or by a projectile, as it was known that the Japanese had repeatedly tried to mine the entrance.

BIG BATTLE IMMINENT

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND RUSSIANS AND JAPANESE LINED UP FOR THE FRAY.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—Lieutenant General Sakharoff's dispatch received Monday night confirms the belief that the great decisive battle of the campaign between General Kuropatkin's main army and the armies of Generals Kuroki and Oku is imminent. The three armies probably aggregate 300,000 men and their outposts are today in touch all along the line. The Japanese evidently tried to draw Kuropatkin as far south as possible, holding out as an incentive a check to the advance of Oku's main army. Meantime Oku swung sharply to the eastward to join Kuroki toward the Chnpan pass, Kuroki at the same time moving a strong force by the right flank toward Haicheng.

The main Japanese advance continues along the main Feagwangcheng-Liaoyang road, avoiding the Moatien pass by a detour to the northward. The advance in all points is being attended by constant skirmishing.

Nothing is known here of the exact point at which Kuropatkin's main force is concentrated, though it is believed that a large part of the Liaoyang force has been moved to a point between Kinchau and Tashichiao.

INSURGENTS ARE BEATEN.

Uruguayan Government Troops Win Hard Battle With Rebels.

Montevideo, Uruguay, June 25.—The government has received information that a battle with insurgents has been won by Colonel Galaraz, in command of the government troops at Cerro Largo, 205 miles from Montevideo. The fighting continued for a day and a half. Six hundred insurgents were killed or wounded and the government cavalry pursued the defeated army.

MAN HUNT CONTINUES.

Bloodhounds on Track of Wisconsin Murderer.

Winona, Minn., June 27.—Eight bloodhounds are leading big posses of armed men hot on the trail of the murderer of Sheriff Harris of Hudson in the wilds of the tamarack swamps in Trempeleau county, Wis.

A pair of overalls discarded by the man has been found and the dogs took the trail from these.

All bridges across the river and all roads coming into Winona are picketed by militismen and no one passes without being challenged.

Gasoline launches are also patrolling the river to prevent the fugitive's escape from the circle of armed men that is closing in upon him and it is believed that he will be captured shortly.

Sunday night John Jarvis narrowly escaped inflicting death when peaceably driving into Winona. He was challenged by a Wisconsin militiaman and was startled into pulling a revolver, which he fired. The militiaman was wounded, but not seriously.

ARCHBISHOP GUIDI DEAD.

Vatican's Representative in the Philippines Passes Away.

Washington, June 27.—A cablegram was received at the war department Sunday from Manila announcing the death there Sunday of Archbishop Guidi.

Monsignore Guidi was sent to the Philippine islands nearly two years ago as the representative of the vatican in the negotiations with the Philippine commissioners for the sale of the friar lands to the American government. An agreement was reached early in December last by Governor Taft and the friars. The settlement provided for the purchase of 403,000 acres, comprising all the friar lands in the islands. The price paid for the lands was $7,250,000.

LIND STOPS STAMPEDE

HEARST CONTROLS MINNESOTA DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION BUT LOSES DELEGATES.

Duluth, June 23.—The Democratic state delegate convention held here last evening refused to instruct its delegates for Hearst after his supporters had secured control of the convention. The race between Major Bowler, the Hearst leader of Minneapolis, and C. D. O'Brien, the anti-Hearst candidate for chairman, was extremely close, but the former won out by a margin of 40 votes of the 1,002 present. For a time it looked as though Hearst sentiment would rule in everything and it doubtless would have done so had it not been for a speech of Congressman John Lind, who turned a crowd of excited delegates who clamored for an instructed delegation, to one which expressed itself when the vote came as opposed to instructing for Hearst or any other man.

The anti-Hearst men secured three of the four delegates at large and will get an even break on the district delegates. The delegates at large are: John Lind of Minneapolis, L. A. Rosing of Cannon Falls, H. L. Buck of Winona and C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul.

The convention was very stormy and for a time a bolt seemed probable, because of the gavel wielding of Major Bowler.

The resolutions declare for a reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform and laud William J. Bryan as the greatest Democratic statesman of the day.

SIXTY DEAD ON FIELD

RUSSIANS DEFEATED BY DETACHMENT OF JAPANESE TAKUSHAN ARMY.

London, June 25.—The Japanese legation has received a dispatch from Tokio announcing that a detachment of the Takushan army surprised and routed a squadron of Russian cavalry ten miles northwest of Santaokow, on the Tatchekiao road, at dawn June 23 and also occupied the heights north thereof, expelling the Russians, who left sixty dead on the field.

CORTELYOU IS CHAIRMAN.

Selected as Head of Republican National Committee.

Chicago, June 24.—George B. Cortelyou was chosen chairman of the Republican national committee at a meeting held just after the adjournment of the convention.

In thanking the committee for the honor he told the members that while he would be glad to have the benefit of their advice and counsel, he intended to be chairman in fact and would accept no dictation from anyone, high or low. He told them that the friends of the late chairman, Mr. Hanna, were his friends and he asked for the same measure of confidence and support that had been given to the late chairman.

In conclusion he sought the advice of both old and new members.

BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

ROOSEVELT NAMED FOR PRESIDENT BY NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

FAIRBANKS SELECTED FOR SECOND PLACE ON THE TICKET BY ACCLAMATION.

CLOSING DAY OF THE BIG GATHERING MARKED BY SCENES OF ENTHUSIASM.

Chicago, June 24.—For the second time in the history of Republican conventions selection of a national ticket was made without a dissenting vote. Theodore Roosevelt for president received every vote in the convention, while Charles W. Fairbanks for vice president was named by acclamation.

Regardless of the fact that the nomination of one had been assured for months and the other for days the announcement of the choice was accompanied by a resounding demonstration which attested the candidates' universal popularity. The cheering was led by figures known through the breadth of the land and echoed by a mighty throng of enthusiastic men and radiant women assembled in the Coliseum to witness the crowning feature as well as the close of the thirteenth national convention that marks the semi-centennial of the Republican party in the United States.

Theodore Roosevelt was placed in nomination by ex-Governor Black of New York and the closing words of his speech were followed by a demonstration lasting fully twenty-five minutes. The nomination was seconded by Senator Beveridge of Indiana, George A. Knight of California, Henry S. Edwards of Georgia, ex-Governor Bradley of Kentucky, Joseph B. Cotton of Minnesota and Harry S. Cummings, a colored delegate from Maryland. On the roll call of states Roosevelt received 994 votes, the full strength of the convention.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa made the speech placing Senator Fairbanks before the convention for vice president and the nomination was seconded by Senators Depew, Foraker and Carter and Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania. As no other nominations were made Senator Fairbanks was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

ADOPT THE PLATFORM

REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE APPROVED BY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Chicago, June 23.—From the standpoint of political importance the adoption of the party platform was the event of the second day's session of the Republican national convention. It contained declarations of party policy that are to form the basis of much of the oratory in the coming campaign.

Preceding the adoption of the platform the report of the committee on permanent organization, naming Speaker Cannon for permanent chairman, was adopted. His speech aroused great enthusiasm among the delegates and visitors.

The platform reviews the work of the Republican party during its last seven years of complete supremacy in national affairs; points with pride to the work done in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines; declares in favor of upholding the gold standard; favors legislation to upbuild American shipping; commends the foreign policy of President Roosevelt and his action in the Panama canal and other matters. Regarding trusts and the tariff the platform says:

"Laws enacted by the Republican party, which the Democratic party failed to enforce and which were intended for the protection of the public against the unjust discrimination of the illegal encroachment of vast aggregations of capital, have been fearlessly enforced by a Republican president and new laws insuring reasonable publicity as to the operations of great corporations and providing additional remedies for the prevention of discrimination in freight rates have been passed by a Republican congress.

"Protection, which guards and develops our industries, is a cardinal policy of the Republican party. The measure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. We insist upon the maintenance of the principles of protection and, therefore, rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands their alteration, but this work cannot safely be committed to any other hands than those of the Republican party."

WARSHIP GOING TO HAYTI.

Will Demand Redress for Insult to French Minister.

Paris, June 25.—Following a meeting of the council of ministers Friday it was officially announced that the government intended to send a warship to Hayti to demand redress for the insult to Minister Depres, who was stoned by the palace guards on Wednesday. This decision followed Foreign Minister Delcasse's presentation of the circumstances of the assault to the council.

The officials do not attach undue seriousness to the affair. The nature of the redress which the warship will demand is not yet announced. The question of asking for an indemnity has been considered, but it has not been decided whether this will be required, in addition to a most ample apology. One of the ships of the French squadron in West Indian waters will be designated to make the demand.

CHANGES IN CABINET

NEW MEN FOR NAVY PORTFOLIO AND THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR.

Washington, June 25.—A sweeping change in the cabinet of President Roosevelt was announced officially at the White House during the day. The announcement came in the form of a brief typewritten statement issued by Secretary Loeb as follows:

"The following cabinet changes are announced:

"William H. Moody of Massachusetts, attorney general.

"Paul Morton of Illinois, secretary of the navy.

"Victor H. Metcalf of California, secretary of commerce and labor.

"The resignations of Secretary Cortelyou and Attorney General Knox have been accepted to take effect July 1."

For two weeks or more it has been known that these changes were impending.

It is expected that further changes will take place in the cabinet next winter. Postmaster General Payne probably will retire from the cabinet after the campaign. He will be succeeded by National Chairman Cortelyou.

FERRYBOAT IS SUNK

SIXTY RUSSIANS DROWNED AND ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ARE MISSING.

St. Petersburg, June 25.—The Rosotofu ferryboat, while crossing the Kohpor river, a tributary of the Don, sank with all on board. Sixty bodies have been recovered and 150 persons are missing.

THIRTY-THREE MEN DROWNED.

Laborers Perish While at Work in Enormous Conduit.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 28.—Thirty-three persons were killed by an accident which took place near Spanish Town, ten miles west of Kingston, Monday, in the main conduit of the West Indian Electric company, which operates the street cars from Kingston and the shareholders of which are principally Canadians. Nearly 100 laborers had been detailed to remove sand from the enormous pipe which is nearly a mile long and conveys water from the intake on the Rio Cobra to the turbines of the powerhouse. The work had practically been completed when orders were given to allow a small quantity of water to enter the conduit. Through misapprehension, accident or carelessness, the full force of water was turned on and a mad struggle to escape by means of the manholes ensued with the result that thirty-three persons were killed.

Three Men Drowned.

Joliet, Ill., June 28.—In the Illinois river near Morris, Harry Jacobs, Harry Brooker and John Bloom were drowned by the accidental capsizing of a boat in which they were making a fishing trip. All were from Joliet.

OVER ELEVEN HUNDRED MEN.

Total Loss of the Japs at the Battle of Vafangow.

Tokio, June 2[illegible].—The Japanese casualties in the battle of Tellssu (Vafangow), June 15, were 7 officers and 210 men killed and 903 men wounded.

The Japanese evidently tried to draw Kuropatkin as far south as possible, holding out as an incentive a check to the advance of Oku's main army. Meantime Oku swung sharply to the eastward to join Kuroki toward the Chapan pass, Kuroki at the same time moving a strong force by the right flank toward Haicheng.

The main Japanese advance continues along the main Fengwangcheng-Liaoyang road, avoiding the Moatien pass by a detour to the northward. The advance in all pointss is being attended by constant skirmishing.

Nothing is known here of the exact point at which Kuropatkin's main force is concentrated, though it is believed that a large part of the Liaoyang force has been moved to a point between Kinchau and Tashichiao.

INSURGENTS ARE BEATEN.

Uruguayan Government Troops Win Hard Battle With Rebels.

Montevideo, Uruguay, June 25.—The government has received information that a battle with insurgents has been won by Colonel Galaraz, in command of the government troops at Cerro Largo, 205 miles from Montevideo. The fighting continued for a day and a half. Six hundred insurgents were killed or wounded and the government cavalry pursued the defeated army.

MAN HUNT CONTINUES.

Bloodhounds on Track of Wisconsin Murderer.

Winona, Minn., June 27.—Eight bloodhounds are leading big posses of armed men hot on the trail of the murderer of Sheriff Harris of Hudson in the wilds of the tamarack swamps in Trempeleau county, Wis.

A pair of overalls discarded by the man has been found and the dogs took the trail from these.

All bridges across the river and all roads coming into Winona are picketed by militiamen and no one passes without being challenged.

Gasoline launches are also patrolling the river to prevent the fugitive's escape from the circle of armed men that is closing in upon him and it is believed that he will be captured shortly.

Sunday night John Jarvis narrowly escaped inflicting death when peaceably driving into Winona. He was challenged by a Wisconsin militiaman and was startled into pulling a revolver, which he fired. The militiaman was wounded, but not seriously.

ARCHBISHOP GUIDI DEAD.

Vatican's Representative in the Philippines Passes Away.

Washington, June 27.—A cablegram was received at the war department Sunday from Manila announcing the death there Sunday of Archbishop Guidi.

Monsignore Guidi was sent to the Philippine islands nearly two years ago as the representative of the vatican in the negotiations with the Philippine commissioners for the sale of the friar lands to the American government. An agreement was reached early in December last by Governor Taft and the friars. The settlement provided for the purchase of 403,000 acres, comprising all the friar lands in the islands. The price paid for the lands was $7,250,000.

LIND STOPS STAMPEDE

HEARST CONTROLS MINNESOTA DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION BUT LOSES DELEGATES.

Duluth, June 23.—The Democratic state delegate convention held here last evening refused to instruct its delegates for Hearst after his supporters had secured control of the convention. The race between Major Bowler, the Hearst leader of Minneapolis, and C. D. O'Brien, the anti-Hearst candidate for chairman, was extremely close, but the former won out by a margin of 40 votes of the 1,002 present. For a time it looked as though Hearst sentiment would rule in everything and it doubtless would have done so had it not been for a speech of Congressman John Lind, who turned a crowd of excited delegates who clamored for an instructed delegation, to one which expressed itself when the vote came as opposed to instructing for Hearst or any other man.

The anti-Hearst men secured three of the four delegates at large and will get an even break on the district delegates. The delegates at large are: John Lind of Minneapolis, L. A. Rosing of Cannon Falls, H. L. Buck of Winona and C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul.

The convention was very stormy and for a time a bolt seemed probable, because of the gavel wielding of Major Bowler.

The resolutions declare for a reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform and laud William J. Bryan as the greatest Democratic statesman of the day.

SIXTY DEAD ON FIELD

RUSSIANS DEFEATED BY DETACHMENT OF JAPANESE TAKUSHAN ARMY.

London, June 25.—The Japanese legation has received a dispatch from Tokio announcing that a detachment of the Takushan army surprised and routed a squadron of Russian cavalry ten miles northwest of Santaokow, on the Tatcheklao road, at dawn June 23 and also occupied the heights north thereof, expelling the Russians, who left sixty dead on the field.

CORTELYOU IS CHAIRMAN.

Selected as Head of Republican National Committee.

Chicago, June 24.—George B. Cortelyou was chosen chairman of the Republican national committee at a meeting held just after the adjournment of the convention.

In thanking the committee for the honor he told the members that while he would be glad to have the benefit of their advice and counsel, he intended to be chairman in fact and would accept no dictation from anyone, high or low. He told them that the friends of the late chairman, Mr. Hanna, were his friends and he asked for the same measure of confidence and support that had been given to the late chairman.

In conclusion he sought the advice of both old and new members.

BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

ROOSEVELT NAMED FOR PRESIDENT BY NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

FAIRBANKS SELECTED FOR SECOND PLACE ON THE TICKET BY ACCLAMATION.

CLOSING DAY OF THE BIG GATHERING MARKED BY SCENES OF ENTHUSIASM.

Chicago, June 24.—For the second time in the history of Republican conventions selection of a national ticket was made without a dissenting vote. Theodore Roosevelt for president received every vote in the convention, while Charles W. Fairbanks for vice president was named by acclamation.

Regardless of the fact that the nomination of one had been assured for months and the other for days the announcement of the choice was accompanied by a resounding demonstration which attested the candidates' universal popularity. The cheering was led by figures known through the breadth of the land and echoed by a mighty throng of enthusiastic men and radiant women assembled in the Coliseum to witness the crowning feature as well as the close of the thirteenth national convention, that marks the semi-centennial of the Republican party in the United States.

Theodore Roosevelt was placed in nomination by ex-Governor Black of New York and the closing words of his speech were followed by a demonstration lasting fully twenty-five minutes. The nomination was seconded by Senator Beveridge of Indiana, George A. Knight of California, Henry S. Edwards of Georgia, ex-Governor Bradley of Kentucky, Joseph B. Cotton of Minnesota and Harry S. Cummings, a colored delegate from Maryland. On the roll call of states Roosevelt received 994 votes, the full strength of the convention.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa made the speech placing Senator Fairbanks before the convention for vice president and the nomination was seconded by Senators Depew, Foraker and Carter and Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania. As no other nominations were made Senator Fairbanks was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

ADOPT THE PLATFORM

REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE APPROVED BY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Chicago, June 23.—From the standpoint of political importance the adoption of the party platform was the event of the second day's session of the Republican national convention. It contained declarations of party policy that are to form the basis of much of the oratory in the coming campaign.

Preceding the adoption of the platform the report of the committee on permanent organization, naming Speaker Cannon for permanent chairman, was adopted. His speech aroused great enthusiasm among the delegates and visitors.

The platform reviews the work of the Republican party during its last seven years of complete supremacy in national affairs; points with pride to the work done in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines; declares in favor of upholding the gold standard; favors legislation to upbuild American shipping; commends the foreign policy of President Roosevelt and his action in the Panama canal and other matters. Regarding trusts and the tariff the platform says:

"Laws enacted by the Republican party, which the Democratic party failed to enforce and which were intended for the protection of the public against the unjust discrimination of the illegal encroachment of vast aggregations of capital, have been fearlessly enforced by a Republican president and new laws ensuring reasonable publicity as to the operations of great corporations and providing additional remedies for the prevention of discrimination in freight rates have been passed by a Republican congress.

"Protection, which guards and develops our industries, is a cardinal policy of the Republican party. The measure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. We insist upon the maintenance of the principles of protection and, therefore, rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands their alteration, but this work cannot safely be committed to any other hands than those of the Republican party."

WARSHIP GOING TO HAYTI.

Will Demand Redress for Insult to French Minister.

Paris, June 25.—Following a meeting of the council of ministers Friday it was officially announced that the government intended to send a warship to Hayti to demand redress for the insult to Minister Depres, who was stoned by the palace guards on Wednesday. This decision followed Foreign Minister Delcasse's presentation of the circumstances of the assault to the council.

The officials do not attach undue seriousness to the affair. The nature of the redress which the warship will demand is not yet announced. The question of asking for an indemnity has been considered, but it has not been decided whether this will be required, in addition to a most ample apology. One of the ships of the French squadron in West Indian waters will be designated to make the demand.

CHANGES IN CABINET

NEW MEN FOR NAVY PORTFOLIO AND THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR.

Washington, June 25.—A sweeping change in the cabinet of President Roosevelt was announced officially at the White House during the day. The announcement came in the form of a brief typewritten statement issued by Secretary Loeb as follows:

"The following cabinet changes are announced:

"William H. Moody of Massachusetts, attorney general.

"Paul Morton of Illinois, secretary of the navy.

"Victor H. Metcalf of California, secretary of commerce and labor.

"The resignations of Secretary Cortelyou and Attorney General Knox have been accepted to take effect July 1."

For two weeks or more it has been known that these changes were impending.

It is expected that further changes will take place in the cabinet next winter. Postmaster General Payne probably will retire from the cabinet after the campaign. He will be succeeded by National Chairman Cortelyou.

FERRYBOAT IS SUNK

SIXTY RUSSIANS DROWNED AND ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ARE MISSING.

St. Petersburg, June 25.—The Rosotofu ferryboat, while crossing the Kohper river, a tributary of the Don, sank with all on board. Sixty bodies have been recovered and 150 persons are missing.

THIRTY-THREE MEN DROWNED.

Laborers Perish While at Work in Enormous Conduit.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 28.—Thirty-three persons were killed by an accident which took place near Spanish Town, ten miles west of Kingston, Monday, in the main conduit of the West Indian Electric company, which operates the street cars from Kingston and the shareholders of which are principally Canadians. Nearly 100 laborers had been detailed to remove sand from the enormous pipe which is nearly a mile long and conveys water from the intake on the Rio Cobra to the turbines of the powerhouse. The work had practically been completed when orders were given to allow a small quantity of water to enter the conduit. Through misapprehension, accident or carelessness, the full force of water was turned on and a mad struggle to escape by means of the manholes ensued with the result that thirty-three persons were killed.

Three Men Drowned.

Joliet, Ill., June 28.—In the Illinois river near Morris, Harry Jacobs, Harry Brooker and John Bloom were drowned by the accidental capsizing of a boat in which they were making a fishing trip. All were from Joliet.

OVER ELEVEN HUNDRED MEN.

Total Loss of the Japs at the Battle of Vafangow.

Tokio, June 27.—The Japanese casualties in the battle of Telissu (Vafangow), June 15, were 7 officers and 210 men killed and 903 men wounded.

dered cuff and shirt sleeve dangled out from under the fastened lid. "I haven't one second to talk, Tom; I have eighteen minutes to catch the express. It's more than a mile to the station, and the train leaves here at 9:02. I get there at 10:47. Telephone a cab for me, please, or tell me the number. I don't want to stop to hunt it up."

Meredith looked him in the eyes. In the pupils of Harkless flared a fierce light. His cheeks were reddened with an angry, healthy glow, and his teeth were clinched till the line of his jaw stood out like that of an embattled athlete. His brow was dark, his chest was thrown out, and he took deep, quick breaths. His shoulders were squared, and in spite of his thinness they looked massy. Lethargy or malaria, or both—whatever his ailment—it was gone. He was six feet of hot wrath and cold resolution.

Tom said, "You are going?"

"Yes," he answered quietly, "I am going."

"Then I will go with you."

"Thank you, Tom," said Harkless simply.

Meredith ran into his room, pressed an electric button and began to dive into his clothes with a panting rapidity astonishingly foreign to his desire. The colored man appeared in the doorway.

"The cart, Jim!" shouted his master. "We want it like lightning. Tell the cook to give Mr. Harkless his breakfast in a hurry. Set a cup of coffee on the table by the front door for me. Run! We've got to catch a train. That will be quicker than any cab," he explained to Harkless. "We'll break the ordinance against fast driving getting down there."

Ten minutes later the cart swept away from the house at a gait that palled the respectable neighborhood. The big horse plunged through the air, his ears laid flat toward his tail. The cart careened sickeningly, and the face of the servant clutching at the rail in the rear was smeared with pallor as they pirouetted around curves on one wheel. To him it seemed they skirted the corners and death simultaneously, and the speed of their going made a strong wind in their faces.

Harkless leaned forward. "Can you make it a little faster, Tom?" he said.

They dashed up to the station amid the cries of people flying to the walls for safety. The two gentlemen leaped from the cart, bore down upon the ticket office, stormed at the agent and ran madly at the gates, flourishing their passports. The official on duty eyed them wearily. "Been gone two minutes," he remarked with a peaceable yawn.

Harkless stamped his foot on the cement flags; then he stood stock still, gazing at the empty tracks, but Meredith turned to him, smiling. "Won't it keep?" he asked.

"Yes, it will keep," John answered. "Part of it may have to keep till election day, but some of it I will settle before night. And that," he cried between his teeth, "and that is the part of it in regard to young Fisbee!"

"Oh, it's about H. Fisbee, is it?"

"Yes, it's H. Fisbee."

"Well, we might as well go up and see what the doctor thinks of you; there's no train."

"I don't want to see a doctor again ever—as long as I live. I'm as well as anybody."

Tom burst out laughing and clapped his companion lightly on the shoulder, his eyes dancing with pleasure. "Upon my soul," he cried, "I believe you are. A miracle wrought by the witch wand of indignation! That's rather against tradition, isn't it? Well, let's take a drive."

"Meredith," said the other, turning to him gravely, "you may think me a fool if you will, and it's likely I am, but I don't leave this station except by train. I've only two days to work in, and every minute lessens our chances to beat McCune, and I have to begin by wasting time on a tussle with a traitor. There's another train at 11:55; I don't take any chances on missing that one."

Harkless, fully dressed, was standing in the middle of the floor.

"Well, well," laughed his friend, pushing him good humoredly toward a door by a red and white striped pillar, "We'll wait here if you like. But at least go in there and get a shave; it's a clean shop. You want to look your best if you are going down to fight H. Fisbee."

"Take these, then, and you will understand," said Harkless, and he thrust his three telegrams of the morning into Tom's hand and disappeared into the barber shop. When he was gone Meredith went to the telegraph office in the station and sent a line over the wires to Helen: "Keep your delegation at home. He's coming on the 11:55."

Then he read the three telegrams Harkless had given him. They were all from Plattville.

Sorry cannot oblige. Present incumbent tenacious. Delicate matter. No hope for K. H. But don't worry. Everything all right. WARREN SMITH.

Harkless, if you have the strength to walk, come down before the convention. Get here by 10:47. Looks bad. Come if it kills you. K. H.

You intrusted me with sole responsibility for all matters pertaining to Herald. Declared yourself mere spectator. Does this permit your interfering with my policy for the paper? Decline to consider any proposition to relieve me of my duties without proper warning and allowance of time. Forced to disregard all suggestions as to policy, which, by your own instructions, is entirely my affair and must be carried out as I direct. H. FISBEE.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE accommodation train wandered down through the afternoon sunshine, stopping at every village and every country postoffice on the line. There was a passenger in the smoker who found the stops at these wayside hamlets interminable. He got up and paced the aisle now and then, and his companion reminded him that this was not certain to hasten the hour of their arrival at their destination. "I know that," answered he, "but I've got to beat McCune."

"By the way," observed Meredith, "you left your stick behind."

"You don't think I need a club to face"—

Tom choked. "Oh, no; I wasn't thinking of your giving H. Fisbee a beating. I meant to lean on."

"I don't want it. I've got to walk lame all my life, but I'm not going to hobble on a stick."

Tom looked at him sadly for a moment. It was true, and the Crossroaders might hug themselves in their cells over the thought. For the rest of his life John Harkless was to walk with just the limp they themselves would have had if, as in former days, their sentence had been to the ball and chain.

"Sit down, boy, sit down," said Meredith, and his friend obeyed.

The window was open beside the two young men, and the breeze that blew in soothed like a balm, yet held a tang and spice in it, a hint of walnuts and of coming frost. There was a newness in the atmosphere that day, a bright invigoration that set the blood tingling. The hot months were done with; languor was routed. Autumn spoke to industry, told of the sowing of another harvest, of the tawny shock, of the purple grape, of the red apple, and called upon muscle and laughter, breathing gayety into men's hearts. The little stations hummed with bustle and noise, big farm wagons rattled off up the village streets and raced with "cut under" or omnibus; people walked with quick steps; the baggagemasters called cheerily to the trainmen, and the brakemen laughed goodbys to rollicking girls. At times the train ran between shadowy groves, and delicate landscape vistas, framed in branches, opened, closed and succeeded each other, and then the travelers were carried beyond into the level open again and looked out to where the intensely blue September skies ran down to the low horizon, meeting the boundless aisles of corn. It takes a long time for the full beauty of the flat lands to reach a man's soul. Once there, nor hills, nor sea, nor growing fan leaves of palm shall suffice him. It is like the beauty in the word Indiana. It may be that there are people who do not consider Indiana a beautiful word, but let it ring true in your ears, and it has a richer sound than Vallambrosa.

All at once the anger ran out of John Harkless. He was a hard man for anger to tarry with. And in place of it a strong sense of home coming began to take possession of him. He was going home. "Back to Plattville, where I belong," he said to himself without bitterness, and it was the truth. "Every man cometh to his own place in the end."

Yes, as one leaves a gay acquaintance of the playhouse lobby for some hard handed, tried old friend, so he would wave the outer world godspeed and come back to the old ways of Carlow. What though the years were dusty, he had his friends and his memories and his old black brier pipe. He had a girl's picture that he should carry in his heart till his last day, and if his life was sadder it was infinitely richer for it. His winter fireside would be not so lonely for her sake, and, losing her, he lost not everything, for he had had the rare blessing of having known her. And what man could wish to be healed of such a hurt? Far better to have had it than to trot a smug pace unscathed. He had been a dullard, a sluggard, weary of himself, unfit to fight, a failure in life and a failure in love. That was ended. He was tired of failing, and it was time to succeed for awhile. To accept the worst that fate can deal and to wring courage from it instead of despair—that is success, and it was the success that he would have. He would take fate by the neck. But had it done him unkindness? He looked out over the beautiful, "monotonous" landscape, and he answered heartily, "No!" There was ignorance in man, but no unkindness. Were man utterly wise he were utterly kind. The Crossroaders had not known better; that was all.

The unfolding aisles of corn swam pleasantly before his eyes. The earth hearkened to man's wants and answered. The clement sun and summer rains hastened the fruition. Yonder stood the brown haystack, garnered to feed the industrious horse that had earned his meed. There was the straw thatched shelter for the cattle. How the orchard boughs bent with their burdens! The big red barns stood stored with the harvest, for this was Carlow county, and he was coming home.

They crossed a byroad. An old man with a streaky gray chin beard was sitting on a sack of oats in a seatless wagon waiting for the train to pass. Harkless seized his companion excitedly by the elbow. "Tommy," he cried, "it's Kim Fentriss! Look! Did you see that old fellow?"

"I saw a particularly uninterested and uninteresting gentleman sitting on a bag," replied his friend.

"Why, that's old Kimball Fentriss. He's going to town. He lives on the edge of the county."

"Can this be true?" said Meredith gravely.

"I wonder," said Harkless thoughtfully a few moments later—"I wonder why he had them changed around."

"Who changed around?"

"The team. He always used to drive the bay on the near side and the sorrel on the off."

"And at present," rejoined Meredith, "I am to understand that he is driving the sorrel on the near side and the bay on the off?"

"That's it," returned the other. "He must have worked them like that for some time, because they didn't look uneasy. They're all right about the train, those two. I've seen them stand with their heads almost against a fast freight. See there." He pointed to a white frame farmhouse with green blinds. "That's Win Hibbard's. We're just outside of Beaver."

"Beaver? Elucidate Beaver, boy."

"Beaver? Meredith, your information ends at home. What do you know of your own state if you are ignorant of Beaver? Beaver is that city of Carlow county next in importance and population to Plattville."

Tom put his head out of the window. "I fancy you are right," he said. "I already see five people there."

Meredith had observed the change in his companion's mood. He had watched him closely all day, looking for a return of his malady, but he came to the conclusion that in truth a miracle had been wrought, for the lethargy was gone and vigor seemed to increase in Harkless with every turn of the wheels that brought them nearer Plattville, and the nearer they drew to Plattville the higher the spirits of both the young men rose. Meredith knew what was happening there, and he began to be a little excited. As he had said, there were five people visible at Beaver, and he wondered where they lived, as the only building in sight was the station, and to satisfy his curiosity he walked out to the vestibule. The little station stood in the woods, and brown leaves whirled along the platform. One of the five people was an old lady, and she entered a rear car. The other four were men. One of them handed the conductor a telegram. Meredith heard the official say: "All right. Decorate ahead. I'll hold it five minutes."

The man sprang up the steps of the smoker and looked in. He turned to Meredith. "Do you know if that gentleman in the gray coat is Mr. Harkless? He's got his back this way, and I don't want to go inside. The air in a smoker always gives me a spell."

"Yes, that's Mr. Harkless."

The man jumped to the platform. "All right, boys," he said. "Rip her out!"

The doors of the freight room were thrown open, and a big bundle of colored stuffs was dragged out and hastily unfolded. One of the men ran to the farther end of the car with a strip of red, white and blue bunting and tacked it securely, while another fastened the other extremity to the railing of the steps by Meredith. The two companions of this pair performed the same operation with another strip on the other side of the car. They ran similar lines of bunting near the roof from end to end, so that except for the windows the sides of the car were completely covered by the national colors. Then they draped the vestibules with flags. It was all done in a trice.

Meredith's heart was beating fast. "What's it all about?" he asked.

"Picnic down the line," answered the man in charge, removing a tack from his mouth. He motioned to the conductor, "Go ahead!"

The wheels began to move; the decorators remained on the station platform, letting the train pass them, but Meredith, craning his neck from the steps, saw that they jumped on the last car.

"What's the celebration?" asked Harkless when Meredith returned.

"Picnic down the line," said Meredith.

"Nipping weather for a picnic. A bit cool, don't you think? One of those fellows looked like a friend of mine, Homer Tibbs, or as Homer might look if he were in disgrace. He had his hat hung on his eyes, and he slouches"

MRS. E. VON STIENAU.

Mrs. E. Von Stienau, 882 Fifth street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"I have been a sufferer for years with female trouble, causing backache and at times terrible headaches. I had also complications from indigestion and heart trouble, so that I often had to lie down. I took six bottles of Peruna. I was then in perfect health, was regular, had no more headaches, in fact, my health is now all that I could wish."—Mrs. E. Von Stienau.

Political Announcements

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

To all Voters of Red Lake County, I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for the office of County Superintendent of Schools of this County, and I solicit your votes at the coming primaries. Very truly yours,
E. L. QUIST, A. B.

The Thief River Falls Press has installed a new Cranston cylinder and gasoline engine, and came out last week enlarged to a six-column quarto and otherwise improved. Syd's success at Thief River Falls is due to an active hustle and enterprising spirit, and he is showing his patrons that he appreciates their support by giving them an up-to-date sheet.

The announcement of E. L. Quist, A. B., of Thief River Falls, as a candidate for the nomination of County Superintendent of Schools is published in today's Gazette. Mr. Quist is a young man of excellent appearance and is said by those who know him to be worthy of the confidence of the people in every respect. He is a graduate of Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter and is competent to fill the office to which he aspires. Mr. Quist is the first candidate to announce himself and will probably receive the nomination at the hands of the Republicans.

The hand cream separator is doing good work for agriculture in more ways than one. The immediate good it is doing is in enabling the farmers to make better butter than ever before as it helps him to save all his cream and keep it in better condition for churning, and retains the skim milk for feeding in such prime condition as to get all there is out of it. The more remote and yet palpable advantage it affords is in making the dairy product of the farm so much more profitable as to be continually increasing the number of cows to consume the farm products, and thus return fertility to the soil.

The long-drawn-out governship scrap is finally ended and local politics will take up the center of the stage from this on. In the nasty fight that has been carried on by both sides in the present gubernatorial campaign, the Republicans of Minnesota have certainly not strengthened their cause, but now that it is all over we are supposed to again "love one another." The Gazette believes that a good man will govern Minnesota for the next two years, and is glad that the extended and bitter contest has in no way endangered the success of the party throughout the state, and believes that it will serve as a lesson for future contests.

PRICES NOT SO HIGH.

Land on Reservation Not Being as Eagerly Sought After.

The land sale continues to attract quite large crowds and some exceptional bargains are now being secured by the people who have been patient. The land in the townships south of Germantown all sold at from $4 to $5 an acre with the exception of a few choice pieces. Of course when the river claims came up Tuesday some of the land sold at $11 per acre, but the majority of it went much lower. Most of the land south of the Red Lake river has not been sold at all. No one is making any offer on the pieces put up but it is quite probable that a great deal of it will be bought at private sale later on as there is some good land there.

It is undecided at present as to whether the land sale will be continued or adjourned on July 14th. the last day of the present sale according to the schedule. If the land sale is adjourned any piece remaining unsold will be subject to private entry at the land office at $4 per acre, but if it is continued this will not be the case until after the second sale which would be held some time this fall. It depends largely on how much land is not sold at the close of the sale here whether or not the sale is continued or adjourned.

Successful Firemen's Tournament.

The firemen's tournament at Hallock Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week proved to be highly successful from the standpoint of attendance and events pulled off, and the people who attended returned home well pleased with the entertainment offered them. The following is a brief summary of the events and the winners of each:

Hook and Ladder contest—Bemidji first, Blackduck, 2nd. Time 28 2-5 seconds.

Combination Hook and Ladder contest—Hallock, 27 sec., Blackduck 29 3-5 sec., Bemidji, no time, as Goodman fell from ladder.

Flag relay race—Bemidji 69 2-5 sec., 70 1-5 sec.

Ladder climbing contest—Parker Blackduck, 8 1-5 sec., Ecklund, Hallock, 10 1-5 sec.

The Association race for the banner was won by Hallock. Time 25 3 5 seconds.

Blackduck won the wet race and a prize of $30.

Harris, of Crookston, won the coupling contest.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, L. F. Parker, Blackduck; 1st Vice-President, A. B. Nelson, Warren; 2d Vice-President, Geo. E. Erickson, Argyle; Secretary, L. G. Townsend, Blackduck; Treasurer, R. B. Johnson, Hallock.

The next tournament will be held at Blackduck.

The first annual graduating exercises of St. Joseph's school were held at the opera house yesterday afternoon and a large crowd turned out to listen to the program prepared. Father Fayolle presented the diplomas and gave the class some excellent advice. The graduates were: Henry C. Derocher, Rose E. Moreau, Eveline M. Delage, Louisa M. Cyr, Elizabeth V. Manly, Albina M. The committee on resolutions then submitted the following, which were adopted upon motion:

The republicans of Red Lake county in convention assembled, renew their unalterable allegience to the Republican party and to the principles upon which the party has, during the long tenure of power which has been accorded it by the people, conducted the government in the state and nation. The policies it has put into effect and the capacity it has demonstrated for rule and government, command the confidence and approval of the American people to a degree never equalled.

We hail with enthusiastic approval the work of the recent national convention of our party, which formally nominated to continue in the high office of president of these United States the man whom the American people by common accord had already elected, that man of lofty statesmanship, courage and duration, who has demonstrated his ability to grapple successfully with the living problems of the hour, that man who does things, Theodore Roosevelt, and also in the happy selection of his associate on the national ticket, a man who by distinguished public service has proven his fitness for the office of vice-president, Charles Fairbanks, of Indiana. With Roosevelt and Fairbanks the standard bearers in the coming campaign, the Republican party will march to certain and decisive victory.

We heartily endorse and approve of the system of state drainage which has been instituted and carried on by the state, and we ask at the hands of the Legislature and the state authorities the greatest possible measures of state aid in prosecuting the needed work and aiding the farmer in the development and improvement of the newer settled portions of our state.

Recognizing the ability and the strong integrity ever displayed in his long and honorable record of public service to the state, and that his vast experience will greatly aid him in the administration of the high office to which he aspires, we record the expressed choice of the Republicans of this county, and endorse the candidacy for the office of governor of this state, of the Honorable Robert C. Dunn, and be it resolved, that the delegates elected by this convention be, and the same hereby are instructed to vote for, and to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of the said Robert C. Dunn as candidate for governor.

Before adjourning the county committee for the ensuing year was elected as follows:

Chairman—Dr. N. M. Watson, of Red Lake Falls.

Secretary—D. A. McDonald, of Thief River Falls.

Committeeman, 1st District—S. J. Swanson, Wylie.

4th District—C. A. Fuller, Thief River Falls.

5th District—John B. Hebert, Poplar River.

On motion the convention adjourned, no other business being up for transaction at this time.

A Tribute to Onstad.

Crookston Times: Prof. A. Onstad, the director of the Red Lake Falls band, C. LaBissoniere and Harry Healy, of Red Lake Falls, were very valuable additions to the Crookston band at Hallock during the firemen's tournament June 21-24. A number of Mr. Riggs' musicians were unable to go and it is always very difficult to find musicians in the northwest who can handle the music played by the Crookston band, but the gentlemen from Red Lake Falls did themselves proud, and Bandmaster Riggs and the band men are very complimentary in their opinions of the musicians from our neighboring city. Prof. Onstad is considered by local musicians to be the finest clarionet player in the valley and is a polished refined gentleman of unusual attainments. He is a college man born in Norway, having come to this country about eight years ago. He is an artist on the violin, clarionet and pipe organ and has received an excellent musical education in Europe. The Red Lake Falls band under his direction has been brought to a very high standard and is one of the best bands in northern Minnesota and that city should feel proud of her band director and band boys.

St. Hilaire Mill Starts Up.

Crookston Journal: Foreman John Christy accompanied by a full crew of men left Monday morning for St. Hilaire to open up the plant of the Crookston Lumber Co. there and to begin the sawing of the heavy logs into timber. The mill was started at noon with a complement of thirty odd hands manipulating the machinery. During the shut down in this city and at Bemidji because of repairs to machinery, the St. Hilaire plant will be run full time, but after the restarting of the other two plants it is quite probable that work will be abandoned at the up river mill. From the testimony being given in the Shevlin brother vs. brother case at Minneapolis the St. Hilaire mill is apparently a "dummy" plant put in for the purpose of securing the bonus offered by the citizens of St. Hilaire. The enterprise according to Thomas Shevlin, has never been a paying one at St. Hilaire and his object in putting in the mill was to obtain the bonus.

To the teachers of Red Lake County:

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Polk counties will convene at the high school building in the City of Red Lake Falls at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, July 5.

It is earnestly desired that all teachers and those expecting to teach will be in attendance the first day and continue throughout the term. Arrangements have been made for instruction in all the common branches and a class in the first grade subjects will be organized if desired by the students. Instructions will also be given along several special lines of school work which in itself will more than repay you for your attendance. You will bear in mind that Red Lake County will soon have a surplus of teachers and those who show a certificate of attendance at this school will certainly be given the preference in the selection of teachers for the coming year. One of the real "good ones" of the present gubernatorial scrap was planned and executed by a couple of St. Hilaireites Tuesday, and the laugh it has caused will go resounding down the state at a rapid pace. Editor Harry E. Ives, of St. Hilaire, was caught napping and a solid Collins delegation was elected from there, with the result that Harry had no seat in the convention. But the slate as made up earlier in the game had Harry down as a delegate, and in order not to make it appear to "raw" he was made the alternate of delegate Albue, who had said that he wouldn't go to the convention at St. Paul. After the convention several St. Hilairites prevailed upon Mr. Albue to go with the delegation and went so far as to offer to pay his expenses if he would spare the time. Albue finally consented, so that friend Harry has no voice in the convention at St. Paul today, and the people at St. Hilaire are enjoying a laugh at his expense.

Thief River Press: Mrs. W. A Murphy last evening entertained a party of young people in honor of her friend, Miss Elizabeth Hunt, of Red Lake Falls, who came up yesterday afternoon. Miss Hunt is to be married on the 29th inst. to Dr. J. E. Argue, the popular Red Lake Falls dentist who formerly made monthly visits to this city. Miss Hunt also has many Thief River friends.

Thief River Press: Red Lake Falls is going to celebrate July 4th for the first time in three years. Last year they sent quite a delegation up here and also to the county fair in August. As we are not to celebrate the feeling is quite general that those who anticipate going away could not do better than to return the compliment. Red Lake Falls is going to entertain the crowds royally as there is no end to the amusements in sight. There will be baseball games, horse-races, dances and lots of music.

The Republican primaries were were held in the various precincts of the county last Saturday and only in a few cases were there any contests on. Red Lake Falls city, Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and Emardville each had a minature political battle on that evening, the Dunn supporters winning here and at Thief River and the Collins men carrying St. Hilaire and Emardville. The rest of the towns elected delegates for one or the other without contest. The delegates in Red Lake Falls were S. M. Sivertson and J. S. Stewart in the first ward; N. M. Watson and Theo. Garceau in the second ward, and J. B. Armstrong, Simon Paul, Dan Champoux and J. A. Duffy in the third ward. There was no contest in the first but in the second Frank E. Hunt made the race and was defeated while in the third the real hot fight was on. A. P. Toupin, Thos. Crompe, Leo Steinert and J. A. Duffy were the the Collins candidates and the margin for the other side was very narrow. The fight, however, was a good natured one, and was soon forgotten after it was over. From the number of votes cast it would look as though Red Lake Falls would be unanimously Republican in November.

Editor D. A. McDonald, of the Thief River Falls Review, attended the convention here Tuesday.

Frank Brouillett returned Monday from attendance at the Firemen's tournament at Hallock.

Miss Laura Hollinshead arrived Saturday from Duluth, to visit friends and to attend the Hunt-Argue wedding.

Knute Danielson, a prominent Garnes farmer was a caller here yesterday on his way to Thief River Falls to buy reservation land.

Cash Brunelle and Joe Bray, accompanied by their wives, arrived here last Saturday and visited until Tuesday with relatives and friends here. Both gentlemen are members of the Blackduck fire department, and had been attending the tournament at Hallock.

Attorney Farley, of Waseca, arrived here today with his family and law library, and it is stated that he will locate in Red Lake Falls for the practise of his profession. Mr. Farley is said to be a bright lawyer and will make an able addition to the legal fraternity here.

Friends here have received word from P. B. Gaass stating that he and his wife were enjoying their visit throughout the southern states immensely, but that the weather has been a little too warm for exact comfort. They will return sometime about the 15th of next month.

The strawberry season is about over for this year and many people do not know the distance that nearly all of the berries that are on the market this week are shipped. The early berries came from Florida, then they crossed the Mississippi river and have been shipped from Texas, Arkansas, Oregon, and this week they are being shipped from the island of Vashon, in the Pacific ocean. This will be about the last week of the berries.

The Soo surveyors are at present camped in the new town on section 9 in Emardville, and as soon as County Surveyor Smiley gets around to it the plat will be made and active operation started. The new town will have 3 saloons, a bank and several stores in the start, and it is rumored that a newspaper and drug store will also be started before the summer is over. The Soo has bought considerable land there, and it is stated that the division point will be located there. Those who know claim that the new town will be a hummer, and will do much to rapidly settle up the country surrounding.

Crookston Journal: Paddy Sullivan, the genial river boss for the Grand Forks Lumber Co. passed through the city Friday on his way to Thief River Falls where he will make arrangements for the starting of one of the largest drives of the year down stream. The logs for the large drive have been towed across the big lake by Winton brothers and Michael Kelley and are on the south shore awaiting the work of the rivermen to be started down stream. Mr. Sullivan stated that as soon as the crew could be got together and wansgans built the drive would be headed southward. The big mill at Grand Forks is eating the huge timbers up at a rapid rate both night and day and the management nd s it very imperative to secure a re at deal of additional material.

Mrs. J. R. Fortier returned Wednesday from an extended visit with friends at Cass Lake.

G. H. Tibbetts is expected tomorrow from Flandreau, South Dakota, for a few days visit with his family.

We have put in a full line of the latest and nobblest things in the pipe creation. Call and see them.—J. B. Cigar company.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Germo leave next week for Mapleton, for a visit with Mr. Germo's parents. From there they will go to other southern Minnesota towns. Miss Maude Findeisen will accompany them as far as Minneapolis, from where she will proceed to Chicago for a visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Mizen left last evening for their vacation trip, and will visit at several different points of the country before returning. They go from here to St Louis, and after visiting the big fair there for several days will go to Mr. Mizen's home in Ohio, where they will spend several weeks. The return trip will be made via the lake route, and the whole trip promises to be delightfully enjoyable.

Prof. A. Onstad, Harry B. Healy and Clem LaBissoniere returned last Saturday from Hallock, where they had played with the Crookston band three days at the Hallock Firemen's tournament. The boys are great in their praise of the treatment they received at the hands of Prof. Riggs and his corps of excellent musicians, and say that the band boys did everything possible to make their trip enjoyable. Prof. Onstad says that Crookston has a first-class band, and that Mr. Riggs' work as a director is seldom equalled. With two such leaders as Riggs and Onstad, and bands like those of Crookston and Red Lake Falls, there is no just reason why the Valley shouldn't be well advertised from a musical standpoint.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

a thief in melodrama as he tacked up the hunting on this side of the car." He continued to point out various familiar places, finally breaking out enthusiastically as they drew nearer the town: "Hello! Look there—beyond the grove yonder! See that house?"

"Yes, John."

"That's the Bowlders'. You've got to know the Bowlders."

"I'd like to."

"The kindest people in the world. The Briscoe house we can't see because it's so shut in by trees, and, besides, it's a mile or so ahead of us. We'll go out there for supper tonight. Don't you like Briscoe? He's the best they make. We'll go uptown with Judd Bennett in the omnibus, and you'll know how a rapid fire machine gun sounds. I want to go straight to the Herald office," he finished, with a suddenly darkening brow.

"After all, there may be some explanation," Meredith suggested with a little hesitancy. "H. Fisbee might turn out more honest than you think."

Harkless threw his head back and laughed. "Honest! A man in the pay of Rodney McCune! Well, we can let it wait till we get there. Listen! There's the whistle that means we're getting near home. Why, there's an oil well!"

"So it is."

"And another—three, five, seven—seven in sight at once! They tried it three miles south and failed, but you can't fool Eph Watts, bless him! I want you to know Watts."

They ran by the outlying houses of the town amid a thousand descriptive exclamations from Harkless, who wished Meredith to meet every one in Carlow. But he came to a pause in the middle of a word. "Do you hear music," he asked abruptly, "or is it only the rhythm of the ties?"

"It seems to me there's music in the air," answered his companion. "I've been fancying I heard it for a minute or so. There! No—yes. It's a band, isn't it?"

"No. What would a band—yes, it is!"

The train slowed up and stopped at a water tank 200 yards east of the station, and their uncertainty was at an end. From somewhere down the track came the detonating boom of a cannon. There was a clash of brass, and the travelers became sure of a band playing "Marching Through Georgia." Meredith laid his hand on his companion's shoulder. "John," he said, "John!"

The cannon fired again, and there came a cheer from 3,000 throats, the shouters all unseen. The engine coughed and panted; the train rolled on, and in another moment it had stopped alongside the station in the midst of a riotous jam of happy people who were waving flags and banners and handkerchiefs and tossing their hats high in the air and shouting themselves hoarse. The band played in dumb show. It could not hear itself play. The people came at the smoker like a long wave, and Warren Smith, Briscoe, Keating and Mr. Bence of Gaines were swept ahead of it. Before the train stopped they had rushed eagerly up the steps and entered the car. Harkless was on his feet and started to meet them. He stopped.

"What does it mean?" he said and began to grow pale. "Is Halloway—did McCune—have you"—

Warren Smith seized one of his hands and Briscoe the other. "What does it mean!" cried Warren. "It means that you were nominated for congress at five minutes after 1 o'clock this afternoon!"

"On the second ballot," shouted the judge, "just as young Fisbee planned it weeks ago."

* * * * * * * *

It was one of the great crowds of Carlow's history. Since noon an almost unintermittent procession of pedestrians and vehicles had been making its way to the station, and every wagon, buckboard, buggy and "cut under" had its flags or bunting or streamer of ribbons tied to the whip. The excitement increased as the time grew shorter. Everybody was struggling for a better position. The people in wagons and carriages stood upon the seats, and the pedestrians besieged them, climbing on the wheels or balancing recklessly with feet on the hubs of opposite wagons. Everybody was bound to see him. When the whistle announced the coming of the train the band began to play, the cannon fired, horns blew and the cheering echoed and re-echoed till heaven's vault resounded with the noise the people of Carlow were making.

There was one heart that almost stopped beating. Helen was standing on the front seat of the Briscoe buckboard, with Minnie beside her, and at the commotion the horses pranced and backed so that Lige Willetts ran to hold them. But Helen did not notice the frightened roans, nor did she know that Minnie clutched her round the waist to keep her from falling. Her eyes were fixed intently on the smoke of the faraway engine, and her hand, lifted to her face in an uncertain, tremulous fashion, as it was one day in a circus tent, was laid against the deepest blush that ever mantled a girl's cheek. When the train reached the platform she saw Briscoe and the others rush into the bunting covered car, and there ensued what was to her an almost intolerable pause of expectation while the crowd assaulted the windows of the smoker, leaping up and climbing on each other's shoulders to catch the first glimpse of him. Briscoe and a red faced young man (a stranger to Plattville) came down the steps, laughing like boys, and then Keating and Bence, and then Warren Smith. As the lawyer reached the platform he turned toward the door of the car and waved his hand as in welcome. "Here he is, boys!" he shouted.

At that it was as if all the noise that had gone before had been mere leakage of pent up enthusiasm. A thousand horns blared deafeningly; the whistle of the locomotive and that of Hibbard's mill were added to the din; the courthouse bell was pealing out a welcome, and the church bells were ringing; the cannon thundered, and then cheer on cheer shook the air as John Harkless came out under the flags and passed down the steps of the car.

When Helen saw him over the heads of the people and through heaving tumult of flags and hats and handkerchiefs she suddenly gave a frightened glance about her and jumped down from her high perch and sank into the back seat of the buckboard, with her burning face turned from the station and her eyes fixed on the ground. She wanted to run away, as she had run from him the first time she ever saw him, and then, as now, he came in triumph, hailed by the plaudits of his fellows, and now, as on that long departed day of her young girlhood, he was borne high over the heads of the people, for Minnie cried to her to look—they were carrying him on their shoulders to his carriage. She had had only that brief glimpse of him before he was lost in the crowd that was so glad to get him back again and so proud of him; but she had seen that he looked very white and solemn.

"It means that you were nominated for congress!"

Briscoe brought Tom Meredith through the crowd and put him in the buckboard beside Helen. "All right, Lige!" called the judge to Willetts, who was at the horses' heads. "You go get into line with the boys; they want you. We'll go down on Main street to see the parade," he explained, gathering the reins in his hand.

"Did you tell him about Mr. Halloway?" asked Helen, leaning forward anxiously.

"Warren told him before we left the car," answered Briscoe. "He'd have declined on the spot, I expect, if we hadn't made him sure it was all right with Kedge."

"If I understood what Mr. Smith was saying, Halloway must have behaved very well," said Meredith.

The judge laughed. "He saw it was the only way to beat McCune, and he'd have given his life and Harkless', too, rather than let McCune have it."

"Why did you leave Mr. Harkless?" Helen asked her cousin, her eyes not meeting his.

"My dear girl," he replied, "because, for some inexplicable reason, my lady cousin has not nominated me for congress, and, oddly enough, the undiscriminating multitude were not cheering for me; the artillery was not in action to celebrate me; the band was not playing to do me honor. Why should I ride in the midst of a procession that knows me not? Why should I enthrone me in an open barouche, with four white horses to draw it and draped with silken flags? Since these things were not for me, I flew to your side to dissemble my spleen under the licensed prattle of a cousin."

"Then who is with him?"

"The population of this portion of Indiana, I take it."

"Oh, it's all right," said the judge, leaning back to speak to Helen. "Keating and Smith and your father are to ride in the carriage with him. You needn't be afraid of any of them letting him know that H. Fisbee is a lady. Everybody understands about that. Of course they know it's to be left to you to break it to him how a girl has run his paper."

The old gentleman chuckled and looked out of the corner of his eye at his daughter, whose expression was inscrutable.

"I!" cried Helen. "I tell him! No one must tell him. He need never know it."

Briscoe reached back and patted her cheek. "How long do you suppose he will be here in Plattville without its leaking out?"

"But when they kept watch over him for months nobody told him."

"Ah," said Briscoe, "but this is different."

"No, no, no!" she exclaimed. "It must be kept from him somehow."

"He'll know it by tomorrow; so you better tell him this evening."

"This evening?"

"Yes; you'll have a good chance."

"I will?"

"He's coming to supper with us—he and your father, of course, and Keating and Bence and Boswell and Smith and Tom Martin and Lige. We're going to have a big time, with you and Minnie to do the honors, and we're all coming into town afterward for the fireworks, and I'll let him drive you in the phaeton. You'll have plenty of chances to talk it over with him and tell him all about it."

Helen gave a little gasp. "Never!" she cried. "Never!"

Nerve Fag.
If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, etc.

You can weaken yourself by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone of its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures, of people so sick the doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. I am now on my fifth bottle, and eat and sleep well, in fact have almost forgotten that I possess nerves."—R. L. DALBY, Asst. Cashier, State Bank, Texarcana, Ark.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swenzey, N. H., writes:—For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constently. I was so nervous at times, I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recomend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to enquiries regarding my case. A. L. Reichert.

Well Versed Men State That Land Will Revert to Government.

"In all probability two thirds of all of the land sold on the Red Lake Indian reservation this summer will revert to the government at the end of another year because of the inability of the settlers and purchasers to make their second payment," said a well known and prominent land attorney to the Crookston Times.

"The trouble of settlers bidding at Thief River lies in the fact that the excitement of bidding leaves them, as you might say, devoid of sense and reasoning power and the unusually high prices are a result. The same condition is found upon the farm auction sale, when farmers from miles around the sale fall over one another in their efforts to outbid on second hand articles at a price far greater than that for which the new material could be purchased in the city. The spirit of the auction has something of a charm to it which attracts, causes a man to bid, in many instances for the sake of bidding. At the end of the next year at least two-thirds of the land sold this summer will revert to the government because of the inability of settlers to make payments when due, and in that case what will become of the land is a question which the government officials are at the present time endeavoring to figure out. In all probability another auction sale of all forfeited tracts will be held practically under the same conditions as the original sale is now being held, but as yet that matter has not been decided by the officials of the government. Quite a number of people near Thief River are under the impression that the forfeited tracts will go for the lowest possible price to those who first learn of the forfeiture and are first to make application. It is not likely however, that any such system will be adopted as too much strife and contention would be raised."

A Warm Ball Game.

The Ulen and Thief River Falls base ball teams met at Thief River Falls last Sunday and one of the most exciting contests of the year resulted. The Ulen team came flushed with a series of victories, and were determined to take the Indians into camp, while the Thief Riverites had their clean season's record to preserve, and the game was a dandy, resulting in a victory for Thief River Falls by a score of 1 to 0.

Thief River Falls hasn't lost a game this season, but we all expect to see them taken into camp by Red Lake Falls next Monday.

Will Dedicate Their Church.

The German Evangelical Church, on the North Side, will be dedicated next Sunday, July 3. German services will be held at 10 a. m., by Rev, P. Schedler, of Fisher, English services at 2 p. m. by Rev. H. Stark, of Ada, to be followed by German services by Rev. B. Luttmann, of Thief River Falls. All are cordially invited to attend. Rev. Val. Kern, of Wylie, is pastor of the church here, and has charge of the general arrangements.

Fourth Of July Excursion Rates.

July 2nd, 3rd and 4th, The Great Northern Railway will sell round trip excursion tickets, to all points within a radius of 200 miles at rate of fare and one third for the round trip. Final return limit July 5th.

Coming.

Metropolitan Opera House Red Lake Falls, one night only. Friday July 1st. This is a first class New York attraction and comes to our town highly recommended.

The "Joshua Simpkins" company, carrying their own special scenery, a band of music and fine orchestra, will produce the great pastoral comedy drama of that name at the opera house. The piece deals with country life and people, three acts of the play being laid in one of the many quaint villages of Vermont. The second act (in 3 scenes) protrays Uncle Josh's first visit to Washington City. In the third act a sensational saw mill effect is shown, being nothing more or less than a complete saw mill in full operation, cutting up genuine timber. The saw is a genuine buzz or circular saw, and cuts through timber at lightning speed.

Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents. Reserved seats oow on sale.

Crowds Going To The Circus.

Intense interest has been aroused in this community by the announcement that Ringling Brothers' immense circus is to exhibit in Crookston, July 6. Several big excursions will go from this vicinity and local people will be well represented at the big show Those who go from here should make every effort to arrive in time to see the magnificent new free street parade, which is given in the morning preceding the opening performance. Three miles of parade glories are divided into thirty sections, and each section is a show in itself—a parade such as the world has never seen before. In this wonderful display are shown 108 beautiful dens, lairs and cages of rare wild animals, a herd of forty big and little elephants, 650 horses, and over 1,000 people. One section of the procession is devoted to magnificent and costly floats, representing Germany, Russia, England, France, India' Persia, Scotland, the United States and other countries. The performance that follows, and which includes the superb spectacular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, is the most magnificent display of arenic wonders ever presented by any amusement enterprise in America. The menagerie is filled to overflowing with rare beasts and birds, including the only baby elephant bred and successfully raised in the United States, the only rhinoceros in captivity and the last living pair of giraffes.

Socialist Labor Party Organize.

A branch of the Socialist Labor party of the United States has been organized in Red Lake county and a charter will be issued the organization. H. J. Kaufer is organizer; Orbun Hamry, secretary; J. K. Johnson, treasurer. The Socialists count quite a bunch of people among their numbers in Red Lake county and will probably take an active part in the next campaign.

WE CELEBRATED SOME

Red Lake Falls Entertains Largest Crowd In Her History and Does Things Up Brown.

With a day that could not have been improved on by anyone, and a crowd to make glad the hearts of those who had planned to entertain them, Red Lake Falls gave a Fourth of July celebration Monday that has positively never been equalled in the Northwest, and now that it is all over everyone is wondering how everything passed off so smoothly, and the executive committee and sub-committees are receiving more than the usual praise for the excellent manner in which they handled the affair, while the bosoms of the contributors are swelled with pride over the fact that by a liberal response to the call for funds was it made possible for the celebration to be carried out in so successful a manner.

Long before the time set for the parade the streets were lined with people who were enjoying the beautiful morning burning powder and letting loose their pent-up enthusiasm. Promptly at ten o'clock the parade started from upper Main street, and those that expected to see but an ordinary parade were greatly disappointed, inasmuch that never has a cavalcade of near the magnitude and brilliance been seen in a city of this size. At least twenty-five floats were in line, besides the band, fire department, civic societies and calithumpians, and each and every one that came caused expressions of astonishment and pleasure at its beauty. Nearly all the business houses were represented in the procession, and during the line of march the large crowd lustily applauded the efforts of the promoters to please them.

Following the parade came the exercises at the island, which opened with music by the band, after which the "living flag," drilled by Mrs. Ovide Emard, sang America and were heartily applauded. Mayor Duffy then welcomed the people on behalf of the city, and introduced the speaker of the day, Hon. John A. Johnson, of St. Peter, who spoke for nearly an hour, and it is safe to assert that a Red Lake county audience never had the pleasure of listening to an abler address. Mr. Johnson is a forceful talker and his speech sparkled with patriotic thoughts and flowery expressions. He was liberally applauded and the assemblage was disappointed on account of the limited time allotted to him.

Following Mr. Johnson's speech the band and parade marched to the depot to meet the crowd on the train, and when the long string of loaded cars pulled in every one was surprised at the excellent turnout from the north end of the county. Thief River Falls alone brought nearly 600 people and while only half as many came from St. Hilaire it was because no room could be found on the train and they were forced to stay at home. The efforts of Daniel Shaw and the Thief River Falls band were responsible for the large tournout from the upriver city and Red Lake Falls will try and reciprocate later in the year. The Thief River band rendered several selections while the crowd was dispersing and pleased the hearers immencely.

After dinner the ball game was called for 1:30 and the grounds were lined with people who wanted to see the clash between the rival teams. The outcome was a source of satisfaction to the Thief River Falls club, as their team succeeded in shutting Red Lake Falls out of the score book, while six runs were accredited to the Indians. The game was exciting and interesting, and it was the unanimous opinion that the best team won. Honors were about evenly divided among the pitchers, Healy striking out more men than Raasch, while fewer hits were made off Raasch. The fielding work of the Indians was superior to that of the home team, and it seemed that every time a Red Lake Falls player hit the ball an Indian was on hand to haul it in. The score by innings was as follows:

After the ball game came the log rolling contest in the Clearwater river back of Dr. Lemieux's residence. Fred Cyr proved the best on the slippery timber and was given the prize.

The program of sports on the main street was watched by a big crowd of people, and the following are the events and the winners:

100 yard dash, free-for-all.—Chas. Brady, 1st; Jarneson, 2nd.

100 yard dash, under 18 years,—Joe Stacker, 1st; Joe Miller, 2nd.

100 yard dash, under 14 years,—Wm. Linnihan, 1st; A. Paradis 2nd.

Hub and hub hose cart race—Co. No. 1, 1st; Co. No. 2, 2nd.

Tug-of-war—Country jakes, 1st; city dudes, 2nd.

Egg race—P. Beaulieu, 1st; Phalen, 2nd.

Sack Race.—P. Carver 1st; C. Buse, 2nd.

Girls' Race—May Adler, 1st; Ada Hatten and Eva Beaudro, 2nd.

After supper the Red Lake Falls band gave a concert of an hour and a half on Main street, and on the completion of this the crowd repaired to the ball park where the display of fireworks was given. A free dance at the Metropolitan followed the fireworks and ended the day's enjoyment.

The judges of the parade awarded the prizes for the best floats as follows: Anderson & Healy, 1st; M. W. A. lodge, 2nd; Northern Minnesota Milling company, 3rd; and gave a complimentary prize equal to the 3rd to the Daisy sewing club.

The celebration was a hummer from every standpoint, and Red Lake Falls made a name for herself in the excellent program she prepared and rendered.

ATTORNEY FARLEY LOCATES.

Becomes a Resident of Best Town In Northern Minnesota.

Attorney E. L. Farley, of Waseca, who arrived here last Thursday has located in Red Lake Falls for the practice of law, and has taken up offices in the rooms occupied by the Ed. L. Healy Land company.

Mr. Farley comes recommended as a first-class attorney, and The Gazette sees no reason why he will not meet with success here. He has had a number of years successful practice and with it the experience necessary to a first-class attorney. He has rented the Allard residence in the southeast part of town and moved his household goods in this week, and as soon as his family arrives will be at home in Red Lake Falls. The Gazette extends to Mr. and Mrs. Farley a cordial welcome to the business and social circles, and trusts that they may always be glad of their decision to locate here.

The Waseca Journal-Radical, from Mr. Farley's home town, contains the following article, which coming from where he is known should be a first-rate endorsement as to his ability:

"Attorney F. L. Farley has sold his law business in this city to Albinas Maloney and will leave in a week or so for Red Lake Falls, in the northern part of the state where he will practice his profession.

While attending to some land business some weeks ago Mr. Farley paid Red Lake Falls a visit and was strongly impressed with the many business advantages of this thriving little city and after a thorough investigation decided it to be an ideal location for the practice of his profession.

The country up that way is settling up rapidly and that Red Lake Falls has a bright future before it is conceded by all who have visited the place.

Mr. Farley is an able attorney and during his long residence here has proven himself to be an excellent citizen, public spirited, upright and honest in all his dealings with his fellow men. We regret to see him and his estimable wife go from our midst but wish them abundant success in their new home.

Mr. Farley says that leaving Waseca comes like "pulling teeth," but that he feels he cannot afford to miss the opportunity offered at Red Lake Falls."

School Meeting the 16th.

The annual school meeting of this district will be held at the school house on Saturday evening, July 16, at which time two new members of the board of education will be elected, the treasurer's statement submitted and other business attended to. The terms of Messrs. Sam Allard and A. P. Toupin as members of the board expire at that time, but as both have made such excellent officials there is not likely to be any opposition to their re-election. Red Lake Falls has been fortunate in the selection of its board of education, and the people should be pleased to retain those who have given such excellent satisfaction.

MORE THAN 600 PERISH

FEARFUL LOSS OF LIFE AS A RESULT OF THE SINKING OF THE STEAMER NORGE.

WRECK OCCURS ON LONELY ISLE THREE HUNDRED MILES OFF SCOTTISH COAST.

VESSEL'S PASSENGERS MAINLY EMIGRANTS FROM RUSSIA AND SCANDINAVIA.

London, July 4.—Between 600 and 700 Scandinavian and Russian emigrants bound for New York were drowned in the North Atlantic June 28.

The Danish steamer Norge, which left Copenhagen June 22 with 774 souls on board, struck a reef on the islet of Rockall, about 290 miles off the west coast of Scotland.

A great hole was torn in the bottom of the ship, which sank at once, only 128 persons having escaped with their lives so far as can be learned.

Early on the morning of last Tuesday the Norge, which was out of her course in heavy weather, ran onto the Rockall reef, which in the distance looks like a ship under full sail. The Norge was quickly backed off, but the heavy seas poured in through a rent in her bows.

The emigrants, who were then awaiting breakfast below, ran on deck. The hatchways were scarcely built for these hundreds of souls and became clogged.

The Norge quickly began to go down by the head. Eight boats were lowered and into these the women and children were hurriedly put. Six of these boats were smashed against the sides of the Norge, and their helpless inmates caught up by the heavy seas.

Two boatloads got safely away from the side of the sinking ship and many of the emigrants who were left on board, seizing life belts, threw themselves into the sea and were drowned.

Captain Gundel, so say the survivors, stood on the bridge of the doomed vessel until it could be seen no more.

Hundreds Go Down With Ship.

The Norge foundered suddenly and some 600 terrified emigrants were thrown into the water or drawn down with the sinking ship. Those who could swim tried to reach the boats, but those were already too full and their occupants beat off the drowning wretches with oars.

One of the survivors said that when he got on the deck the Norge was half submerged and was rapidly getting lower in the water. Half mad with fright the survivors all struggled for places in the boats. They fought their way to the big lifeboat and an officer stowed in the six women and the girl and then told the men to get in.

The officer then took charge and got the boat away from the side of the Norge. Seeing that the boat was already overloaded the officer, with great heroism, jumped into the water and tried to board another boat which was not so full. He failed and was drowned.

In the sea by this time was a mass of struggling men, women and children, gasping and choking from the effect of the water. The boat rowed clear of this seething inferno and just as she drew away the Norge went down.

The only hope for the missing is that some few of them might have been washed up on the barren rock. Their chance of being rescued even then is practically nil, for vessels sailing the North Atlantic give Rockall as wide a berth as possible.

NEARLY 800 ON BOARD.

Wrecked Steamer Carried 594 Steerage Passengers.

Copenhagen, July 4.—The news of the disaster to the Danish steamer Norge off the west coast of Scotland, in which over 700 persons are reported to have lost their lives, created indescribable excitement here.

The first message reached here at 4 a. m. Crowds soon gathered about the offices of the line, relatives of those on board frantically seeking for information.

A feeling of general gloom and mourning is beginning to pervade Copenhagen. The Norge had no first class passengers on board and only nine on her second cabin list. These included three Americans, Elizabeth and Annie Buckley and Hilm Fleishman. There were on board 694 steerage passengers. Of these 79 were Danes, 68 Swedes, 296 Norwegians, 15 Finns and 236 Russians. The Norge carried a crew of seventy-one. She was the oldest Danish transatlantic steamer running.

REFUGEES PICKED UP.

One Hundred Survivors of the Norge Landed at Scottish Port.

Stornaway, Scotland, July 4.—One hundred survivors of the Danish steamer Norge have been landed here. The British steamer Cervona, from Leith July 1 for Montreal, brought in thirty-two shortly before noon. She picked them up from a boat westward of the Hutt of Lewis. They were in a woeful plight, nearly all of them being naked. One dead child was with the party.

Shortly afterwards the German steamer Energie arrived with sixty-nine persons rescued from the Norge's lifeboat. They were very terribly exhausted.

The survivors say that altogether four of the Norge's boats got away. One boat, therefore, is unaccounted for.

TWENTY-TWO MEN DROWNED.

Russian Sailars Perish in a Submarine Baat.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—Twenty-two sailors were drowned at the Baltic works during the day while experiments were being made with the torpedo boat Delfin, which had been converted into a submarine boat. Four officers and thirty men were on board when the signal was given to submerge the boat without first properly closing the manhole. The result was the vessel sunk.

The accident was due partly to the excessive number of the crew, mostly inexperienced men, and chiefly to the unfortunate attempt of a man to escape while his comrades were screwing down the manhole.

MARCH ON LIAOYANG

JAPS THREATEN TO CUT RUSSIAN COMMUNICATIONS NORTH OF THAT PLACE.

Liaoyang, June 30.—The Japanese column which forced the passage of Motien pass is advancing on Liaoyang by the eastern road. A Russian force commanded by General Count Keller is holding a fortified position commanding the road on this side of the pass.

The object of the Japanese is to cut the Russian communications northward of Liaoyang while General Kuropatkin is operating in the vicinity of Haicheng with practically the whole of the Russian forces.

Denver, June 30.—Thirty-nine men, deported from Cripple Creek, arrived here during the day and joined the colony of exiles established here, which numbers over 200 men. They have organized a local union. Up to date 183 men have been forcibly deported from the Cripple Creek district. Hundreds fled to avoid arrest. Six union miners against whom criminal charges may be filed are still in custody at Cripple Creek.

NEARLY TWO HUNDRED PEOPLE PERISH IN STORM NEAR MOSCOW, RUSSIA.

Moscow, Russia, June 30.—A tornado swept this city Wednesday afternoon, causing enormous damage.

Forty-five people were killed, and thirteen injured are in hospitals.

Two villages near here, in the track of the storm, were destroyed. One hundred and fifty deaths are reported there, while eighty-five persons were hurt.

Hailstones weighing three-quarters of a pound fell during the storm. In one grove of 250 acres only one tree was left standing.

Cartersville, Ga., July 2.—John Jones, the negro assailant of Mrs. Banister, was lynched near the scene of his crime. Judge A. W. Fite made a speech in an attempt to restrain the mob, but it was useless. The negro's body was riddled with bullets, more than 500 shots being fired.

JOHN L. MITCHELL DEAD.

Wiscansin Ex-Senatar Passes Away at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, June 30.—Former Senator John L. Mitchell is dead after a lingering illness. He had been at death's door for the past ten days and his entire family was at his bedside when he died.

He had recently resigned as a member of the national board of soldiers' homes on account of his failing health, a successor having been appointed at the last session of congress.

EIGHTEEN ARE DEAD

WABASH TRAIN WRECKED AND THREE OF THE COACHES DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Litchfield, Ill., July 4.—The list of dead as a result of the Wabash wreck here now numbers eighteen, two persons among the injured having died. The injured number about thirty. A wrecking crew got to work early and is cleaning up the debris and they may uncover other victims.

The wreck was caused by running into an open switch. After running into the switch the engine struck a string of freight cars and, with the first three coaches, was piled into a heap across the track and caught fire immediately. The last car on the train was a special from Wisconsin. It was uncoupled and pushed back and saved.

I. R. Mills, one of the killed, was internal revenue collector at Decatur and one of the most prominent Republicans in Central Illinois.

Nearly all the passengers were bound for St. Louis and those not injured left on the Illinois Central train an hour later.

State's Attorney L. V. Hill of Hillsboro, who is here with Coroner Gray, is making an investigation into the circumstances of the wreck and it is not improbable that arrests may be ordered. The open switch is a mystery which the officials are trying to solve.

The Gentleman From Indiana

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

The [illegible] stopped on the Herald corner, and here and along Main street the line of vehicles which had followed it from the station took positions to await the parade. The square was almost a solid mass of bunting, and the north entrance of the courthouse had been decorated with streamers and flags so as to make a sort of stand. Hither the crowd was already streaming and hither the procession made its way. At intervals the gun boomed from the station, and Schofields' Henry was winnowing the air with his bell. Nobody had a better time that day than Schofields' Henry, except old Wilkerson, who was with the procession.

In advance came the boys, whooping and somersaulting, and behind them rode a band of mounted men, sitting their horses like cavalrymen, led by the sheriff and his deputy and Jim Bardlock. Then followed the Harkless club of Amo, led by Boswell, with the magnanimous Halloway himself marching in the ranks, and at sight of this the people shouted like madmen. But when Helen's eye fell upon Halloway's fat, rather unhappy face she felt a pang of pity and unreasoning remorse, which warned her that he who looks upon politics when it is red must steel his eyes to see many a man with the heartburn. After the men of Amo came the Harkless club of Gainesville, Mr. Bence in the van with the step of a grenadier. There followed next Mr. Ephraim Watts, bearing a light wand in his hand and leading a detachment of workers from the oil field in their stained blue overalls and blouses, and after them came Mr. Martin and Mr. Landis at the head of an organization recognized in the "order of procession" printed in the Herald as "the business men of Plattville." The band played in such magnificent time that every high stepping foot in all the line came down with the same jubilant plunk and lifted again with a unanimity as complete as that of the last vote the convention had taken that day. The leaders of the procession set a brisk pace, and who could have set any other kind of a pace when on parade to the strains of such a band playing such a tune as "A New Coon In Town" with all its might and main?

But as the line swung into the square there came a moment when the tune was ended and the musicians paused for breath and there fell comparative quiet. Among the ranks of the "business men" ambled Mr. Wilkerson, singing at the top of his voice, and now he could be heard distinctly enough for those near him to distinguish the melody with which it was his intention to favor the public:

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!
As we go marching on."

The words, the air, that husky voice, recalled to the men of Carlow another day and another procession not like this one. And the song Wilkerson was singing is the one song every northern born American knows and can sing. The leader of the band caught the sound, signaled to his men, twenty instruments rose as one to twenty mouths, the snare drum rattled, the big drum crashed, the leader threw his baton high over his head, and music burst from twenty brazen throats:

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!"

Instantaneously the whole procession began to sing the refrain, and the people in the street and those in the wagons and carriages and those leaning from the windows joined with one accord. The ringing bells caught the time of the song, and the upper air reverberated in the rhythm.

The Harkless club of Carlow wheeled into Main street, 200 strong, with their banners and transparencies. Lige Willetts rode at their head, and behind him strode William Todd and Parker and Ross Schofield and Newt Tibbs and Hartley Bowlder, and even Bud Tipworthy held a place in the ranks through his connection with the Herald. They were all singing, and behind them Helen saw the flag covered barouche and her father, and beside him sat John Harkless, with his head bared. She glanced at Briscoe. He was standing on the seat in front of her and Minnie and both were singing. Meredith had climbed upon the back seat and was nervously fumbling at a cigarette. "Sing, Tom!" the girl cried to him excitedly.

"I should be ashamed not to," he answered, and dropped the cigarette and began to sing "John Brown's Body" with all his strength. With that she seized his hand, sprang up beside him, and over the swelling chorus her full soprano rose, lifted with all the power in her.

The barouche rolled into the square, and as it passed Harkless turned and bent a sudden gaze upon the group in the buckboard, but the western sun was in his eyes and he only caught a glimpse of a vague, bright shape and a dazzle of gold, and he was borne along and out of view down the singing street.

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
As we go marching on."

The barouche stopped in front of the courthouse, and Harkless passed up a lane they made for him to the steps. When he turned to them to speak, they began to cheer again, and he had to wait for them to quiet down.

"We can't hear him from over here," said Briscoe. "We're too far off. Mr. Meredith, suppose you take the ladies closer in; I'll stay with the horses."

"He's a great man, isn't he?" Meredith said to Helen as he handed her out of the buckboard. "I've been trying to realize that he's the same old fellow I've been treating so familiarly all day long."

"Yes, he is a great man," she answered. "This is only the beginning."

"That's true," said Briscoe. "Only wait awhile, and we'll all go on to Washington and get a thrill down our backs when we hear the speaker say, 'The gentleman from Indiana,' and see John Harkless rise to speak. But hurry along, young people."

Crossing the street, they met Miss Tibbs. She was wiping her streaming eyes with the back of her left hand and still mechanically waving her handkerchief with her right. "Isn't it beautiful?" she said, not ceasing to unconsciously flutter the little square of cambric. "There was such a throng that I grew faint and had to come away. I don't mind your seeing me cry. Pretty near everybody cried when he walked up the steps and we saw that he was lame."

John Harkless looked down upon the attentive, earnest faces and into the kindly eyes of the Hoosier country people, and as he spoke the thought kept recurring to him that this was the place he had dreaded to come back to; that these were the people he had wished to leave, these who gave him everything they had to give, and this made it difficult to keep his tones steady and his throat clear. Helen stood so far from the steps (nor could she be induced to penetrate farther, though they would have made way for her) that only fragments reached her, but these she remembered.

"I have come home. Ordinarily a man needs to fall sick by the wayside or to be set upon by thieves in order to realize that nine-tenths of the world is Samaritan—and the other tenth only too busy or too ignorant to be. Down here he realizes it with no necessity of illness or wounds to make him know it, and if he does get hurt you send him to congress. There will be no other in Washington so proud of what he stands for as I shall be. To represent you is to stand for fearlessness, honor, kindness. You have sent all of the Crossroaders to the penitentiary, but probably each of us is acquainted with politicians who ought to be sent there. When the term is over I shall want to take the first train home. This is the place for a man who likes to live where people are kind to each other and where they have the old fashioned way of saying 'home;' other places they don't seem to get so much into it as we do. And to come home as I have today—to see the home faces—I have come home."

CHAPTER XV.

It was 5 o'clock when Harkless climbed the stairs to the Herald office, and his right arm and hand were aching and limp. Ross Schofield was the only person in the editorial room, and there was nothing in his appearance that should have caused a man to start and fall back from the doorway, but that is what John did. "What's the matter, Mr. Harkless?" cried Ross, hurrying forward with a fear that the other had been suddenly re-seized by illness.

"What are those?" asked Harkless, with a gesture of his hand that seemed to include the entire room.

"Those?" repeated Ross, staring blankly.

"Those rosettes—these streamers—that stovepipe—all this blue ribbon?"

Ross turned tale. "Ribbon?" he said inquiringly. "Ribbon?" He seemed unable to perceive the decorations referred to.

"Yes," answered John. "These rosettes on the chairs; that band, and"—

"Oh!" Ross answered. "That?" He fingered the band on the stovepipe as if he saw it for the first time. "Yes; I see."

"But what's it for?"

"Why—it's—it's likely meant fer decorations."

"It seems to have been here some time."

"It has. I reckon it's most due to be called in. It's be'n up ever sence—sence"—

"Who put it up, Ross?"

"We did."

"What for?"

Ross was visibly embarrassed. "Why—fer—fer the other editor."

"For Mr. Fisbee?"

"Land, no! You don't suppose we'd go to all that work and bother to brisken things up for that old gentleman, do you?"

"I meant young Mr. Fisbee. He is the other editor, isn't he?"

"Oh!" said Ross. "Young Mr. Fisbee? Yes; we put 'em up fer him."

"You did? Did he appreciate them?"

"Well, he—seemed to—kind of like 'em."

"Where is he now? I came here to find him."

"He's gone."

"Gone? Hasn't he been here this afternoon?"

"Yes, some the time. Come in and stayed durin' the leevy you was holdin' and saw the extry off all right."

"When will he be back?"

"Sence it's be'n a daily he gits here by 8 after supper, but don't stay very late. Old Mr. Fisbee and Parker look after whatever comes in then, unless it's something special. He'll likely be here by half past 8 at the farthest off."

"I can't wait till then. I've been wanting to see him every minute since I got in, and he hasn't been near me. Nobody could even point him out to me. Where has he gone? I want to see him now."

"Want to discharge him again?" said a voice from the door, and, turning, they saw that Mr. Martin stood there observing them.

"No," said Harkless. "I want to give him the Herald. Do you know where he is?"

Mr. Martin stroked his beard deliberately. "The person you speak of hadn't ought to be very hard to find in Carlow, and—well, maybe when found you'll want to put a kind of a codicil to that deed to the Herald. The committee was reckless enough to hire that carriage of yours by the day, and Keating and Warren Smith are sitting in it up at the corner with their feet on the cushions to show how used they are to riding around with four white horses every day in the week. It's waiting till you're ready to go out to Briscoes'. There's an hour before supper time, and you can talk to young Fisbee all you want. He's out there."

The first words Warren Smith spoke had lifted the veil of young Fisbee's duplicity; had shown John with what fine intelligence and supreme delicacy and sympathy young Fisbee had worked for him, had understood him and had made him. If the open attack on McCune had been made and the damnatory evidence published in Harkless' own paper while Harkless himself was a candidate and rival he would have felt dishonored. The McCune papers could have been used for Halloway's benefit, but not for his own, and young Fisbee had understood and had saved him. It was a point of honor that many would have held finical and inconsistent, but one that young Fisbee had comprehended was vital to Harkless. And this was the man he had discharged like a dishonest servant, the man who had thrown what (in Carlow eyes) was riches into his lap, the man who had made his paper and who had made him and saved him. Harkless wanted to see young Fisbee as he longed to see only one other person in the world.

As the barouche drove up to the brick house he made out through the trees a retreative flutter of skirts on the porch, and the thought crossed his mind that Minnie had flown indoors to give some final directions toward the preparation of the banquet. But when the barouche halted at the gate he was surprised to see her waving to him from the steps, while Tom Meredith and Mr. Bence and Mr. Boswell formed a little court around her. Lige Willetts rode up on horseback at the same moment, and the judge was waiting in front of the gate. Harkless stepped out of the barouche and took his hand. "I was told young Fisbee was here."

"Young Fisbee is here," said the judge.

Mr. Fisbee came around the corner of the house and went toward Harkless. "Fisbee," cried the latter, "where is your nephew?"

The old man took his hand in both his own and looked him between the eyes and thus stood while there was a long pause, the others watching them. "You must not say that I told you," he said at last. "Go into the garden."

But when Harkless' step crunched the garden there was no one there. Asters were blooming in beds between the green rosebushes, and their many fingered hands were flung open in wide surprise that he should expect to find young Fisbee there. It was just before sunset. Birds were gossiping in the sycamores on the bank. At the foot of the garden, near the creek, there were some tall hydrangea bushes, flower laden, and beyond them one broad shaft of sun smote the creek bends for a mile in that flat land and crossed the garden like a bright, taut drawn veil. Harkless passed the bushes and stepped out into this gold brilliance. Then he uttered a cry and stopped. Helen was standing beside the hydrangeas with both hands pressed to her face and her eyes cast on the ground. She had run away as far as she could run. There were high fences extending down to the creek on each side, and the water was beyond.

"You!" he said. "You! You!"

She did not lift her eyes, but began to move away from him with little backward steps. When she reached the bench on the bank she spoke with a quick intake of breath and in a voice he almost failed to hear, the merest whisper, and her words came so slowly that sometimes minutes separated them. "Can you—will you keep me—on the Herald?"

"Keep you"—

He came near her. "I don't understand. Is it you—you—who are here again?"

"Have you forgiven me? You know—now—why I wouldn't resign? You forgive my—that telegram?"

"What telegram?"

"The one that came to you—this morning."

"Your telegram?"

"Yes."

"Did you send me one?"

"Yes."

"It did not come to me."

"Yes—it did."

"But—what was it about?"

"It was signed," she said; "it was signed"— She paused and turned half away, not lifting the downcast lashes. Her hand, resting upon the back of the bench, was shaking. She put it behind her. Then her eyes were lifted a little, and, though they did not meet his, he saw them, and a glory sprang into be-

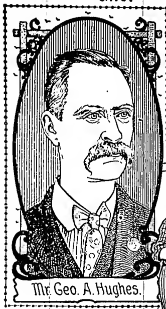
MR. GEO. A. HUGHES
SAYS:

"I FEEL AS GOOD AS I DID AT 20."

Many Suffer With Catarrh and Don't Know It.

The Phase of Catarrh Most Prevalent In Summer Is a Run Down, Worn Out Condition Known as Systemic Catarrh.



Mr. Geo. A. Hughes.

"Pe-ru-na is the Medicine for the Poor Man."

Mr. Geo. A. Hughes, 808 Mass. Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I am forty-five years old now, and feel as good as I did at 20. I was very thin and run down, but Peruna acted just right in my case. I am a carpenter and some times need a tonic. Peruna is the medicine for a poor man."--Geo. A. Hughes.

A Congressman Uses Pe-ru-na In His Family.

Hon. Thos. J. Henderson, Member of Congress from Illinois, and Lieutenant in the Union Army for eight years, writes from the Lemon building, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Peruna has been used in my family with the very best results and I take pleasure in recommending your valuable remedy to my friends as a tonic and an effective cure for catarrh." --Thos. J. Henderson.

Catarrh assumes different phases in different seasons of the year. In the early summer systemic catarrh is most prevalent. That tired, all worn out feeling in nine cases out of ten is due to a catarrhal condition of the mucous membranes. Peruna cleanses the mucous membranes and cures the catarrh wherever located.

There are no remedies for catarrh just as good as Peruna. Accept no substitutes.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

To All Voters of Red Lake County, I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for the office of County Superintendent of Schools of this county, and I solicit your votes at the coming primaries. Very truly yours.
E. L. QUIST, A. B.

You are supposed to read between the lines in the convention article in last week's Chaperon and discover that after all it was not the genial Dr. Watson that won out in the recent primaries, but the Red Lake County Courier. In lauding the Doctor the Courier is modestly blushing for throwing boquets at itself, and in the meantime the Red Lake county Democrats are without an organ.

Judge Wm. Watts will succeed himself if the voice of the press of the district is any criterion. He is very popular not only with the bar of the district, but with the laity as well. While the judge may not be faultless he is credited with being honorable in the strictly old fashioned knightly way. He labors to be fair and impartial and the present indications are that he will have no opposition and that the judiciary will not be dragged into the political mire in the Fourteenth district this time at least, says the Crookston Times.

The Great Northern has called the bluff of those fellows who style themselves the Breckenridge "business men." General Manager Ward has notified these "business men" that the road will continue to insist on its employees abstaining from the use of liquor, and upholds Supt. Forepaugh in his war on booze, and intimates that something will drop at Breckenridge if the present management of that village continues to defy the decree. Employees will not be allowed to drink while on duty, or hang around the saloons when off duty. The Great Northern is to be commended for its firmness in this important matter.

The candidate is Roosevelt. The platform is Roosevelt. The issue is Roosevelt. He willed it so and so it is. If he looses he alone will be responsible for the failure. If he wins it will be a personal triumph greater than achieved by any Republican president since the organization of the party, remarks the Democratic Cleveland Plaindealer. He might well interpret it as not only clothing him with absoute power as the party's leader, but as also constituting him supreme dictator of the nation's policy and sole arbiter of the country's destiny. To wield such extraordinary power wisely demands cool judgment and level-headed decision. Theodore Roosevelt's record is well known to the people, and they can judge for themselves whether he has those qualifications.

If girls had as much self-respect as boys they would act with greater care in accepting the company of the opposite sex. There is not a young man of any trace of respectability that would be seen arm in arm with a drunken girl, says the Fertile Journal. It would be hard indeed to find a young man who would go promenading with a lady who is puffing a cigarette or squirting tobacco juice around on the side-walks. But it is very noticeable that girls have no hesitancy in in accepting of just such company, and many are even anxious for such opportunity. When the girls demand the same purity of character of the boys that the boys demand of the girls, society will be greatly refined. It rests with the young ladies of this land to bring about the greatest moral reform that ever swept the country.

Secretary Root's keynote speech at the Republican national convention was a graphic review of the history and progress of the Republican party and its achievements, says the Princeton Union. The great events of the last few years that have made the nation a world power, and that have dethroned despotism in Cuba and the Philippines and crowned liberty as a ruler are a great record of a great party. None the less creditable are the enactment of laws affecting the domestic affairs of our country, the impetus given to our home and foreign trade, the protection to our varied industries and to the trade of American farmers. Wise statesmanship has carefully guarded our foreign trade and relationship with the commercial nations, the Panama canal project has been successfully inaugerated, and a policy begun by McKinley and executed by President Roosevelt and the congress of the United States, has established for the nation a new era, the grandest in all its history. Elihu Root's speech will make an invincibe campaign document.

The "Minnesota Politics" man in the Minneapolis Journal sees a possibility of John A. Johnson, of St. Peter, becoming the Democratic candidate for governor and those who had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Johnson speak here last Monday will read the Journal's article with interest. Here is what it says: "Many people are anxious to see John A. Johnson, of St. Peter, rise to the situation and come out as a candidate for governor. The St. Peter editor is one of the strong men in the Democratic party of the state, with a good legislative record, and known to be conservative and clear-headed. He is a good debater, and his only disqualification is that he is not a man of wealth to contribute to the campaign, which is likely to be a fundless movement. Mr. Johnson has many republican friends who have already been urging him to get into the field. There is some talk of bringing him out as an independant candidate, without the name "Democrat," in order to draw more strongly from the Republican vote, and to allow Republicans to appear prominently in bis campaign. This, however, is a touchy subject with Democrats who will insist on having a candidate of their own, and if Johnson should make up his mind to run it would be doubtless with a straight party designation."

Death of Louis Barrette.

Crookston Journal: After a long illness extending over the past two months and caused by an attack of appendicitis, Louis Edmond Barrette the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barrette of this city, and one of the most popular young men in the city, passed away yesterday morning at Bethesda hospital. Louis who was a bright energetic young man of exemplary habits was born at Montreal, Canada, the former home of his parents, on September 29th, 1879 and was at the time of his death twenty-five years of age. He has made his home in this city with his parents during childhood and young manhood and was employed by the Kiewel Brewing Company as bookkeeper at the time of his sudden attack of appendicitis. An operation was performed but failed to do Mr. Barrette any benefit because of the seriousness of the case. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barrette, Louis' parents, who are old and respected citizens, Joseph, a brother, the proprietor of the Barrette harness shop, and Miss Marie, an only sister, remain to mourn his loss and will receive the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends and acquaintances throughout the valley.

County Fair In August.

Thief River Falls Press: The Fair Association this week received a large amount of advertising, including large lithographs and atttactive flags, for the fair this year. These will be posted shortly in town and the surrounding country and villages.

In 1902 this association was formed by a party of energetic business men of Thief River, encountering the usual difficulties in starting an enterprise of this kind, but nevertheless a fair exhibition was given. In 1903 the expectations of the management and patrons was far over-reached, and an excellent exhibition was given. In 1904 the management promises that all previous efforts will seem as nothing as compared with the fair this year and will be better than anything ever seen in these parts before, or, for that matter, in much larger and older communities. Great interest is being taken in the fair this year both by the farmers and the town people and the prospects, even at this early date, for a large attendance are bright. The farmers are enthusiastic over the success of last year, and a large agricultural and dairy exhibit can be looked for. The dates of the fair are August 10, 11, 12.

Guess It Did, Bro. Press.

Thief River Press: Red Lake Falls claims to have a hoodoo following their ball team. They further claim that they have an excellent club this year but that the said hoodoo will not let them win under any circumstances. This persistent hoodoo is likely to remain with them, however, when they meet the Indians next Monday.

Entertaining Fiction.

One advantage of reading a serial story in a daily newspaper is that an installment of convenient length is received every day that does not consume an undue amount of the reader's time. An installment of a high-grade serial story appears in every issue of The Chicago Record-Herald, a popular feature of that enterprizing Chicago daily. Among the successful stories which have recently been enjoyed by Record-Herald readers are "Soldiers of Fortune," by Richard Harding Davis; "The Thrall of Lief the Lucky," by Ottilie Liljencranz; "Tristram of Blent," by Anthony Hope; "When Knighthood Was in Flower," by Charles Major; "Alice of Old Vincennes," by Maurice Thompson, and "Graustark," by George B. McCutcheon. Every issue contains also a short illustrated "human interest" story on the editorial page. Readers of The Record-Herald can depend upon a never-failing source of pleasant entertainment in the noteworthy fiction that is always to be found in its columns.

Wiley Tindolph was down from Thief River Falls yesterday, and while he claimed that he was here on a business mission The Gazette hears that there was other reasons for his visit. It seems that because Wiley monopolized all the fair Red Lake Falls damsels at the ball game and up town here Monday, the report has been spread abroad at his home town that he was seriously considering entering the matrimonial market, and in order to square himself with the girls of his home city he came down to try and discover who gave him away. He blamed Helmuth Zaiser for it, but Helmuth denies the allegation, though he nevertheless glories at Wiley's predicament.

The Red Lake Falls band will likely be engaged for one or two day's playing at the Thief River fair to be held the 10th, 11th and 12th of next month. The south end of the county will turn out en masse if the weather proves favorable.

John Morgan, the Demoreratic heavy-weight of Thief River Falls, helped us celebrate the Fourth Monday. John is being groomed by his friends for the chairmanship of the Democratic county committee and he will likely be chosen.

Friends have received word from Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Argue, stating that they had immensely enjoyed their outing at Lake Superior, and were leaving for Chicago via the great lakes the first of the week, where they intend to visit with relatives for some little time.

K. J. Weeks was among the Fourth of July visitors from Thief River Falls, and did a little missionery work for the Red Lake county fair and also for his candidacy for the Republican Register of Deeds nomination. Mr. Weeks will make an active canvass of the county, and stands a good chance of being the choice of the Republicans.

Red Lake Falls is entertaining a large number of school marms this week, and will have them for guests during all of July. The summer school has attracted them from all parts of the Valley. The Gazette would say that if the presence of so much feminine beauty has had a tendency to scare the young men of town at first, girls, don't forsake us, for they will recover their equilibrium before the month is over.

B. Schosser is lying very low at his home in this city with paralysis, and it has been feared several times that the end was near. He was paralyzed several years ago, and while he has been able to be around most of the time, he has failed constantly, and the present attack has been unusually severe, so that fears have been entertained as to his recovery. The friends of the family will hope that the fears are groundless, and that the old gentleman will again recover his accustomed health.

An after-day celebration of July fourth furnished amusement for a large number of people Tuesday evening, at which time a purse was made up and the entire remaining stock of fireworks at Persons' confectionery bought up and shot off for the amusement of the crowd. One of the crowd attempted to hold a large sky-rocket in his hand and light it, but when the long stream of fire came out things got too hot for comfort and he let go of the stick and the rocket on becoming released took a journey through a large plate glass at Delorme & St. Marie's store and exploded inside, setting fire to the decorations in the window. Several people were on hand at once and put out the blaze before any great damage was done, and the rest of the celebration was pulled off without incident.

Mrs. Henry Kaufer entertained a few friends at dinner Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs L. E. Erickson went down to Fertile Saturday and visited with friends until yesterday.

Mankato Commercial College will enroll 200 students Sept. 5 Will you be one of them? It will pay you.

Daniel Shaw, one of the active Thief River Falls hustlers, celebrated with the Red Lake Falls people Munday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Odett, of Crookston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Mikkelson over the Fourth.

When you contemplate buying that new pipe call and see the swell new line we have just added.—J. B. Cigar company.

Miss Vallie Moore of Hillsboro, North Dakota, arrived in the city Saturday, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Tracy.

Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar and children came down from Thief River Falls Saturday and were guests at the home of W. A. Schreiter until Tuesday.

Mesdames Albert Brunelle and Joseph Belair went down to Crookston last evening to take in the night show of Ringling Brothers' mammoth circus.

The Misses Marie and Clare Swisher returned to their home at Minneapolis last Saturday, having spent ten days at the Frank E. Hunt home in this city.

Gary Graphic: M. E. Todd was down from Wylie Wednesday nigth. His little daughter has been here for the last two weeks on a visit with her aunt, Mrs. P. Schulstad..

Carl Krueger went down to Crookston Tuesday evening, and spent yesterday feeding peanuts to the Ringling elephants and drinking red lemonade. He returned today, and reports a great time.

Editors Ives, of the St. Hilaire Spectator, and J. A. McDonald, of the Thief River Falls Review, represented the county press at Red Lake Falls' successful Fourth of July celebration Monday, and from appearances enjoyed themselves immensely.

The balance of the uniforms ordered by the band management failed to arrive in time for the Fourth, but they are expected here most any day now. The band, twenty-eight strong and fully uniformed, will make a neat appearance when they appear before the public.

George H. Tibbetts came up from Flandreau last Friday to spend the Fourth with his family here. Mr. Tibbetts reports himself as well, and says he has met with success in his work at Flandreau. The Indian school at that place is one of the largest in the west, and the corps of instructors employed by the government is a large one.

"Mock Sad Alli" and his company came in on the Great Northern yesterday and will hold forth at the Metropolitan tonight and Friday. The company was billed for St. Hilaire, but on account of the large number of people from there attending the circus at Crookston last evening he decided to cancel his dates. The troupe is said to be first class, and will no doubt do a good business.

Crookston Journal: Oscar Fredricks, the genial Scandia American bank bookkeeper, attempted in vain the morning of the Fourth to persuade his friends that he intended to celebrate at Warren. A close tab was kept on his movements and when he boarded the train for Red Lake Falls which is his usual destination when traveling for pleasure, he had to own up that no place in the valley contains the attractions for him that Red Lake Falls does.

Red Lake Falls people have been treated to an unusual sight at the Gonigam real estate office this week. and one that cannot often be seen in this country at this time of the year. It was a large bunch of this year's wheat all headed out, and was pulled from the field of Lewis Lapiere last Saturday. The stocks stand about four feet high and have well developed heads on an average of five inches long which are well filled and give evidence of being the advance agents of one of the biggest crops that the valley has ever seen.

The lath mill in the St. Hilaire plant of the Crookston Lumber company was idle during the first few days of the week because of a strike among the lathers who wanted more pay. The men employed in the lath mill were getting but $2 and $2.25 per day and they asked for $2.50 and $2.75. Their request for a raise being denied they all walked out and the stock has been piled while an endeavor was made to secure a new crew. Several men from the Crookston plant, who have been out of work during the past two weeks, were sent up and the mill started yesterday. The remainder of the plant is being worked to the utmost and a large quantity of lumber is being turned out daily. St. Hilaire is recovering from the lull which was manifested at the opening of the season because of the plant's idleness, and the merry toot of the mill whistle and jingling of dinner pails is pleasing to residents.

The genial Bob Fritz, the most enthusiastic baseball "fan" in Northern Minnesota was noticed among the crowd cheering the Thief River Falls team to victory here Monday. If there is a ball game within a radius of a hundred miles that Bob can get to it is a safe bet that he will be there, and as a rooter he has no equals in this section.

The ladies society of St. Mary's church served dinner and supper in the Arthur Zaiser building July 4, and furnished two of the nicest meals ever set before a hungry public. For at least two hours, both noon and night, their tables were lined with people, and 500 were fed at the two meals, making the receipts of the day $125. The ladies certainly deserve the thanks of St. Mary's congregation for the good work they have done during the present summer, as their efforts have substantially increased the church treasury.

One of the side amusements on the the Fourth of July, in which only a crowd of enthusiasts participated, were the games of lawn tennis between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls players on the local tennis courts, and in all the events the Red Lake Falls representatives easily carried off the honors. The doubles were between Messrs. Harry Dobner and W. A. Murphy, of Thief River, and R. E. Wyer and Rev. H. W. Knox, for Red Lake Falls, which resulted in a victories for Messrs. Wyer and Knox with scores of 9-7; 6-3. The singles were between Messrs. Wyer and Dobner, Wyer winning by scores of 6 2; 6-2. The contests were very good ones, and were enjoyed by the witnesses.

ing in his heart. Her voice fell still lower, and two heavy tears rolled down her cheeks. "It was signed," she whispered, "it was signed—'H. Fishee.'"

He began to tremble from head to foot. There was a long silence. She had turned full away from him. When he spoke his voice was as low as hers, and he spoke as slowly as she had. "You mean—then—then it was—you?"

"Yes."

"You!"

"Yes."

"And you—you have—you have been here all the time?"

"All—all except the week—you were—hurt."

The bright veil that wrapped them was drawn away, and they stood in the quiet, gathering dusk. He tried to loosen his neckband; it seemed to be choking him. "I—I can't—I don't comprehend it. I am trying to realize what it all means."

"You!" he said. "You!"

"It means nothing," she answered.

"There was an editorial yesterday," he said, "an editorial that I thought was about Rodney McCune. Did you write it?"

"Yes."

"It was about—me—wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"It said—it said that—that I had won the—the—love of every person in Carlow county."

Suddenly she found her voice. "Do not misunderstand me," she said rapidly. "I have done the little that I have done out of gratitude." She faced him now, but without meeting his eyes. "I owed you more gratitude than a woman ever owed a man before, I think, and I would have died to pay a part of it."

"What gratitude did you owe me?"

"What gratitude? For what you did for my father."

"I have never seen your father in my life."

"Listen. My father is a gentle old man with white hair and kind eyes. My name is my uncle's. He and my aunt have been good to me as a father and mother since I was seven years old, and they gave me their name by law, and I lived with them. My father came to see me once a year; I never came to see him. He always told me everything was well with him, that his life was happy, and I thought it was easier for him not having me to take care of, he has been so poor ever since I was a child. Once he lost the little he had left to him in the world, his only way of making his living. He had no friends; he was hungry and desperate, and he wandered. I was dancing and going about wearing jewels—only I did not know. All the time the brave heart wrote me happy letters. I should have known, for there was one who did and who saved him. When at last I came to see my father he told me—he had written of his idol before, but it was not till I came that he told it all to me. Do you know what I felt? While his daughter was dancing cotillions a stranger had taken his hand and—and"— A sob rose in her throat and checked her utterance for a moment, but she threw up her head proudly. "Gratitude, Mr. Harkless!" she cried. "I am James Fishee's daughter!"

He fell back from the bench with a sharp exclamation and stared at her through the gray twilight. She went on hurriedly, still not looking at him. "I wanted to do something to show you that I could be ashamed of my vile neglect of him—something to show you his daughter could be grateful—and it has been such dear, happy work, the little I have done, that it seems, after all, that I have done it for love of myself. It is what I had always wanted to do—to earn a living for myself, to live with my father. When I came here, my aunt and uncle were terribly afraid I would stay with him. It was to prevent this that they determined to go abroad, and my father said I must go back to them. Then you were—were hurt, and he needed me so much he let me stay. When you—when you told me"—she broke off with a strange, fluttering, half inarticulate little laugh that was half tears and then resumed in another tone—"when you told me you cared that night—that night of the storm—how could I be sure? It had been only two days, you see, and even if I could have been sure of myself—why, I couldn't have told you. Oh, I had so brazenly thrown myself at your head time and again those two days in my—my worship of your goodness to my father and my excitement in recognizing in his friend the hero of my girlhood that you had every right to think I cared; but if—but if I had—if I had—loved you with my whole soul I could not have—why, no woman could have—I mean the sort of girl I am—couldn't have admitted it—must have denied it. Do you think that when I could have answered 'Yes' even if I had wanted to—even if I had been sure of myself? And now"— Her voice sank again to a whisper. "And now"—

"And now?" he said tremulously. She gave a hurried glance from right to left and from left to right, like one in terror seeking a way of escape; she gathered her skirts in her hand as if to run into the garden, but suddenly she turned and ran to him. She threw her arms about his neck and kissed him on the forehead.

When they heard the judge calling from the orchard they went back through the garden toward the house. It was dark. The whitest asters were but gray splotches. There was no one in the orchard. Briscoe had gone indoors.

"Did you know you are to drive me into town in the phaeton for the fireworks?" she asked.

"Fireworks?"

"Yes. The great Harkless has come home." Even in the darkness he could see the look the vision had given him when the barouche turned into the square. She smiled upon him and said, "All afternoon I was wishing I could have been your mother."

He clasped her hand more tightly. "This wonderful world!" he cried. "Yesterday I had a doctor—a doctor to cure me of lovesickness!"

After a time they had proceeded a little nearer the house. "We must hurry," she said. "I am sure they have been waiting for us." This was true; they had.

From the dining room came laughter and hearty voices, and the windows were bright with the light of many lamps. By and by they stood just outside the patch of light that fell from one of the windows.

"Look!" said Helen. "Aren't they good, dear people?"

"The beautiful people!" he answered.

THE END.

ON THE FIRST BALLOT

FRIENDS OF JUDGE PARKER SAY HE WILL BE NOMINATED BY DEMOCRATS.

OPPOSITION IS AT SEA, BEING UNABLE TO AGREE ON ANY ONE CANDIDATE.

PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATION DECIDES TO VOTE AS A UNIT FOR NEW YORKER.

St. Louis, July 5.—Parker on the second ballot, perhaps on the first. That is now the claim of the men who are in charge of the political affairs of the New York candidate. All day long the Parker opponents have tried to perfect a programme which would prolong the balloting and afford an opportunity to name another candidate, but apparently they have not succeeded. Many combinations have been suggested, but so far they seem to have proven incapable of being assembled into shape sufficiently substantial to show the independent and uninstructed delegates how another candidate can be named. Men who are supposed to hold the balance of power have asked the Parker opponents to say what would be done after Parker had been put out of the race, but they say they as yet have received no satisfactory answer.

The keystone of the anti-Parker arch fell last night and the delegation of Pennsylvania, by a vote of fifty-seven to five, six not voting, decided to cast its sixty-eight votes as a unit for Judge Parker on the first ballot. This seems to be the beginning of the end.

Gorman, Gray and Cleveland have been suggested. But no man is prepared to give assurances that either could receive the nomination. The mention of Cleveland has a tendency in some quarters to solidify the Parker strength, for many delegates say they do not want to take even the slightest chance of allowing Cleveland a fourth nomination.

Gorman Boom Too Late.

While there is a friendly feeling for Gorman among the Southern delegates, including those who are under instructions or bound by the unit rule to vote for Parker, yet the predominant expression from this element is that the effort now making in behalf of the Maryland senator is too late.

They also point to the fact that when delegates were being chosen Gorman gave no sign that he desired the nomination. It is too much to expect, they say, that delegates who were chosen as Parker men, whether under instructions or not, will desert him now or as long as there is a possibility of securing his nomination.

The opposition to Judge Parker in its effort to tighten the lines and make sure of holding the delegations now counted as opposed to him, brought out two new candidates in the persons of Former Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania and General Miles. The opposition leaders appreciate to the utmost the difficulty of preventing a stampede to Parker should he lead become pronouncedly manifest, but they are counting upon doing this by appealing to the local pride of the different favorite son delegations to hold on as long as possible.

No announcement has been given out from Senator Gorman, but his position as a conditional candidate has, however, become so well known that no formal statement from him is necessary. His friends still expect to press his candidacy if Parker fails of success, and in the meantime they will do all they can to bring about such a situation.

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

One cannot say too much in favor of that wonderful medicine." This remedy is for sale by Schreiter's Drug Store.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

St. Paul, July 2.—The six months' ante-convention fight between Dunn and Collins for the Republican gubernatorial nomination has ended in the selection of the former by acclamation at the end of a two-day session of the state convention.

This unexpected denouement was the result of the vote on the report of the credentials committee, by which the convention seated the Dunn delegation from Hennepin county as recommended by a minority of the committee. The vote on unseating the Collins men was 622½ to 450½, and friends of the judge promptly acknowledged their defeat. No name except that of Dunn was presented to the convention. The managers of Judge Collins' campaign and the representatives of Frank M. Eddy moved that Mr. Dunn should be named by acclamation.

The convention was remarkable for the time it required to get itself in shape to do business. Once the committee on credentials reported there was action, rapid and certain.

Beginning at 10 o'clock Thursday the convention killed time until late Friday afternoon, when the credentials committee made its appearance and its report, which, after amendments in the interest of the Dunn contingent, was adopted by the convention.

About 5 o'clock in the afternoon the convention got down to work and unseated the Hennepin delegates. From that time on there was no dispute as to the control of the convention.

REAL WORK OF CONVENTION RAPIDLY DISPOSED OF.

The nomination of judges of the supreme court was the first thing on the programme after settling the contest for seats. John A. Lovely, Calvin L. Brown, Charles L. Lewis and Charles B. Elliott were placed in nomination for the term beginning Jan. 1, 1906. The vote resulted: Brown 1,099, Lewis 974, Elliott 739, Lovely 717. The first three were nominated.

For the term beginning Jan. 1, 1905, E. A. Jaggard, Wallace B. Douglas and D. B. Searle were placed in nomination. Jaggard was nominated, the vote resulting: Jaggard 637, Douglas 277, Searle 351.

The nomination of a candidate for governor was next in order and James A. Peterson presented the name of Robert C. Dunn. James A. Martin, Collins' manager, moved that the nomination be made by acclamation and the proposition was carried amid a storm of applause.

Lieutenant Governor Jones was renominated by acclamation, being placed in nomination by Thomas H. Girling of Minneapolis.

Peter E. Hanson of Litchfield was renominated for secretary of state by acclamation. Then came a roll call for the reason there were three candidates for state treasurer—Julius H. Block of St. Peter, Louis G. Vogel of New Ulm and P. J. Schwarg of Dodge Center. The vote was: Block 958, Vogel 60, Schwarg 161.

During the roll call Mr. Dunn was escorted to the hall and was greeted by storms of applause. He sat on the platform until the call was completed, when he spoke briefly, thanking the convention for the honor conferred on him.

W. J. Donahower of St. Paul did not wait for the call of the roll to be concluded before he pulled out of the race for attorney general in favor of E. T. Young of Appleton, his opponent, and made the nomination unanimous. The vote was 784 to 394 when Mr. Donahower quit. Then came the battle of the night. It was about midnight when the convention took up the subject of railroad commissioners. There were many candidates for the two places, as follows:

A. D. Gray of Fillmore, J. G. Miller of Two Harbors, Ira B. Mills of Moorhead, W. E. Young of Mankato, E. J. Herrenger of Ada, W. A. Hammond of St. Paul, A. T. Stebbins of Rochester and E. G. Valentine of Breckenridge. Messrs. Mills and Young were nominated.

Presidential electors were then chosen and the convention, at 2 a. m., adjourned.

The platform adopted unanimously affirms the platform of the national Republican convention at Chicago; commends the administrations of President Roosevelt and Governor Van Sant and endorses the work of the state congressional delegation. Senator Clapp is nominated for re-election.

The Bank of Red Lake Falls has installed a large combination steel filing cabinet, safety deposit drawers and book shelf, which is the latest and most modern device made. The cabinet contains a large number of safety deposit boxes, numerous recesses for filing papers, etc., and roomy shelves for their abstract and other books. The cabinet is a fine one, and makes an excellent addition to the fixtures of the bank.

For the mother who is puzzled to provide novel and attractive forms of holiday and birthday entertainments for the little ones an article on Children's Parties, in The Delineator for August, will be of value. In the same number are excellent cookery suggestions in the form of An "Island" Seaside Dinner and many recipes of dainty and appetizing dishes for hot days. Recommendations for hot-weather house-keeping will also prove useful.

Crookston entertained one of the largest crowds in her history yesterday, when Ringling Brothers World's Greatest Shows gave two performances to immense numbers of people. Every town in the Valley was well represented, and to illustrate the number that turned out Conductor Steve Withey told The Gazette that on his train from Fargo to Crookston yesterday there were over 950 passengers, and all were packed in six coaches. Ringling Brothers have a great reputation and always draw good crowds to their shows.

Crookston Journal: Supt. E. E. McIntyre, of the Crookston schools, left for Red Lake Falls the morning of the Fourth and the next morning began the organization of the Red Lake county summer school, which will be attended by several hundred Polk county, northern Minnesota teachers and pupils anxious to qualify for examinations. Prof. McIntyre arrived at the Falls in time to take part in the Fourth of July festivities and was heartily received by the Red Lake Falls people. The term of summer school will continue during the next six weeks and Prof. McIntyre will be very busy with the immense amount of work attached to the polling off of a successful term.

SWALLOW NOMINATED

PENNSYLVANIAN CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT ON THE PROHIBITION TICKET.

Indianapolis, July 1.—Prohibitionists of the United States Thursday nominated Silas C. Swallow of Pennsylvania for president and George W. Carroll of Texas for vice president.

General Miles put an end to the movement to nominate him for president by sending J. G. Woolley a telegram which reached Indianapolis shortly after noon, asking that his name be not presented. The movement to Mr. Swallow was unanimous, no other name being considered.

The platform was adopted without argument after a long deadlock in the resolutions committee. It was described by I. H. Amos of Oregon, secretary of the resolutions committee, as the broadest platform ever placed before the country by the party. In addition to planks on the liquor question it declares the party to be in favor of international arbitration, a suffrage law based on mental and moral qualifications, uniform laws for the country and dependencies, popular election of senators, civil service extension and the initiative and referendum.

The trust question was recognized by a demand for a rigid application of the principles of justice to all organizations of capital and labor. A reform of divorce laws is demanded and polygamy is denounced.

Miners Strike for More Pay.

Two Harbors, Minn., July 4.—The miners and trammers employed at the Rates mine near the village of Buhl have made demands for an increase of pay from $1.75 to $2 a day and have quit work in a body because of the refusal to grant the request. The strike was inaugurated by the trammers and the miners went out in sympathy.

ATTENDANCE IS SMALL.

Less Than Two Hundred Delegates Attend Populist Convention.

Springfield, Ill., July 5.—The 500 or 600 delegates that were expected to attend the Populist national convention in this city Monday did not put in an appearance, and when the convention was called to order in the afternoon there were fewer than 200 delegates in the hall. The citizens of Springfield took no interest in the convention and there were not more than seventy-five persons present besides the delegates. Mayor Devereaux did not welcome the Populists nor did he send a representative or an explanation of his absence.

Only twenty-three states were represented in the convention, which was called to order at 1:43 p. m. by Vice Chairman J. H. Edmiston of Nebraska, and the call for the convention was read by J. A. Parker of Kentucky. Ex-Congressman L. H. Welles of Iowa was made temporary chairman and Charles Q. de France of Nebraska temporary secretary. The convention then listened to addresses by Senator W. V. Allen of Nebraska and Rev. A. N. Nelson of St. Louis.

The various committees were then appointed. J. H. Edmiston is chairman of the resolutions committee, which includes J. P. Norman, Iowa; Mrs. Marian Todd, Michigan; William Clancy, Montana; Allie Reid, South Dakota; Robert Schilling, Wisconsin.

SEVERAL DAYS' GRIND

County Commissioners Hold Busy July Session—Liquor Licenses Granted and Other Business Done.

The Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county met at the Auditor's office here Monday, and proceeded to convene in regular July session for the transaction of such business as was to come before them.

The first matter taken up was the granting of licenses to H. L. Veigel, W. G. Brown and Erick Iverson to sell intoxicating liquors at the new town on section 9 in Emardville. The applications were opposed by a petition signed by twenty-five residents of Emardville, but the commissioners after considering the matter granted the licenses over the remonstrance.

The application of Remi Lefaive to sell intoxicating liquors on section 14, town of Poplar River, was granted, no remonstrance being entered.

The application of the town of Terrebonne for aid in reconstructing the bridge over the Clearwater river at that place, was rejected, but later a contract was entered into with Messrs. Kankel & Zieglar, the Terrebonne millers, to repair the bridge for the sum of $305. The repairs will come to considerable more than this, and the balance of the expense will be borne by Messrs. Kankel & Zieglar. The enterprise shown by these popular millers is commendable, and the people of that town should be grateful to them indeed.

A supplemental list of names for petit jurors was drawn and filed with the Clerk of Courts.

The petition of Wm. Demann and others for a new school district in the towns of Lake Pleasant and Terrebonne was granted. There was a great deal of opposition to this petition, and the matter is fully told of in another column.

The board set aside an appropriation of $250 to aid the Red Lake County Agricultural association.

The petition of Peter Matthies to be set off from school district 112 to district 88 was laid over until next week.

Petition of Ernest Hilce to be set off from district 153 to district 173 in Polk county was granted.

River Falls township applied for an appropriation from the road and bridge fund, which was laid on the table.

The matter of tax levy for 1904 was taken up, and a resolution passed stating that in the opinion of the board $24,000 would be needed for current expenses, to be divided as follows: County revenue, $15,000; poor, $.500; road and bridge, $3500; court house and jail, $1000; bond and interest, $3000; school 1 mill. The personal property tax list was gone over and revised, those not thought collectable being stricken out, and others turned over to the clerk with orders to issue citations.

The applications of G. Longtin and Paul I. D. Ostby for tax abatement were recommended for approval, and applications of Mary Boe and Lars Lian for abatement were rejected.

A resolution was passed directing the county attorney to dismiss the appeal in the matter of John Magnussen and others for new ditch in towns of Rocksbury and fraction.

Seventy-five dollars was appropriated for the road and bridge fund to aid Lake Pleasant township, and a like amount to aid town of Red Lake Falls in constructing bridge across Badger Creek between sections 1 in Lake Pleasant and 36 in Red Lake Falls.

The sum of $150 was transferred from the revenue fund to the incidental expense fund.

The board then adjourned until next Friday, July 22.

OPPOSE NEW DISTRICT

Residents of Affcted School Districts Object to Formation of the Proposed District in Red Lake county.

A "school district" fight of a rosy hue was on at the court house Tuesday morning, and from present indications the District Court will have to prove the mediator in the matter yet.

A regularly drawn up and signed petition was presented to the board asking that a new school district be formed in Lake Pleasant and Terrebonne townships, and that in the formation parts of five districts be taken to make the new one. Districts No. 4, 27, 81, 32 and 80 being the ones drawn on.

The hearing was set for Tuesday morning, and when the matter was celled about twenty residents of that neighborhoood were on hand to oppose its organization by the board. Among the number were J. H. Glass, Paul Schoenauer, Joseph Duchame, Mose Duchame, Carisse Dupont and a number of others, and each one presented his argument why the district should not be established. The other side was represented by W. C. L. Demann and the argument waxed warm for an hour or more, the Board finally ordering the drstrict established. The aggrieved parties then and there gave notice that an appeal from their decision would be taken to the District Court, and it is likely that this the way the matter will have to be settled.

The Gazette does not pretend to know which side is right or which side is wrong but with the rest of the people regrets that differences of this character have to arise. Both sides will put up a good case in the court, and there can be no question but what the right side will win.

SALE POSTPONED.

Balance of Reservation Land to Be Sold October 3.

The auction sale of the land on the Red Lake Indian reservation in Minnesota terminates at Thief River Falls today, after having been conducted since June 20, and a postponement has been made until Monday, October 3, at which time the balance of the land will be placed on sale at Crookston, and it is expected that it will all be disposed of before the sale closes.

The crowd that has been in attendance at the sale at Thief River Falls has been dissappointing to the people there, and only about half the number that was expected were in attendance.

This is accounted for from the fact that at least two other reservations in this part of the country are being opened this year, and in each case the particular railroad running to the points nearest the land has taken great pains to advertise the openings extensively in the east.

The remainder of the Red Lake land will be sold at Crookston in October, and the papers of that town are already claiming that it will be a big affair, and that the government made a serious mistake in not holding the original sale there. The people of the Valley are too familiar with Crookston methods, however, to believe anything of that sort, and do not take any stock in the claims made by that town.

Thief River Falls was the logical place for the sale, and because it was not as largely attended as it should have been is no reason for the Crookston papers claiming that conditions would have been different had the sale been held there.

The fact that the crowd wasn't in evidence is to be deplored, but our neighboring city certainly entertained those that did come in first-class shape.

DEATH OF AGED RESIDENT.

B. Schusser Succumbs to Final Attack of Paralysis.

At his home in this city Thursday afternoon of last week occured the death of Barhelomew Schusser, an old and respected resident of Red Lake Falls, after an illness of seven or eight months with an attack of paralysis.

Until last fall Mr. Schusser had been in excellent health, and until he was striken with the fatal illness had never known a sick day. In November he felt the first attack, and since that time has failed rapidly, the final stroke early last week resulting in his death.

Deceased was a man of good habits and enjoyed the respects and confidence of the people, and the news of his death was received with deep regrets by a multitude of friends.

Barthelomew Schusser was born in Austria in 1838 and emigrated to this county in 1867, settling in western Wisconsin and farming there until 18 years ago, when he followed the rush further west and came to Red Lake Falls, having resided here continuously since that time.

He built him a good home, and was always considered one of the solid citizens of the city. During his residenco here he held several important positions, and filled them all with credit to himself and to his employers.

Deceased leaves a wife and family of eight grown children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. The children are Joseph, Mrs. Wm. Lennon, Miss Sophia and Carl, of this city, Mrs. Paul Holzknecht, of Missoula, Mont., Michael, of Bemidji, Mrs. Pat Roark and Anthony Schusser, of Thief River Falls, all of whom were at the bedside of their father when the end came, with the exception of Mrs. Holzknecht.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank the many kind friends who generously assisted us during the last illness of our husband and father.—Mrs. B. Schusser and family.

Have the Dog Ready.

Inter-Lake Tribune: With the prospect of a good crop, the country will soon be teeming with peddlers and fakirs of every description. There will be the grocery peddler with the glib tongue, who will tell the farmer how he has been robbed by the village merchant; also will appear the steel range peddlar and the cloth peddler, who will desire to fit out the farmer's family with goods for clothing for a year, and we believe in large quantities he [illegible] save the purchaser many dollars. After these have visited you, if your purse is not drained and you are not fully supplied, you can buy an assortment of laces, combs, brushes and various articles which you do not need, but which you can buy from the Dago peddler who roams up and down the country in his one horse shay. But the Tribune would urge its farmer readers to discourage the peddler. From the very nature of his business he is an irresponsible person. He is a stranger and does business on the move, and should you desire him to correct an error or make good a flaw in the wares he has sold you, you may look in vain for his shop on wheels, which has rolled down the road over the hill, and is lost to view forever. He pays no taxes to help with your roads and the schools, and assists in no manner to help maintain your churches and various public institutions. He is a business outcast through choice of his own, and depends on duping unsuspecting people to pay his way and fatten his purse. Let us then trade with dealers who live like men, who are a part of the social and commercial life of the community, who are established and responsible.

DRIVE IS HELD UP.

Low Water In Clearwater Prevents Progress.

Crookston Journal: Manager Packer, of the Clearwater logging company, reports the hanging up of the big 40 million drive, headed for the big mill in this city a short distance above Red Lake Falls. As a result, the crew of a hundred and fifty men are busily engaged in making arrangements for the sudden rush of water which has been held back at Plummer's dam and other up river points and which will lift the logs over the low sand bars of the Clearwater and into the Red Lake river.

A hundred and fifty drivers are employed on the large drive and four large wannagans are utilized in the housing of the crew. Red Lake river is at a very good driving stage because of the exceedingly high level of the lake this summer. Clearwater, however, is low and the logging company is well satisfied in getting the drive down so successfully.

Several weeks will be required on the down river trip from Red Lake Falls and the rear end wannagans will probable reach the city about the first of August. The drivers will be well supplied with money upon reaching this city and will doubtless go in for their usual good time and jollification. They will have nearly all of their pay coming having drawn very little on the trip down river and should liven things up considerable in the city.

New Depot at Thief River.

Thief River News: The Great Northern has decided to remove its depot to a more central point in this city and last week purchased property for this purpose. The depot is to be located upon the west side of Main avenue between the residence of Phil Zeh and the spur track and enough ground for yards in that vicinity has been purchased. The spur track will be used and trains will have to back into the city from the main line. The present depot will be removed to some point north of here and a new one constructed of sandstone—one that will be a credit to the city and large enough to accomodate the increasing business at this point.

The Great Pan-American Shows.

Connected with The Great Pan-American Shows there is in all probability the grandest and greatest Hippodrome ever seen on any ellipse since Rome exploited the first. Scores of fearless horsemen and horsewomen, teams of horses, blooded and in their prime: Arabian and Kentucky thoroughbreds, fleet of foot and handsome. There are Roman, Standing and Chariot races, two and four horse there are Steeplechases, Hurdle races, Flat, Trotting, Racking, and Running Races: there are Pig and Pole, Sack and Wheelborrow, Man vs. horse, Whippet Dog, Indian vs. Indian Pony, Obstacle, Pony and Monkey, Clown, Mule and Goat races, Elephant and camel, Deer and Hound, Man vs. Man and Woman vs. Woman races. In a word, all kinds of races ever run will be duplicated and many novel ones introduced at the Great Pan-American Shows at Red Lake Falls on Saturday, July 16.

Wait.

When trouble is brewing, keep still. When slander is getting on his legs, keep still. When your feelings are hurt, keep still, till you recover from your excitement, at any rate. Things look differently through an unagitated eye. In a commotion once I wrote a letter and sent it and wished I had not. In my later years I had another commotion, and wrote a long letter: but life rubbed a little sense into me and I kept the letter in my pocket against the day when I could look it over without agitation and without tears. I was glad I did. Less and less it seemed necessary to send it. I was not sure it would do any hurt, but in my doubtfullness, I leaned to reticence, and eventually destroyed it. Time works wonders. Wait till you speak calmly, then you will not need to speak maybe. Silence is the most massive thing conceivable, sometimes. It is strength in very grandeur.—Dr. Burton.

HONOR BELOVED CITIZEN.

Rev Father Grandchamp Buried With Great Honor.

Crookston Times: Greater honor was never done to the departed than was done to Rev. Father Grandchamp Monday morning. The funeral services were held at St. Anne's church, and that edifice was not large enough by half to hold the people who came from all directions to pay honor to one who was loved and respected by all.

The services were very impressive. Rev. Father Corbett, of Duluth, spoke in English and the tribute paid to the dead by him was very beautiful but was not surpassed by the tribute paid in the French tongue by Rev. Father Fayolle, of Red Lake Falls, who was a close personal friend of the dead priest. When the addresses were concluded there was not a dry eye in the church, and the people had paid a just tribute to a great and good man.

Those who could not gain entrance to the church followed the remains to the cemetery. The procession was over a mile long. 150 teams being in line, and the services at the grave, participated in by 20 visiting priests, were very impressive.

No priest, who has been taken away in the prime of life and in the height of his usefulness ever received greater honor, from his parishioners and the general public than did Father Grandchamp. The business houses closed in the city generally and with one accord the masses did honor to one who was ever devoted to the welfare of the entire community.

DAIRY NOTES.

(From the Ada Index.)

One man should be in the silo from the start to the finish of the filling.

A cow that is a heavy milker enjoys having her milk drawn. It is a great relief to her.

The men who are today winning in dairy farming are the ones who believe in the business and are putting their lives to it.

We believe it is safe to say that at least three times the amount of stock can be kept on the same sized farm if the silo is used, as can be kept if dry feed is depended upon for roughage.

Who is the man who occupies the most prominent position in the country today? It is the farmer. Upon whom depends whether all lines of business shall be prospering or wandering? It is the farmer. Upon whom does the farmer depend? It is the weather man.

Never mix warm and cold milk or cream. This is grave mistake which can not be remedied, and will make a cream that will produce a very low grade of butter every time. Wait until the cream or milk is cold, then mix and you have a good article. Water should be used both winter and summer for cooling milk or cream.

As a supplement to pasture grass there is nothing that will give as satisfactory results as corn silage. It can be used the entire summer and the carrying capacity of the farm greatly increased no matter how busy you may be, or how inclement the weather, the necessary feed is always at hand, and the cows are not necessarily subjected to a few days of insufficient feed with a proportionate shrinkage in the milk yield.

Buttermakers who are consulted in the matter ought to use their influence toward inducing the manager to stick to a good commission house. It is a recognized fact that where this is done the butter can be handled more satisfactors to both buyer and seller but still this fact is often lost sight of. The practice of changing from one house to another, and dividing up the weekly shipments is not a profitable one and appears to be growing in favor among our creamery managers rather than otherwise. At least judging from the complaints registered by the receiver, the practice is heavily indulged in. If the buttermakers will but use their influence in the matter the evil may be largely remedied.

LAND SELLING CHEAPER.

Rush For Reservation Lands Is Practically Over.

The land sale is still going forward as heretofore although the crowds have materially decreased in size and frequently the sale lasts but a few minutes. Much of the land is not sold and the tracts disposed of do not go much above the minimum figure of $4 per acre, says the Thief River Falls Press.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the quarters near Germantown and Highlanding were disposed of at from $4 to $5.60, which figure is considerably below pre sale estimates.

Next Thursday, July 14th, is the last day of the sale unless it is decided to continue it for several weeks longer in order that bidders may pick up choice quarters passed over the first time. The tracts upon which are located Indian improvements are to be offered next Thursday, and are expected to go at a good round sum as many of the pieces are very fine and are admirably located.

Better To Advertise Prices.

We read in an exchange not long since, where the editor asserted, that if a certain person who purchased a bill of goods from a well known Chicago firm at a large discount from home trade, had come to his home merchant and offered him cash in advance, plus the freight from Chicago, he would have duplicated the order for him. We carefully looked the matter over, but failed to see where said merchant let the people know it. No, sir, and even worse, not a single line of advertising telling the people that he was in business there and yet expected the people to know what he would do. The masses of people are not mind readers, and have no means of knowing what a merchant will do unless he tells them.—Vernon Center News.

There is a world of truth in what the News says, and if the home merchant would take as much pains to let the people know that they can sell their goods as cheap as the Chicago house does, there would not be so many orders going away from home. —Kasson Republican.

Umbrella Language.

There is in an exchange, whose name we regret to say has gotten lost in the shuffle, a language of umbrellas, as of flowers. Place your umbrella in a rack and this will indicate that it will change owners. An umbrella carried over a woman, the man getting nothing but the drippings of the rain, signifies courtship. When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings it indicates marriage. To swing your umbrella over your head signifies, "I am making a nuisance of myself." To carry it at right angles under your arm indicates that an eye is to be lost by the man who follows. Opening an umbrella quickly will frighten a wild bull. To put a cotton umbrella by a silk one signifies, "Exchange is no robbery." To purchase an umbrella means, "I am not smart, but honest." To lend an umbrella indicates, "I am a fool." To return an umbrella means—well never mind what that means; nobody ever did that. To carry an umbrella just high enough to tear out men's eyes and knock off men's hats signifies, "I am a woman." To press an umbrella on your friend, saying, "Oh, do take it. I would much rather you would than not," signifies lying. To carry it from in the morning means "The rain will clear off,"

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Ten Years of Suffering.

"I wish to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mrs. Mettie Burge, of Martinsville, Va. "I suffered from chronic diarrhoea for ten years and during that time tried various medicines without obtaining any permanent relief. Last summer one of my children was taken with cholera morbus, and I procured a bottle of this remedy. Only two doses were required to give her entire relief. I then decided to try the medicine myself, and did not use all of one bottle before I was well and I have never since been troubled with that complaint. One cannot say too much in favor of that wonderful medicine." This remedy is for sale by Schreiter's Drug Store.

NAMED BY DEMOCRATS

JUDGE PARKER FOR PRESIDENT AND DAVIS OF WEST VIRGINIA FOR SECOND PLACE.

BOTH NOMINATIONS MADE UNANIMOUS AT THE END OF THE FIRST ROLL CALL.

SENSATION CAUSED BY PARKER'S DECLARATION IN FAVOR OF GOLD STANDARD.

St. Louis, July 10.—Alton B. Parker of New York for president and Henry G. Davis of West Virginia for vice president is the ticket named by the Democratic national convention. Davis' nomination was made at an early hour this morning after a four days' session of the convention. Both Parker and Davis were nominated on the first ballot, the nominations being made unanimous in each instance before the result of the ballot had been announced.

The sensation of the convention occurred during the final afternoon session. While the roll of states was being called for nomination for vice president Delegate Edward F. Sheehan received a telegram from Judge Parker stating plainly that the nominee believed in the gold standard and could only accept the nomination after so informing the convention. Only a thunderbolt launched at convention hall could have created consternation equal to that caused by the message. There was a suspension of business and a hurried conference between the leaders. When the convention reassembled there was some heated though not acrimonius debate. The result of this debate was a motion to advise Judge Parker that the convention was willing to abide by his reservation on the money question. Judge Parker's telegram to the convention was as follows:

"I regard the gold standard as firmly and irrevocably established and I shall act accordingly if the action of the convention today is ratified by the people. Inasmuch as the platform is silent on the subject I deem it necessary to make the communication to the convention for its consideration, as I should feel it my duty to decline the nomination except with that understanding."

The reply, adopted by a vote of 774 to 191, was as follows:

"The platform adopted by this convention is silent on the question of the monetary standard because it is not regarded by us as a possible issue in this campaign and only campaign issues were mentioned in the platform. Therefore there is nothing in the views expressed by you in the telegram just received which would preclude a man entertaining them from accepting a nomination on said platform.

OVATION FOR CLEVELAND.

Feature of First Day's Session of the Convention.

St. Louis, July 6.—The Democratic national convention met at noon, listened to an extended speech from Representative John Sharp Williams, its temporary chairman, appointed the committees necessary to perfect a permanent organization and adjourned. In a session lasting two hours and fifty minutes one striking incident overshadowed all other proceedings. That was the enthusiastic and prolonged cheering which greeted the name of Grover Cleveland. While the outburst which greeted the name of the former Democratic president before its last syllable had fallen from the lips of the temporary chairman was noteworthy in itself it was magnified by contrast to the greeting afforded the actual men who stood for all that has been opposed to Mr. Cleveland within the party during the past eight years. James K. Jones, chairman of the national committee, took his seat practically unnoticed, as did other noted lieutenants of the candidate of the past two national campaigns. Finally Mr. Bryan himself entered the hall and marched to his seat with the Nebraska delegation unheralded and unheeded.

The speech of Temporary Chairman Williams occupied an hour and forty minutes in delivery and covered all the issues before the country. Except for the demonstration caused by the mention of Cleveland's name the speech was received practically without interruption. The acoustic properties of the hall are bad and a large proportion of the audience were unable to hear the speaker.

At the conclusion of Mr. Williams' speech a roll call of states was had for membership on the various committees and, at 2:50, the convention adjourned for the day.

BRYAN IS DEFEATED.

Convention Turns Down His Report on Illinois Contest.

St. Louis, July 7.—The second day of the Democratic national convention was divided into two sessions, most of the time being spent in waiting for and discussing the report of the committee on credentials. During the day several speeches were made, chief of which was William J. Bryan's effort to overthrow the report of the credentials committee and seat contesting delegates from Illinois. The controversy was ended by the rejection of the minority report of the committee by a vote of 647 nays to 299 ayes.
